SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

If you add the maximum cargo space of the Audi 5000, the Volvo GLT Turbo and the BMW 733i, you get a total of 53.3 cubic feet.
Yet one Saab 3-door gives you 56.5 cubic feet of maximum cargo space.
As you can imagine, the Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat or make an impulsive buy at a tag sale.*
Only the Saab gives you this flexibility because only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down.
Others may claim that as an unfair advantage. But when you test drive a Saab, you'll agree it simply makes good sense. SAAB The most individual car ever built.

John & Son with you to point out and describe the sightings. It's always an exciting day. Pre-paid registration is required. Fee: $16 members; $19 non-members. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope, phone number and check to: SSNSC, Box 429, Norwell, 02061. For further information call 659-2559.

Vacation Week

Vacation Week for School Children: Parents - don't forget to register your children for all or some of the interesting vacation programs at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell taking place from Monday, April 15 through Friday, April 19. The programs include the wonderful worlds of spring animals, the pond, electricity, swamping, and bits and pieces. This is a great opportunity to enhance a child's joy in his natural world while learning about it. Programs are for children in Grades 1-3 and 4-6. For information and fees, call 659-2559. Pre-paid registration is required.

April Doings

Children in Grades 3-4 - Take A Hike on Saturday, April 13 from 1 to 3 p.m. Bring a small daypack and follow Priscilla Walsh of the Natural Science Center Education Staff to a local beaver dam; stop for a cool drink at the top of an esker; look for some 'wild' animals at the edge of a pond. Dress appropriately.

Fee: $3.50 members; $4.50 non-members. Pre-registration required. Call 659-2559 for further information.

Rock Tales

Rocks Tell Tales for the South Shore Natural Science Center on Saturday, April 20 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Add more pleasure to road trips by being able to 'read' the rocks.

Dr. Robert Boutellier, Professor of Geology, Bridgewater State College, will lead a geology trip from Rockport to the South Shore. Learn fascinating geological facts as Dr. Boutellier points out slickensides, sills, submerged coastlines and lots more. Carpool from the Natural Science Center - share expense. Bring lunch and wear warm clothes and sneakers. Fee: $15 members; $18 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further information, call 659-2559.

Pond in Spring

Neverending activity takes place in the Pond In Spring. On Saturday, April 20 from 1 to 3 p.m., children in Grades 3 to 6 can make exciting discoveries both in and around the pond. Water striders skate, turtles sunbathe and dragonfly nymphs climb. Dip nets and hand lenses are provided to aid in the many discoveries. Leader - Barbara Devine. Wear boots. Fee: $3.50 members; $4.50 non-members. Pregistration requested. For information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell just off Rte. 123 and is open seven days a week.

Cheese and butter program

The Social Service League of Cohasset will distribute government cheese and butter at the end of April. Recipients must demonstrate participation in any of the following in order to qualify: food stamp program, A.F.D.C., Welfare, S.S.I. (disability), Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, W.I.C., Veterans' Aid, or unemployment.

If you qualify, you must call the Social Service League office before April 19 in advance, at 383-0771 or 383-0821 to request the cheese and butter and arrange for pick up.

The Social Service League will consider scheduling a Diabetes Education Clinic, which would provide information in nutrition and physical aspects of Diabetes. If sufficient interest is received for the clinic, we will schedule it in June, 1985. Please call the office at 383-0771 or 383-0821 and let us know if you would be interested in attending.

Despite a 'licking' Coh. Chamber keeps ticking

For the many hours the planning board labored over the proposed zoning bylaw changes, they were probably matched in ambition and fervor by opponents to those plans.

In the end, Town Meeting voted. The majority of the bylaw changes were adopted, several with amendments attached. But the Chamber of Commerce, who fought just as strongly against the proposals, feels it was a challenge worthy of acceptance.

The members of this young organization are satisified they enlightened a populus which may have otherwise glanced away at some important issues.

"We may have taken a licking," Chamber President Fred Woods admits a week after the battle. "But I am satisified we did a good job. And I believe that if we hadn't brought some of these issues out, there would have been much less interest in Town Meeting."

Board of Directors Chairman Dan Leahy is not so quick to concede defeat on the many issues confronted by the Chamber. He does agree, however, that their greatest victory was a moral one, attracting more attention to the issues and helping to bring in a quorum at Town Meeting.

"At the very least, the Chamber provided a key element in generating citizen support and attendance at Town Meeting. The participation there was damn healthy. People went to Town Meeting with an opinion, and did not have to learn about an issue during the meeting. Everyone was talking about the issues. It was a truly democratic process, and no one can deny that that is not healthy," Leahy states.

Through conversations and meeting with selectmen and other town committees and boards, Chamber members were introduced several months ago to the government of the town. They were encouraged to participate and to provide input to the various municipal agencies.

"So we started to attend meetings. We were provided evidence that those proposing legislation for our town, were provided with no balanced opinion. We intend to provide some of that balance," Leahy explains.

A sub committee of eight or nine members researched the proposed bylaw changes for the past four months. Background information was attained through the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, surrounding towns and the local library. "The entire time, however, we were always trying to resolve the issues in the best interest of the entire town," he adds.

"The Chamber members are residents first, and businessmen second. We are in this town 24 hours a

Will our vote keep rail on track?

It was a landslide victory for the proposed South Shore commuter rail. In its first test of public opinion, the railroad which has laid dormant through the backyards of Cohasset for the past 20 years, won overwhelming support here.

And Senator William Golden, who in his freshman year as this district's senator has clashed head-on with state officials to seek alternative transportation for the South Shore, remains cautiously optimistic about the chances of reviving the Greenbush line.

It is just the beginning of the referenda questions which will be included in local election ballots throughout that Greenbush region, including Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield, and Duxbury. And although this was just the beginning, Sen. Golden said the favorable results "are very encouraging."

Sen. Golden, who actually grew up at 417 North Main Street with the Greenbush train tracks 100 feet from his home, had personally requested that the four referenda questions be included on the municipal election ballots. Cohasset's election Saturday provided the referendum with its first test case.

"It was a strong showing of support, which I have always believed was one alternative method of transportation on the South Shore and a balanced part of a multi-mobil system for the South Shore," he said this week.

Although Cohasset's support of the Greenbush revival is a positive beginning, Sen. Golden candidly admits the railroad has far to travel before it becomes reality. And he cautiously noted that just because one community acknowledges its support, that enthusiasm is not necessarily carried into an adjacent town.

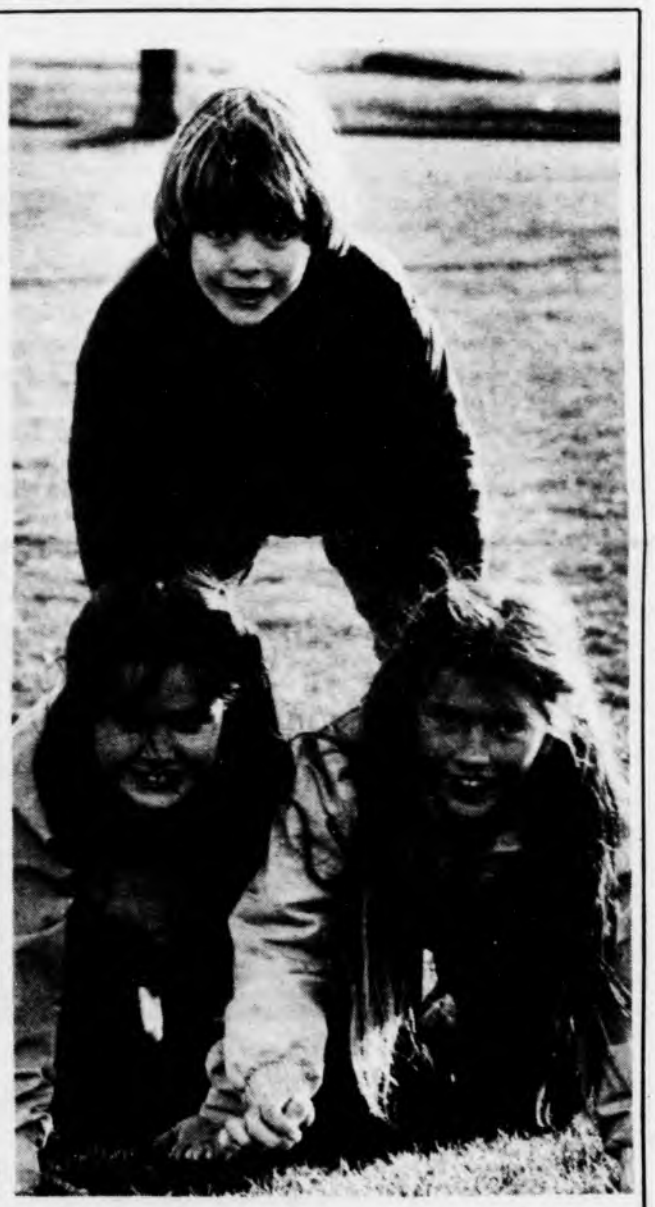
"One thing I am sure of," he added, "each community will have its own individual perspective."

But Cohasset's vote of support is exactly what we need to demonstrate convincingly to the administration that there is strong support for an alternative method of transportation from the South Shore," he continued.

Wednesday night, Sen. Golden was scheduled to participate in a regional transportation forum in Hingham. The Greenbush revival was slated to be the main topic of discussion at that multi-town meeting.

"It will be very interesting to see if the other towns show as strong support," Sen. Golden noted.

The four referenda questions were developed by Sen. Golden to precipitate public participation. As he views it, "a real opportunity for the South Shore to participate in public policy making, an opportunity for once, to formulate a transportation service, not have one imposed upon the residents of this area."



The Weymouth resident continued, "I am very familiar with the Greenbush line. For us, it was a part of life in Cohasset and not a nuisance. But the trains have been gone for years now and I don't know how families there now view it. This is a chance to explore all alternatives and see what all South Shore residents prefer."

By a wide margin, 1192 to 266, Cohasset voters said they wanted the Greenbush railroad line resurrected. And somewhat surprisingly, they voted 751-587 to have the line come all the way into Scituate. An alternative termination point suggested by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was that the tracks stop either at the Hingham Shipyard or in the Wompatuck State Park annex, was thus defeated by the local voters.

More than 1000 Cohasset residents said they would use the rail service if it is restored in their community. Objections totaled 349.

As to whether residents would support the reconstruction and operation of the service with local property taxes, more than 800 Cohasset residents answered affirmatively.

The referendum now has to pass similar tests in Scituate next week, and in Hull, Marshfield, Hingham and Weymouth. If the results are as overwhelmingly supportive as in Cohasset, the state senator will have a strong argument to support his struggle to regain a viable form of transportation for his constiuency.

Arts lottery helps artist 'paint 'music

By Charlotte Carney

It may not have been Megabucks, but to Scott Ketcham, it was enough money for color and canvas with which he would 'paint' some more music.

The Cohasset Arts Council's grant recipient last year was local artist Scott Ketcham of 29 Fernway.

Ketcham, 27, who graduated from Cohasset High School and Williams College, is a truly gifted and fine artist, whose paintings have a uniquely compelling quality.

His work is his strong, quiet statement of beauty. It reflects his shyness in proclaiming his own talents. "I love to paint, much more than I love to talk about painting," he said last week at his home. This is evident in his attitude about his work. He is reluctant to make boastful statements, even though his paintings are obviously moving and boast-worthy.

As a child, Scott remembers "drawing a lot." And at age 14, he began his formal art training in oils, from Bill Schultz, of the Bill Schultz School of Art in Pittsfield. "He is a genuinely gifted artist," Scott said of his mentor, adding, "he was the single biggest influence in my work."

My first paintings were terrible," he recalled. "But I'm proud of that. It was before I had a chance to worry about failure. I did however, go on to student teach at the art school in Pittsfield for almost ten years. I found that it was a wonderful learning experience."

Although there is a distinctly Impressionist influence to his paintings, when asked to describe his work, Ketcham said, "I'm still growing and learning. Ten years ago, I would have said that I was an impressionist. But now I'm moving away from it.

He explained further that "style is not an issue, but rather going for reality, You can not separate beauty from reality. Fortunately," Ketcham noted, "contemporary artists artists are beginning to bring beauty back to art."

While attending Williams College in northwestern Massachusetts, Ketcham preferred not to study Art, because of his lack of confidence in "Collegiate Art." He said, "it was easier to study art than work at refining your own art."

He pursued his serious art studies again, after returning home from college. At that time, he said "I was indecisive as to what to do with my art. But I am beginning to put things together. There is more of a sense of surety to my art now."

This maturing sense of surety is often displayed in his work, with a dramatic sense of color and movement.

"Painting is color," said Ketcham. "The entire picture must integrate. There must be counterpoint; a feeling of music in a painting; some sort of melody."

Cohasset's week . . .

Health regulation

The Cohasset Board of Health has adopted the following regulations by a unanimous vote on March 14 under the authority of Chapter 111, Section 31 to better protect the health of the citizens of the Town of Cohasset and the environment:

"Upon sale of any property within the Town of Cohasset having building utilizing an onsite wastewater disposal system or systems, the seller shall, at the execution of the purchase and sale agreement, or within a reasonable time thereafter but prior to the closing:

1. Certify to the buyer in writing, that an inspection and pumping of the system or systems has been made within the past calendar year by a Disposal Works Installer licensed by the Cohasset Board of Health, and shall disclose to the buyer the state of such inspection and by whom.

2. File with the Board of Health on a form provided by such board a drawing showing the location of the cover or covers for such systems or systems. A copy of the drawing shall also be given to the buyer with the inspection disclosure."

Disposal construction permit

At a recent meeting the Board of Health established a policy regarding extensions for Disposal Works Construction permits. These permits expire two years from the date of approval of the application. A one-year extension may be granted if a request for an extension is made prior to expiration and provided that the regulations affecting the original approval of the application have not changed. A fee of $5 will be charged for providing renewal requests.

Shellfish ban extended

The Department of Marine Fisheries has notified town officials that the Cohasset shellfish ban initiated in the fall of 1984, has been extended for an undetermined amount of time.

The ban affects the waters and flats of Cohasset Harbor "southwest of a line drawn across the breakwater," and also the waters and flats of Little Harbor.

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) made the determination based on a high level of bacteriological contamination in those areas.

Sewer treatment plant Supervisor Manuel Salvador said the flats have been closed for several months because of a high fecal count emanating from Howard Gleason Road and opposite Bassing Beach.

Although the bacteriological contamination was found filtering through a pipe into the harbor from Howard Gleason Road, no specific cause of the pollution has been determined. There has not been any rectification of the problem since the pollutant was discovered.

All shellfishing in those area is prohibited, the state agency noted in two letters to selectmen, until "subsequent determination by DEQE reveals that the shellfish are safe for human consumption."

Executive secretary search

Selectmen will be meeting again next Monday night. At that time, Diane Sullivan will take her place on the board.

Scheduled that night will be a discussion of what selectmen should do about obtaining an executive secretary. The board members decided to advertise for the position once again in the monthly municipal journal, "The Beacon."

After a discussion on the floor of Town Meeting, selectmen decided that the $28,000 annual salary will remain in effect. If a more qualified candidate accepts the position with a requirement of more money, selectmen will turn to the advisory committee for a transfer request.

Zoning board decision

The Zoning Board of Appeals decided March 8 that a two-family dwelling at 505 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, built several years ago without a legal variance, may remain in effect.

Stating that "allowing the existing condition to continue . . will result . . no significant injury to the Town of Cohasset," the board voted to grant a variance to property owner Harry Ritter.

The board stated that "significant hardship and manifested injustice would result from requiring the abandonment of the basement apartment in the applicant's dwelling, particularly in light of the fact the Town has benefited from the assessment thereof as a two-family dwelling for at least 12 years."

The board stated the investigation of this case was brought to light after a request from William Figueriedo, "a resident of the town who is not an abutter to the subject premises, nor a person falling within the geographic zone of "persons aggrieved."

Sullivan takes it, no recount

It was so close, that for about a day many folks thought for sure there'd be a recount.

That dreaded word in Cohasset's election history almost became reality once again, as the race for selectman was almost too close to call.

But when the dust had settled, it was clear that Diane Sullivan won a one-year seat on the Board of Selectman. Her opponent, Jim Gallagher, a longtime Recreation Commission member, lost his bid by a mere 17 votes.

"Maybe I should have been on the phone for a couple more hours making calls," he said two days after Saturday's election. And although suppcrters urged him to file for a recount Tuesday morning, he mulled it over and decided against it.

However, Gallagher said this week he will "definitely seek office again," perhaps as early as next year. And the Short Street resident added he will probably be after another seat on the Board of Selectmen.

"I'll be back," he promised this week. "I'll probably consider a run for selectman again, definitely.

"I was pretty confident I'd win, so it was a big letdown. I thought I worked hard enough, but obviously I didn't," he added.

The self-employed master tradesman reflected on the campaign. "It was friendly and Diane and I had a lot of the same ideas. There were never any problems, and we were both aware of the issues," he said, adding, "I think Cohasset lost the election. I felt I could do a lot more for the town. But I'll be back."

The reaction after this year's election was far different from a year ago when Sullivan was soundly defeated by former selectman John DeBassio. This year, she campaigned hard and long, and her experience as a member of the Sewer Advisory Committee and the Drainage Advisory Committee, enabled her to gain a knowledge of many issues.

"I am delighted," she said Monday following the election. "I knew it was going to be tough."

Reflecting on her slim margin of victory, Sullivan confided that "many people voted for my opponent and now I want to earn their respect and support through my performance as a selectman. I believe in fair and equitable treatment for everyone, so they won't feel like someone is in there who won't listen to their concerns and feelings. I will."

The newest Cohasset selectman, who was sworn into office Saturday night, was surprised at the narrow margin of victory. But she has set her course for the next year as a freshman member of that board.

"My priority this year will be to go in there and pay close attention. I'll quietly integrate myself onto the board and do the best job I am capable of doing," Sullivan explained. "I'm not going in like a dynamo. I will join the other harmoniously."

One of the first issues Sullivan plans to consider is her proposal to initiate a random drawing of the warrant articles at future Town Meetings.

The other contested races included a five-year seat on the Recreation Commission. Robert Beggan won that position over opponent Deborah Eaton. It was the first attempt at public office for both contenders. Beggan had emphasized his longtime involvement with the recreation programs in town, and his intention to continue the numerous activities for Cohasset youth.

In the race for trustee for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Mary Buckley won over opponent Mary Deveney, by a 600 vote margin.

No other races were contested in this election which drew 1598 voters to the polls.

Elizabeth Ripley, in her first try for Treasurer-Collector after serving in an acting capacity, gathered the most votes in Saturday's election. She totaled 1312 ballots.

In other non-contested offices, incumbent Rocco Laugelle gathered 1113 votes. Assessor Michael Patrolia in his bid for re-election received 1140 votes.

Incumbent school committee member Joseph Nedrow was re-elected with 1038 votes. Barbara Bliss, who was unopposed in the race for a three-year committee seat vacated by Martha Gjesteby, gathered 915 votes.

Three additional members of the library board of trustees were voted in, including Elizabeth Eaton, Agnes McCann, and David Wadsworth.

Dr. John Burns won a three-year seat on the Board of Health which was vacated by former member Marilyn Sweeney. Planning Board incumbent John O'Toole will remain on that board for five years and Lot Bates will stay on the Water Commission for a three-year term.

Sewer Commissioner Raimund Vanderweil won a three-year term without opposition, and Marguerite Libby was re-elected to a five-year seat on the Housing Authority. She will be joined by Kathleen Conte who was unopposed in a race for the four year seat on the board.

BREACH OF CONTRACT

There are a number of ways in which a contract may be breached. A "breach" is a situation whereby the duty to which a party has obligated himself according to the contract has not been fulfilled or has been unsatisfactorily performed. Some breaches may be so unimportant that they do not substantially affect the execution of the agreement. Others completely frustrate the contract. The degree of breach is important in determining whether the breach is material, minor or partial. A "material breach" occurs when a party fails to perform to the extent that the other party does not substantially get what was bargained for. In this case, the non-breaching party can usually compel the other party to pay for any loss that has been suffered.

Your legal rights as well as your responsibilities should always be foremost in your mind when entering upon any contract. A prudent individual will have such a document reviewed by those professionals representing his best interests before signing on the dotted line. If you have a legal question or think you may be faced with a legal problem, don't hesitate to consult with your attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appointment.

When suing for breach of contract, there can be only one suit on that breach.

Art Center move before commission

A proposal to move the headquarters of the South Shore Art Center to another Ripley Road site was presented to the Sewer Commission last Saturday.

The center, which for many years has searched for larger, more accomodating space for their numerous activities, is planning to move into the Tantillo Auto Body shop at 115 Ripley Road. The sale will be finalized only after all permits have been issued from various town boards.

The Sewer Commission was the first board presented with the plans to construct a first-floor addition and second story to the auto body shop location. Currently, the shop has one bathroom and toilet used by three to five employees.

The art center proposal would include water-saving devices, such as a two-gallon flush toilet. Tantillo's, which is connected to the town's sewer system, is allowed a 200-gallon maximum per day. Because of the 1978 moratorium on the sewer capacity, all proposed changes in the sewer line must be brought before the Sewer Commission.

Proponents of the plan, including center Director Margaret Dillon, told commissioners that the current maximum limit would not be exceeded by the art center.

But sewer treatment plant Supervisor Manuel Salvador, and Jan Daggert, a former member of the art center Board of Directors, argued against that statement.

According to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), Cohasset must not allow any change in the use of the current sewer system. Because the town is incapable of treating any additional flow, combined with the pollution already caused by an inadequate treatment system, no change in use can be approved, Salvador said.

The state agency, he added, has already noted that an increase in the square footage of a structure on the sewer line requires a state permit. Salvador, who has personally contacted the state along with Daggert, said the state has not approved the type of water-saving, air compressor toilet units proposed in the new construction.

Dillon explained the conversion will increase the amount of space from the current location by more than 2000 square feet. There is 4000 square feet at 103 Ripley Road, and the planned reconstruction of phase one of the art center plans will add 2600 square feet of studio space, a larger exhibition hall, "and allow us to have more community programs. Right now we are very limited as to the amount of people who can participate in our programs," she explained this week.

The center, which will be celebrating its 30th aniversary with this summer's art festival, has been searching for larger headquarters for about five years. This was the only available location within the town, Dillon said.

In a survey completed several years ago, members of the art center said they would like the facility to remain in Cohasset. The second choice was in Hingham, and the third choice was in Scituate.

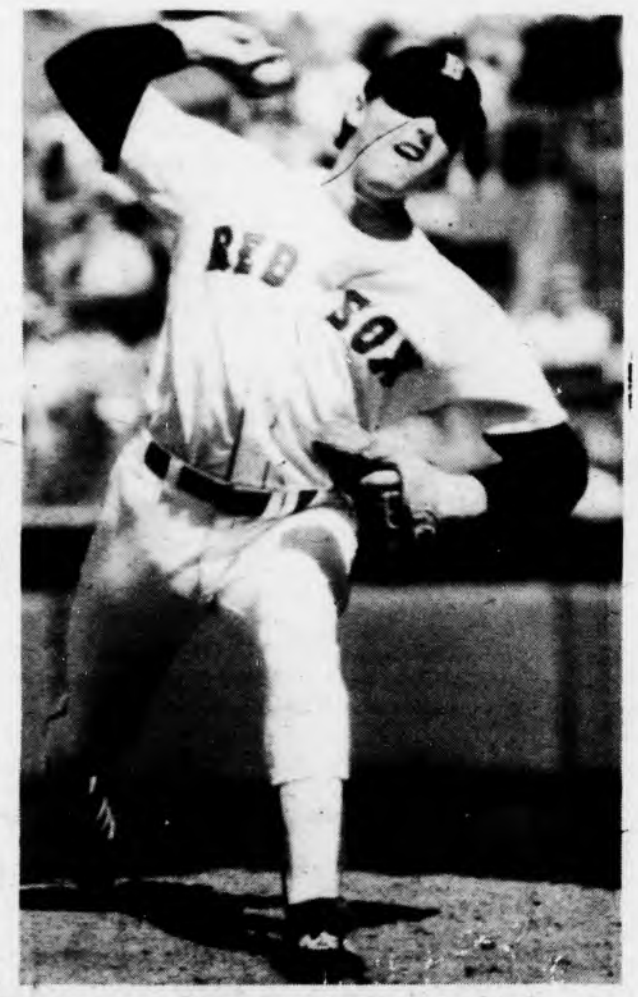
Programs offered at the art center have tripled in the past nine years, she added, with students from throughout the South Shore, and artists' exhibits from the entire Metro Boston region.

"We need improved, better space. And this looks like our best choice," Dillon noted.

Salvador, who is opposed to the conversion plans, urged the Sewer Commissioners to reject the proposal. "For the sake of this town and our residents," he said, the sewer system can not handle any increased flow. Even though engineers for the art center plans may argue that the flow will not increase, "having 600 people use a facility once used by three or five people is a big increase," he added.

Salvador has retained several copies of letters from recent years, in which the DEQE has reiterated its stand against increase flow in Cohasset. On March 6, in reply to a letter sent by Salvador, Director Tom McMahon stated, "any increase in the sewer ban would require a permit from this division."

"All these letters say no! you can't add to our capacity. How can we turn around and say yes to one group in town and say no to everyone else? Believe me, they'll be an increase in the use of the sewer system. I hate to be the bad guy, but it's not fair to the taxpayers in this town," Salvador added.



The Sewer Commission has not yet made a determination on the proposal.

Chamber sees harmonious relationship with town

day, but our primary responsibility is as residents of Cohasset," according to Leahy.

Although the Chamber's ultimate alternative to implement a master plan failed at Town Meeting, Leahy said approval was not the sole purpose of their action. "We wanted the town to stop and think about these issues. Our whole purpose was to elevate the community's awareness of what was going on," he says.

The former Chamber president hopes the master plan concept is not a dead issue for Cohasset. Although he agrees it is not a panacea for all planning problems, and must be supplemented by a sound bylaw, "I think the town's rejection of the plan is something we will regret in ten years. All towns are under unbelievable pressure to build. Making the jigsaw fit is going to be very difficult."

In fact, Leahy believes the master plan concept, brought to light by the Chamber in recent weeks, is still a viable alternative. This week, the Chamber will be voting on whether to pursue such activities as the master plan.

President Wood said the Chamber will never undertake development of a master plan independent of the town. If such a plan is to succeed, all elements of the community must participate, he adds.

Although most observers saw the Chamber in vocal opposition to the planning board, Leahy says that is not entirely accurate. The businessmen, like the planners, are opposed to overdeveloped, unplanned development. "We don't want to see acres of macadam either," he explains. "We are very supportive of the planning board and their long hours of work. Our interest is not to combat them or any town board, but to provide alternatives. It's difficult to think that one board can sit for hours and come up with one choice and that choice will always be correct. Having alternatives is a good thing."

Rather than a contradictory relationship, Leahy views the Chamber as a tool for town committees - a method for town officials to seek out alternative viewpoints.

As for their first public campaign pitched against the views of a town board, Leahy feels the Chamber gained widespread recognition and experience. "It was all very worthwhile," he comments. "It was an educational process for us and the community. Our proclaimation to Town Meeting highlighted the pros and cons of the planning board's changes. If we had that type of community awareness and input every time we had a Town Meeting, we would probably always come out with the best solution for the town."

Chamber President Wood agrees the organization's participation helped to ignite interest in an important meeting. "We were not satisified with sitting back. We did our homework, and the planning board did their's. We generated a lot of interest in some significant issues," Wood adds.

"There is now a much more educated populus," according to Leahy. "I think we penetrated the 'apathy' of the community and stimulated people to rid themselves of that attitude and to get involved.

It was a never a good versus evil situation," he continues. "We served to illuminate many facets of the problems within the bylaw changes, and that was good.'

Some residents, he admits, may have been "offended by the attitude we were proposing. They may have felt we were threatening. But we all have the right and obligation to express our views. The net result was that the Chamber at least, was one key element in generating citizen support for Town Meeting this year."

Both Chamber members agree that local businessmen who were vocal in their opposition to the town officials, will not be hurt by their stand at Town Meeting. "There are many of us who understand the appropriate balance between residential and business. We are all working toward the improvement of our community, but that does not mean the elimination of growth and business development," Leahy states.

As he was researching through historic literature while developing an argument against the bylaw changes, Leahy read what he considers an appropriate warning not to continue a 'no growth policy.' The statement was authored by E. Victor Bigelow in 1876.

"The variety of people now compressed into the limits of the town is quite remarkable for so small a population. . . this homogeneous condition has passed away and now we have the rich with the poor, the cultured with the unlearned, the cosmopolitan with the provincial, in a greater variety, perhaps, than any town of the same size in the Commonwealth. All these kinds of human life are mutually useful, moreover, and afford a stable condition of society able to endure good times and bad times without much disturbance."

Pleasant St. complaints

Residents of Pleasant Street have outlined a number of concerns to the Board of Selectmen.

First, they have asked that some action be taken against the number of dogs which are allowed to run loose throughout town. "All we are asking for is some sort of support in way of some definitive leash laws that can be enforced by this town's Dog Officer," they wrote.

The second problem enumerated by the residents is the increasing number of speeding cars along Pleasant Street.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

ALLERGIES

Chiropractic believes that the one fundamental cause of allergies is interference with the nerve energy flow between brain and tissue cells. Normal quantities of nerve energy into every tissue and organ of the body results in perfect function and proper coordination between tissues and organs. If coordination is disrupted by a vertebral subluxation (a partial or slight dislocation of a vertebra in its relationship to the vertebra above, below or both), then lack of coordination, disfunction and reaction replace normalcy. Foods and substances which ordinarily cause no body reaction become irritants to the abormally functioning tissues. When the cause of the nerve interference is corrected, the body will once again act normally.

Allergies are a most annoying and perplexing problem. The greatest problem solver of all times is Mother Nature herself. Through chiropractic applications interference along the communication network of the body is alleviated. Thus Mother Nature's natural healing instructions are allowed to flow from top to bottom and from stem to stern. Call COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today and let us discuss your particular problems and needs and determine what benefits chiropractic procedures may have in store for you. Unusual and difficult cases invited. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

HINT

Statistics indicate that allergic conditions account for 7.2 percent of all reported diseases.

Olympic fever

Olympic fever is in the air again as the Cohasset Special Olympics team prepares for the spring track and field meet. A coaching staff comprised of volunteers from the community, as well as parents, are training the athletes on Tuesdays and Saturdays at the Joseph Osgood School.

Team members will participate in the long jump, fifty yard dash, and softball throw. This year's team consists of eleven students from Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover, Quincy and Weymouth, all of whom attend school in Cohasset. Many of these students, who range in age from eight to fifteen, are veteran Olympians who have won many medals in past meets and anticipate another successful showing in the spring games.

The track and field events will be held at Marciano Stadium, Brockton High School, on May 1. The Cohasset Special Olympics team is being sponsored again this year by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

A successful first season

The Cohasset Tennis Club's men's tennis team, in its first season, upset Blue Hills in the final regular season match last Saturday, 6 - 0. In doing so, the team qualified for the championship playoffs of the prestigious South of Boston League.

Prior to the Blue Hills victory, the Cohasset team, captained by Bill Young of Scituate and Terry Kahn of Cohasset, had scored an even more unexpected victory over archrival Scituate, 5 - 2, to give themselves a chance at making the playoffs.

The key to the Scituate victory, Young noted, was the play of Bill Marsden and Curt Smallzel, both of Cohasset, at the number-two doubles position. After losing the first set, Smallzel and Marsden staged a dramatic comeback, and won the third set--and the match--7 - 5.

In the Blue Hills win, Cohasset was given a forfeit in one of the three doubles matchups. Then Kahn and Chip Rowley, of Hingham, continued their league unbeaten streak with a 6 - 4, 6 - 3 victory. And Young and Dr. Jeff Emerson, of Cohasset, wrapped up the playoff spot, 6 - 3, 6 - 2.

Cohasset will play the first round of the South of Boston championships on April 27, at a site yet to be determined by the league.

In other club news, the annual Cohasset Cup tournament has begun, with championship play in a record eight divisions. Club manager Cathy Pocock says the event has attracted its most balanced and competitive field ever. Semifinals in all divisions will be played the weekend of May 11, with the finals scheduled for a week later.

National competition

Annie Henry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William B. Henry, Jr., of Cohasset, qualified for and attended the National Age Group Synchronized Swimming Championships which were held the first week of April in Canton, Ohio.

Annie, a seventh grader at Cohasset Jr. High School, swims with the Quincy YMCA team where her mother is head coach.

Annie's first place win in the New England Age Group Meet, held in February, qualified her for the Eastern Regional Meet in Springfield, Mass. which was held the end of March.

Annie won a third place medal in the 11/12 solo category and was the only girl in New England to receive a medal in any of the solo age groups.

There are fifteen regions in the U.S., each of which was represented at the national meet. Each of the three age groups compete in the solo, duet, trio and team events and everyone also competes in the figure portion of the meet.

There were around 170 swimmers in the 11/12 age group and 33 of these swimmers competed in the solo event. Annie's mom has not received the final score sheets from the meet, but Annie will probably place somewhere in the lower half of the solo category. This will be a very good showing since this was only Annie's second year of competition in the U.S. Synchronized Swimming Association.

Now that the national meet is over, Annie is getting ready for the New England Junior Olympic Meet which will be held in Worcester on May 5. After that, there will be the Junior Olympic Regional Meet in Connecticut and in July, the Bay State Games.

Good "synching," Annie, and keep up the hard work!

Conservatory preschool

The South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham is taking applications for a limited number of openings in their Preschool program for Fall, 1985. The Conservatory, located off 19 Fort Hill Street, offers a unique program in that early music training, by a specialist in the field, is a part of the curriculum week.

The Conservatory Preschool offers a two, three, or five-day program. It also has a one-day program for three year-olds called "First Time Playschool." This is a pre-nursery school class and involves one hour with the preschool teacher and one hour with the music specialist one day a week.

For information about these programs, please contact the South Shore Conservatory at 749-7565.

Information session

The South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens will sponsor an informational session on the new "Turning 22" Law, Chapter 688.

Mary Ann Walsh of the Executive Office of Human Services will be the guest speaker. The meeting will be held on Tuesday, April 23 at 9 a.m. at the Quincy Mental Health Center, 460 Quincy Avenue, Quincy.

For further information, please call Leo Sarkissian, Executive Director of S.S.A.R.C. at 335-3023, or Maria Plante, President of S.S.A.R.C. at 383-9263.

Alzheimer support group

Dr. Alan Gruber will be the guest speaker before the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. Wednesday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hersey House, 229 North Street in Hingham.

Dr. Gruber's topic is "A Guide to the Diagnosis of Alzheimer's." Dr. Gruber, a neuropsychologist at the Center for Memory Impairment and Neurobehavioral Disorders in Brookline is also director of the Coastal Community Counseling and Geriatric Services in Hingham.

Alzheimer's Disease is a progressive neurological disease involving memory loss and impaired intellectual functioning for which at present there is no cure. Only a complete evaluation can diagnose AD in any particular case as other disorders may present similar symptoms.

Guidance for families and friends is offered through support groups. The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc., which is a grantee of South Shore Elder Services, meets twice a month.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

It would be hard to find a legislator who will argue against true education reform. In 1984, the sense of the Massachusetts House was clear — produce the best possible educational reform measure with the focus on education. Unfortunately, we lost sight of that true need last year. What was produced in 1984 was legislation that carried a price tag of over a half billion dollars slated to pay the special interests. While it tried to be for all, the legislation turned out to be for no one.

The question in 1985 is what should compose true education reform. The answer is legislation that is lean and affordable with an emphasis on the education and not the special interests and bureaucrats.

The education reform package should include:

1) a study conducted to determine the specific educational needs of each and every district;

2) basic skills tests — reading, writing and math;

3) secondary education — expand school-to-work transition and drop-out prevention; and,

4) teachers — competency testing.

I believe that teacher salaries must be raised, but based on a merit pay system. If our students are encouraged to achieve with various grading incentives, our teachers should share in this same progressive principle.

There is also a need to clarify a misconception regarding local aid. When the Governor announced his local aid figures earlier this year there was a section for some communities to receive equal educational grant funds or EEO money. The misconception was that this is local aid. However, we know this money is tied to his educational reform package and only exists if his reform is passed.

around town

☐ While on their way to the National Synchronized Swim Meet recently, Carol and Bill Henry took son Bill, a senior at Bates College to see the Caravaggio exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in N.Y.C. (Bill had done his senior art history thesis on this painter).

While in N.Y.C. they all stopped in at the Harvard Club to visit Carol's cousin, Stuart Cooper. He was the director of the recent mini-series "A.D." shown on NBC. Carol had not seen her cousin (their fathers were brothers) in many years and there was a lot of catching up to do and many interesting stories to hear concerning the year's filming of "A.D." which took place in Tunisia. Stuart Cooper's next project is as director of William Faulker's "The Hamlet" which will begin sometime in May in Lousiana.

☐ News on Penny Paton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Paton of Cohasset. Penny is a senior at Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., and among her other activities, is a member of the Wheatones. This is a six-member singing group that does more than sing at campus events. Last semester the Wheatones performed concerts at colleges like Trinity, Colgate and MIT and they perform for the Admissions office, as well as representing Wheaton at recruiting functions. They have performed all over the Eastern Seabord for Wheaton, from Vermont to Florida. Their latest venture is really something . . . they have produced their own album! It is called "Steppin' to the Bad Side" and was released in March. Cohasset's own Rick Tinory did the recording. As the school newspaper put it, "The Wheatones show the Wheaton community the finely polished, rewarding product of discipline, creativity, hard work and the support of close friends every time that they perform."

☐ Cynthia Paine, a management major at the Braintree campus of Newbury Jr. College, recently travelled to Europe on a college sponsored trip. Eighteen students participated in the seven-day trip to Paris and stayed in the Hotel Berthier La Tour. Newbury College is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges and offers 29 degree programs at 11 locations throughout Mass. I'd love to work for them if it should mean a trip to Paris is part of the job description, wouldn't you?

☐ Judge Rya Zoble of Jerusalem Road (and the U.S. District Court of Boston) was voted to a three-year term on the board that directs the United Way, the area's largest human service organization. She is a member of the American, Massachusetts and Boston Bar Associations, and is an overseer of the Boston Luncheon Club and governor of the Handel and Haydn Society. She is a graduate of Radcliffe College and Harvard Law School. The United Way of Massachusetts Bay serves more than one million people in more than 80 cities and towns in eastern Mass.

☐ It isn't my place to scold but . . . did you vote? The number of people that did was appalling, talk about apathy! Are we taking our democratic system for granted? Just be sure of one thing–if you didn't vote, don't complain about anything or anyone in "the system." Hats off to all concerned about the town that took the time and energy to run and/or vote, and good luck in the future.

☐ "Bugs Bunny" called in a get well wish, and wants to share it in the hopes that others may send cards as well. Barbara Jones is a patient at the Norfolk Respitory Hospital in Braintree Highlands and has a birthday coming up soon. April 23 to be exact, so send a card and a bit of cheer, something that all patients need and love! And a very happy birthday from us, Barbara.

☐ As was reported, Marie Johnston is hard at work on the House for the Jr. League . . . seems that I was remiss, as you may have seen in the Patriot Ledger last week. It stated that the South Shore has come alive with decorators, and we have three more that are taking part in the Endicott Peabody House . . . Phil Smith is doing a 30x30 living room, Lind Halloran is doing the lampshades and Ellen McAuliffe-Morrisey is doing whatever she does best (which seems to be everything that she does!).

☐ Congratulations are in order for Mike Cisneros, a sixth grader at Deer Hill School and son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Cisneros. Mike won the Spelling Bee for the Patriot Ledger, and continues onward, hopefully to wind up in Washington, D.C. for the finals (national champ.). The Ledger winner will go there too, from June 2 to 7 . . . good luck to Mike! Oh yes, his winning word was "bankruptcy," the word that stumped Nicole Barry who was runner up.

☐ Dr. and Mrs. Mark L. Friedman (Mary Gabriel) of Cohasset are the parents of a son, John David, born April 6 at Mount Auburn Hospital, Cambridge.

☐ That is the news for the week . . . keep it coming to me!

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children s education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Travel Along with EVIE YOUNG
CRUISE CONTROL
Last year, 1.6 million people cruised from North American ports. The reason most often cited for the amazing popularity of a cruise is that it is a simple, hassle-free, "all-inclusive" vacation. It offers real value for the money. A traveler's ship is his "hotel", his transportation to exotic ports. It also includes gourmet restaurants, nightclubs, movie theater, spa or gymnasium, deck chairs in the sun, and a front-row view of the ever-changing ocean. Another reason is the incredible convenience of a cruise. Instead of spending time packing and unpacking, a cruise vacationer can effortlessly travel by sea to some of the world's most interesting cities. Shipboard activities can include seminars, exercise classes, movies and just plain interesting conversation.
When planning your travel vacation, COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER can help you find a travel bargain that offers you the best savings around. A travel agent can service your every travel need, saving you time, aggravation and money. Just come in and tell us your travel plans and let us set about the task of arranging a vacation travel that meets up to your expectations while keeping within your budget allowance. We're located at 3 Brook St., Scituate. We are open Mon-Fri, 9-5; Sat. 10-4 and by appointment. Tel. 545-4500 and 383-1717.

Editorial

Call Thomas

The following editorial appeared in last week's Hingham Mariner but is reprinted here because Wompatuck State Park and its fate are of interest to all the towns it reaches into. —Ed.

The decision by the General Services Administration to go ahead with its plan to cut up and sell developable portions of the Cohasset Annex rather than giving the entire parcel to the state's Department of Environmental Management is a classic case of going for the short-term gain with no regard whatsoever for the long-term detriment.

The Cohasset Annex was most recently used by the U.S. Army Reserve. The property sits quietly at the end of Leavitt Street and adjoins Wompatuck State Park to make an emerald spot of green that every airline pilot in the area is familiar with. One said not long ago, "From the air it looks like an oasis."

So what is the GSA doing chopping up the oasis? They say it's merely a fiscal matter. Apparently, they feel this area has enough open and green space already. And those 135 acres of upland, with their $1.5 million price tag, looks mighty inviting to those GSA accountants.

But how can a mere (and that's used advisedly, but think of it: how much of an impact is $1.5 million going to make on the national debt?) $1.5 million justify forever taking away a piece of greenery that would extend a great park's already good facilities?

For we're not just talking about the people of Hingham and Cohasset having a place to hike or ski cross country. We're also talking about people who live in Boston, who should have an opportunity to come a little way out and enjoy nature and fresh air. Yes, a state park is meant to be shared and the world will soon have less and less discretionary green space. Just look at the construction and development going on along Route 53 if you think that's not the case.

Wompatuck State Park would, in all probability, never have come into existence if it hadn't been for the U.S. government taking the property by eminent domain during World War II. The total property was thus created, paving the way for Wompatuck.

But for the same government to then turn around and say to the state, some 19 years later, "Either you ante up $1.5 million or we're going to sell the 'good' land in the Cohasset Annex. You can have the swampy areas (which are good for neither building nor camping or hiking)" seems to be a sad turn of events.

Last summer naturalist John Richardson did a survey of the various assets of the property, including archeological and geological as well as detailing the species of flowers, plants, trees, birds, mammals and amphibians found on the property. It was a long and varied list and only reinforces the idea that this is a piece of land that should not come under the developer's chain saw and backhoe.

GSA regional administrator Peter Thomas has said the final decision will be made in the next several weeks. Some of those active in the cause of adding the Annex to the rest of Wompatuck have found, somewhat to their surprise, that he does return phone calls. So give him a ring. And let him know how you feel. The number is 223-2601.

Thanks for bigger, better Egg Hunt

Letters

To the Editor:

During the past nine years, the Cohasset Recreation Department has been conducting an Easter Egg Hunt for children, the Saturday before Easter.

Each year the event becomes a little larger, and more detailed. The Cohasset Police Association, Cohasset Rotary Club, and the George Mealy American Legion Post 18, were the financial sponsors.

During the past two years, Mrs. Manuel (Jean) Salvador has not only contributed hours of time preparing, coordinating and participating in the Easter Egg Hunt, but she has also organized visits to hospitalized residents, shut-ins and other members of the community. The residents of Cohasset are in great debt to Mrs. Salvador for her selfless donation of efforts, time, and thoughtfulness. Cohasset is fortunate to have among its citizens and individual such as Jean Salvador.

As one might suspect, it takes a coordinated effort to conduct a program such as the Easter Egg Hunt. Many thanks should go to the following people: Shirley and Ham Tewsbury, Jean Higgins, Mary Brennock, Joanie Higgins, Peg Buckley, Helen Goodwin, Peter Laugelle, Dana and Mary Salvador, Lynn and Bob Zelms, Herb Williams, Dan Leahy, Richard Barrow, Terry Duggan, Jim Gallagher, Gerard Buckley, Manny Salvadoor, Bobby Barrow, Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, Cohasset Woolworth's, Cohasset Medi Mart, Cohasset Stop and Shop, Cohasset Bread Shop, Strawberry Parfait, and Kimball's By-The-Sea.

Also, thanks to Chiefs Joe Kealy and Martin Dooley of the Police and Fire Departments, and Ken Ekberg, Principal of the Deer Hill School.

Jack Worley
Director, Recreation Dept.

Observations on the colors of Town Meeting

Town Meeting, 1985

These simple facts are those I learned
From sitting, night on night on seats
That were, at seven-thirty, soft
But had, by ten, become a bed
Of nails. Such is democracy.

If one can count a quorum, sure,
By seven forty-five, no less,
The meeting still will not be called
'Til eight; 'twould be unseemingly
To rob town fathers, mothers too,
Of one last campaign trail time.

A politician of the fairer sex,
Town meeting bound, must dress in naught but black
While those who are of quite the opposite
In suits must be if they profess the law;
Tweed jackets, otherwise, with elbows patched
In suede. Conservative, Cohasset is.

But two exceptions did I see. Forsooth:
Such wild diversity; lame ducks, perhaps.
No necktie did I see on one,
The other in cranberry dressed,
I hung my head in shame and snoozed,
And dreamed of pinstripped parliaments.

A rat tail lot is bad, bad, bad.
A pork chop lot is good, good, good.
The difference, I listened close,
Was never quite explained to me,
So I voted for both of them,
Then learned that they were quite the same.

A bylaw now we have that warns
Of shallow bedrock. This will be
Of interest to geologists
Who think, not knowing of our town,
That bedrock reaches to the core,
That shallow means a thousand miles.

Cohasset Town Meeting within the high school auditorium.

The High School auditorium
Has walls one score and two feet tall,
Which didn't sell the article
And neither did geometry
For lack of Pythagorian
Or trigonometric function.

By Wednesday we had spent our steam.
Eight-thirty came, still forty short.
A proof, some say, the time has come
To recognize reality:
To let the quorum drop by half.
Next year let's bring it up again.

If one thing we have learned this year
'Tis that the land will speak to us.
Not all of us will hear the same,
Nor should we. We should listen, though,
And speak our thoughts; Give thanks to those
Who serve us well, and honor them.

Yes, honor them with our response,
By telling them just what we think.
Dishonor is to yield this up:
The power that was gained with blood,
Preserved with blood; that old stale blood
So easily washed out with words.

Democracy, it's plain to see,
Lives on: imperfect though it be.
If you would see it at first hand,
Touch it, smell it, hear it, feel it,
Understand why we must save it,
Know why some who live here hate it;

Then, you must come to where it's at:
In these soft chairs that numb the brains.
Town meeting is where we began.
Our grand experiment, 'twas called,
And still it is; no more, no less.

Need for a unified force against GSA plans for Wompatuck

Letters

To the Editor:

I read your April 11 editorial, "Indian giver," with interest. The huge tract of wild land that encompasses Whitney Woods, Wompatuck State Park, Hingham's Triphammer Pond Reservation and the critical and controversial GSA tract is a cohesive, roughly rectangular unit representing a spectacular urban-centered open space that increases in importance daily as development accelerates throughout the South Shore.

During the 1982-83 season when I was making an inventory of the natural and historic resources within Wompatuck State Park for the State Department of Environmental Management, I also explored all adjacent public land. As I became familiar with the layout of the land, it became self-evident that this huge 5000-acre multi-parcel open space would soon be the only dynamic stretch of regional wood, swamp, marsh, hill, hollow, ledge and brook that might survive the advance of the American Subdivision.

This uni-park open space contains a vastness of length and breadth that provides a sort of primeval integrity and this, along with the topographical variance and variety of habitats, ensures that it will always be an urban-centered natural arboretum as well as a place to observe several hundreds of species of wildlife.

But there is one ominous "fly in the ointment" that may fracture this potential. The 767-acre GSA-controlled parcel protrudes like a giant spear into the very heart of the Whitney Woods, Wompatuck State Park and Triphammer Pond Reservation open space being surrounded nearly totally by these open spaces.

This 767-acre tract is not a level fertile plain. It is often a tortured landscape of steep ledges, glacial boulders, rock-strewn valleys, and extensive hemlock, maple and white cedar swamps. It is a wonderful land for a wild urban park.

There are extensive groves of the scarce Chestnut Oak, some of the largest swamp White Cedar in the state, huge hemlock and pine, clear, sandy springs that bubble out of the rocky hillsides, a grove of nearly 300 Flowering Dogwood that tower 300 feet high. Beneath them grow extensive beds of the handsome Rattlesnake Plantain and the locally rare White Baneberry. There are ledges on which grow White Columbine while below, in the White Cedar swamp, there are yellow and showy Lady-slippers. I noted Trilliums, the Bloodroot, Hepatica and the much rarer Yellow Clintonia.

At one point a sheer ledge rises 30, 40, even 60 feet over a beaver marsh. From pockets in the ledge grow stunted Red Cedar, White Pine and Bear Oak, some of which range from 150 to 200 years old.

At one point, there is the old basin of Hingham's historic Saw Mill Pond. It again could be flooded to form what would be one of the region's most scenic bodies of water, complete with islands and sheer ledges.

At another remote location a long, ledgy peninsula juts far out into a mature maple swamp. Here, hidden away between hills, there is a cold, boggy hemlock swamp where lives the Snowshoe Hare and sometimes the sign of the region's last deer.

Not far away, on the edge of an open blueberry swamp, there is a gigantic glacial boulder, 15 feet tall and nearly 70 feet long. The top is carpeted with a soft blanket of Boulder Fern. While resting here on its summit, on a warm October evening in 1984, I was startled to see two otter.

Later a Red-Tailed hawk alighted in one of the huge pines that stand nearby.

On this 767-acre GSA tract I have observed the Eagle, a flock of Glossy Ibis, Marsh Hawk, Wood Duck, Pileated Woodpecker, Snowy Owl, Great Horned Owl, Scarlet Tanagers, Orioles, Eastern Bluebird, Indigo Bunting, Painted Bunting, mink, ferret, beaver, muskrat, fox, raccoon, opossum, deer, woodcock, pheasant, quail and partridge, along with hundreds of other species.

Last summer, while exploring the ledges that bound portions of the Great Wild White Cedar Swamp (as I call it), I came upon the nest of a flying squirrel in a dead tree. He stared at me with black, beady eyes. Occasionally, he would zip down into his hole and then reappear. I walked on and spotted the walnut-sized nest of a hummingbird and later, as the pink rays of a setting sun bathed the tops of the White Cedar with luminescent light, I spotted an albino skunk in the dusky hemlock grove.

All these creatures and experiences exist here because this urban wilderness is large enough so that the daily tramp of our expanding civilization is kept relatively far away. To have all this and so much more that I have not told you about within the urban center is an enduring treasure that cannot be calculated. All these things exist upon the 767-acre GSA tract alone, which we the people own and the government tells us we must buy back what is already ours.

The GSA has never had regional hearings to attempt to understand how this crucial 767-acre tract might fit into regional plans. The GSA has never conducted hearings to hear what the people desire for this land. The GSA holds a cutlass to our throats and says buy or we may sell the land to private development interests. To develop this land would be comparable to erecting a thousand acres of condominums in the center of Grand Canyon or Yellowstone National Park.

If this 767-acre track is developed, then the daily tramp of civilization will be introduced into the heart of the Wompatuck State Park—Whitney Woods urban wilderness. All the things I have told you about will be either destroyed or compromised. The woods and the habitats will be trampled down by the residents of the 767-acre development, and gone forever will be the chance to set aside a cohesive urban park where mankind is not a dominant force.

When the land that is now Wompatuck State Park was up for grabs, an organized force headed by the late Mason A. Foley, rose up to convince the federal government that we wanted the land for park. It is time for that unified force again. At the very least call GSA regional administrator, Peter Thomas and tell him in no uncertain terms that this land is critical to regional park plans. The number is 223-2601.

Why no news about JV teams?

To the Editor:

It has come to our attention that the Cohasset boys' and girls' varsity basketball teams have been getting all the publicity around here. It just so happens that both boys' and girls' junior varsity basketball teams were the South Shore League, small school champions! We think both teams deserve some well earned recognition. The boys, coached by Matt Salerno, finished their season with 14 wins and just four losses, while the girls, coached by Jon Anderson, finished their season with a near perfect record of 17 wins and only one loss. We think everyone should know that varsity isn't the only team with great athletes.

We would be very pleased if you print this letter in the next issue of the Cohasset Mariner, or, congratulate both teams in a short article.

Art scholarships are available from S.Shore Center

Graduating seniors who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited art school are invited to apply for one of three scholarships awarded annually by the South Shore Art Center.

The awards to be made by the center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, are the $1,000 Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship, the $600 Marion Huse Scholarship and the $200 MacIvor Reddie Award. Portfolios of original work are to be submitted to the center on Saturday, May 4 between noon and 1 p.m. Students may pick up their portfolios on Wednesday, May 8 between noon and 4 p.m.

As in the past, the scholarships are awarded to assist and encourage students who live on the South Shore and who show the most promise in the field of art to further their art education. Selection of the scholarship recipients will be based on a student's application and portfolio.

The selection for the Bergfors scholarship, named for lifelong Quincy resident, businessman and civic leader Fred E. Bergfors, will be made by Mrs. Constance Bergfors Rice, one of the trustees of the Bergfors Fund. The selection of the recipients of the other two scholarships will be made by jurors Don Lettis, academic dean, Massachusetts College of Art and Virginia Allen, professor and program director of art history, Massachusetts College of Art. Lettis is an abstract artist working in acrylics and has won several prizes at the Gallery Naga in Boston. He is also on the board of directors of the South Shore Art Center.

Allen works with monoprints, collages and etchings and has had one-person shows at Bentley College Art Gallery, Thomas Crane Library and Bazza Gallery in Oklahoma City. Her work is represented in numerous corporate collections in Oklahoma City and Pittsburgh.

Portfolio requirements for all three South Shore Art Center scholarships are eight examples of the student's best work including a self-portrait or portrait done from life, a still-life drawing from actual objects and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any medium. Quality slides or pictures of 3-D work will be accepted. Slides or photographs of work must be marked with applicant's name, title of work, actual size and arrows to indicate top of slide or photograph.

Work should not exceed 18" by 24" and must be matted but not framed.

All applicants will be informed of the jury's decisions by the South Shore Art Center and the winners of the scholarships will be announced at graduation exercises. The scholarships will be paid directly to the winners' schools at the beginning of the second semester and will be applied to tuition costs.

The scholarships are open to all students attending South Shore schools--public or private--and who will graduate in 1985. Any questions regarding the scholarships or portfolio requirements may be directed to the Center, 383-9548.

Ethiopian fundraiser set for Sunday

Chris Carter, African Program Coordinator for Grassroots International, will address a fundraiser to be held in Scituate, Sunday, April 21.

Carter, who was formerly an economic planner and community organizer in rural New England has also served as public information officer and education and fundraising coordinator for Oxfam America.

In addition to his career as an independent radio producer, Carter spends many hours each week with Grassroots International, the Cambridge based non-profit organization that will oversee the purchase and delivery of the animals.

Brenda Delaney and Donna McGee, co-chairmen of the 'Donkey Project' said the Marxist government of Ethiopia will not allow air passage over the war zones and will even shoot down Red Cross and United Nations planes, despite pleas by the United States and other neutral governments that "mercy corridors" be established so that relief can be brought to drought victims.

A reception-theatre party will be held Sunday, April 12, at the Bell Buoy Restaurant and the Playhouse Theatre at 2 p.m. in Scituate Harbor.

Information regarding tickets or sponsorship may be obtained by calling Karen Corcoran at 383-6767, Robin Brewer at 749-8551, Anne Scully at 925-0888, Paula Buckley at 837-2177, Julie Devlin at 545-2665, or Karen DeTellis at 337-0199.

Paul Devlin Jr. passes a check to Brenda Delaney, co-chairman of the Donkey Project. Allan Medici (right) owner of the New Bell Buoy is offering his restaurant for the upcoming fundraising reception.

Sen. William Golden reports

State Sen. William Golden was one of four senators to succeed in offering an amendment to the Fiscal '85 Supplementary Budget.

The amendment provided funding to the State Department of Food and Agriculture to allow regulations to implement a generic environmental impact study on the use of herbicides along public rights of way.

South Shore residents earlier have voiced concern over use of toxic and hazardous chemicals to kill vegetation along power line rights of way.

The funds obtained by Sen. Golden will allow the state to control the use of these toxic substances in order to protect the public health.

Sen. Golden said, "I am very pleased as a freshman legislator to have been successful in funding a key step in the solution to a critical environmental problem. Direct exposure to herbicides either through air or drinking water contamination can pose a significant health risk. We have now begun to focus on this problem and take specific steps to avoid what could be an insidious public health risk."

Education Meeting

Monday, April 22, at 4 p.m. at the Martinson Junior High School in Marshfield, Senator William Golden has planned a meeting with Gerry Indelicato, special Advisor on Educational Affairs to Governor Dukakis.

The purpose of this meeting is to brief educators in the district on the current status of the Education Bill (H. 5900).

Sen. Golden and Gerry Indelicato will be available to discuss the bill and answer any questions you may have.

April Office Hours

Sen. Golden will be conducting April office hours in the District on the following dates. The Senator or his Administrative Aide will be present.

Marshfield, Town Hall, April 24, 9 to 10 a.m.
Scituate, Town Hall, April 24, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Natural Science Center antique sale Sunday

Going, Going — antiques and collectibles, goods and services at the Benefit Auction for the South Shore Natural Science Center, in Norwell, Sunday, April 21 at Derby Academy, Hingham. On this fun-filled afternoon, Auctioneer Michael Lynch from Beaton Path Antiques will be auctioning diverse and exciting items which will fit every pocketbook.

Come, bid on an old square handmade, all cotton quilt in soft rose and white, antique tools, a four-drawer pine chest, a 75-year old glass vase in soft, iridescent shades or some hand-painted French china and an old Victorian chair.

There will be tickets to the Nickerson Theater, Celtics games and a Whale Watch on the briny deep to Stellwagen Bank. Dinners from a number of first-class restaurants on the South Shore; cooking lessions and frozen desserts for gourmet tastes will be up for bids. Take home a new Head Pro tennis racquet.

For the yard, Garden Craft has contributed merchandise worth $150. Offered to the highest bidder is a truckload of screened loam, also, 6 yards of wood chips. For the youngsters you can bid on a birthday party complete with puppet show or a sightseeing flight over Hyannis donated by Hyannis Aviation. This is an opportunity to become the proud owner of an original pen and ink drawing of Jacobs Pond Trail by up and coming Norwell artist, Ben Fuller — his work has been seen in Yankee Magazine. Want to go 'fishin,' bid on a custom built saltwater fishing rod. There's a special for the ladies, from Personal Best Limited in Pembroke — a salon pack consisting of massage, mudpack, facial and manicure. If you purchase too much to carry home, drive it home in a used car from Paul Young Motors.

See you there at the South Shore Natural Science Center Benefit Auction on Sunday, April 21 at Derby Academy Burditt Avenue in Hingham. Preview at 11 a.m. Auction from 1 to 4 p.m. Light luncheon and drinks available. $2 donation at the door. For further information call 659-2559.

BERRY BASKETS

Collect strawberries in your own hand-crafted Berry Basket. Learn to make this useful and charming basket at the South Shore Natural Science Center on Wednesday, April 24 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This is a woven flat reed basket with a lift in the bottom to distribute the weight of the fruit. Susan Pithie, Instructor. Fee: $22 members; $25 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For information, call 659-2559.

ANIMALS

Martin Katler, biologist and naturalist, will conduct a minicourse on Animal Behavior at South Shore Natural Science Center on Wednesday, April 24 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Why do different animals react to the same condition in a different manner? With Katler learn what to look for in order to interpret the meaning of animal behavior. Gain an understanding of how animals fit into their environment and how their behavior relates to it. Become acquainted with animal mimicry, aggression patterns, behavior toward territorial rights and mating habits. Slides, lecture and lots of outside observation.

Local artist paints with a stroke of sensitivity

The flowing melody of which Ketcham spoke is particularly evident in his 'love' of figure painting. His figures are alive with a rare vibrancy, usually found in more mature artists. In the relatively short life of this artist, he has been able to capture the essence that creates humanity from the stroke of a brush.

In a passing reference to his art, Ketcham said, "simplicity is a virtue." But there is nothing simplistic about this artist's talents.

Ketcham was a former president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and has acted in a variety of roles. He is presently singing with the Unicorn Singers of Hingham.

"Painting is color," said Ketcham. "The entire picture must integrate. There must be a counterpoint; a feeling of music in a painting; some sort of melody."

"Ideas can take material form," said Ketcham, "but craft holds the object together. You can not separate craft from art."

He has taken this philosophy with him into the theatre and brought it together in his theatrical set designs. "It is a very interesting and sometimes intricate art form," said Ketcham. "There is a combination of a mixture of mediums."

Set designing is creating a space in which actors can work and an audience can feel it's presence," he continued.

Artistic talents, are at times, said to be inherent, and in Ketcham's family this is true. His mother, Helen Ketcham, is a published author. Her Gothic novel, "A Mistress of Wynd's", done under the pen name of Meg Haviland, has been quite successful.

According to Ketcham, the first showing of his paintings will be in a one-man show in Cohasset, sometime in early summer.

This should be a show that true lovers of art should not miss. It is not often that a young artist of his caliber displays such emotions and sensitivity on canvas.

When considering subjects to paint, one might not consider an old pair of tennis shoes a thing of beauty, able to emit emotions. But through Ketcham's eyes and interpretation, that worn pair of Addidas is transformed into an experience of emotion and beauty.

To be a good painter of pretty pictures is one thing. But to be an 'artist' is quite another. One who paints from the soul, and allows that soul to be experienced upon viewing the painting, is an 'artist.'

Art is a subjective thing. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder. But with a Scott Ketcham painting, beauty is in the eyes that behold it. His soul is revealed and you feel that. His paintings are truly musical.

Metco Host Families:

Please note there will be no Metco Dinner in Boston on Sunday, April 28, as reported last week. No new date has been set.

SRA tests

SRA Achievement Tests will be administered at Deer Hill School on April 23, 24 and 25, and during the week of April 29 at Osgood School. Reading Readiness tests will be given to kindergarten students at this time. Osgood Principal Jack Creamer advises parents, "We will make every effort to minimize any stress associated with these tests and simply encourage you to have your children enjoy a good night's sleep and come to school with their usual enthusiasm."

Sweatshirt sale

One more week to order Osgood School sweatshirts! The crew neck and hooded-style shirts are on display in the Osgood hall and are priced at $10 and $12.50 respectively. Encourage school spirit and help fund a P.S.O. enrichment program. Call JoAnne Chittick (383-9220) or Kyle Lubitz (383-6150) for more information.

Visit diorama

While examining the sweatshirts, be sure to stroll by the enchanting fairy tale creation of visiting artist Syma and Osgood students. During her residency, she inspired the children to create magical dioramas depicting favorite folk and fairy tales or nursery rhymes. Now these dioramas have been transformed by Syma, her core group students, and parent volunteers into a wonderland wall including a beanstalk and castle. An "open house" was held Friday, April 12, so that parents could admire the "Installation in the Hallway."

Jr. High orientation

Students making the transition from Deer Hill to the Junior High School need their parents' support and understanding. School administrators will offer guidance and insight to parents of current sixth grade students at the Junior High Orientation next Thursday, April 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the New Study Hall at the high school.

Spring Concert

Reserve Wednesday, May 1, for an evening of easy listening at the Spring Concert from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The Senior Concert Band and Senior Jazz Band as well as the Junior Band will perform under the direction of Steve Shirofsky. Refreshments will be served following the concert.

Generous contributions

"Reach out and touch someone." P.S.O. Phone-a-thon callers took Ma Bell's advice Wednesday night, April 10, and called every family in Cohasset with school-age children.

In a warm and gratifying response, parents proved by their generous pledges how much they care about their children's education. Phone-a-thon workers tallied over 800 calls and recorded pledges ranging from $200 on down. Envelopes have been mailed and returns are already stuffing Box 30 at the Post Office.

President Robin Shurbier remarked, "Apparently the town is aware of the P.S.O. and appreciates its efforts on behalf of the students. Parents have been very generous this year in their praise and their pledges."

The Parent School Organization would like to thank realtors Coastal Country Properties, Dean & Hamilton, Dwyer & Mullin, Hunneman and Co., and Petersen Realtors, as well as school administrators, who made their offices and telephones available to Phone-a-thon callers. Special thanks also to Dwyer's Cleaners for accommodating the many changes on their community billboard.

At the next meeting of the P.S.O. board the agenda will include a discussion of the Phone-a-thon, slate of officers and committee chairmen for '85-'86, and plans for the May annual meeting. All interested persons are invited to attend, Thursday, April 25, at 7:45 at the high school.

Easton urges parents' support of budget

By Audrey Louison

In the wake of the budget defeat in Hanson, Vo-Tech Superintendent Clifford Easton is calling on parents and faculty to stand up at town meetings in support of the school's budget.

Easton said he was "concerned" that at the Hanson meeting, no parents stood up to defend him or the school during the 45 minutes he listened to criticism from townspeople. He said that only one person spoke in favor of the budget, a man that Easton said he met for the first time at the meeting.

Easton said that prior to the vote he had sent letters to parents of Vo-Tech's 58 Hanson students, but none had voiced support at the meeting. "It troubles me that the people who campaigned to join the region would now jeopardize the future of this school."

Hanson was the first town to vote against the budget. Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate and Rockland have approved the $3.1 million budget.

Whitman, Hanover, and Abington will vote in May.

Easton reiterated his position that Hanson acted illegally by voting to reduce their assessment from $191,000 to $130,000. Easton claims that, based on the regional agreements, towns can vote only to support or oppose the budget; they cannot change it.

School Committee members were angry that Hanson moved to level fund their assessment at the same time that Hanson student enrollment at Vo-Tech is rising.

"How can they put a ceiling on spending when we are accommodating more of their students?" asked David Chittim of Cohasset. "Do the Selectmen expect the other towns to pick up the cost of their increases?" added Lloyd Patriquin.

Easton said he was confident that their proposal would prevail in the other towns, but urged Vo-Tech supporters to go to the town meetings and show their support.

"The regional agreement is like a marriage bond," said Easton. "When the towns voted to join, they knew it was a commitment for life and they should honor that agreement."

If the budget is defeated in two other towns, the School Committee will have to draft another one and call special town meetings to approve it. If the process is not completed by September 1, the school cannot open for the school year.

Vo-Tech to Seek SBAB funds

Assistant Supt. Warren Anderson told the School Committee Vo-Tech is pursuing state funds to help pay for five capital improvement projects which will cost the region $340,000.

Anderson said that the action was being taken at the suggestion of member towns in an effort to reduce budget expenses for the improvements. The projects are slated for the Hanover campus grounds and buildings.

A design selection committee appointed by the school board must select finalists from the ten contractors who have submitted plans fo the projects. Their plans will be submitted to the state.

The money would come from the School Building Assistance Bureau. Paid over five years, the reimbursement could total 60 to 70 percent of the cost. This amount would ultimately reduce the annual assessments charged to member towns and would help compensate for the projected shortfall in the budget caused by a $149,000 loss in state educational aid.

Anderson said the Board of Education will meet in June to determine the eligibility of the projects and approve design bids.

The five projects include roof repairs, repaving the parking lot, relining two boilers, replacing a boiler burner and exploring the possibility of an underground sewerage disposal system.

Teacher Dismissal Rejected

Two Vo-Tech teachers escaped dismissal last week when school Supt. Clifford Easton refused to reveal to the School Committee his reasons for requesting the action.

Under law, teachers must be informed by April 15 if there is a chance that they may not be rehired for the following year. Easton had requested at the April 8 meeting that the School Committee not renew teaching contracts for George Hoyt and Richard Anstead.

Easton said he had been advised by counsel not to discuss his reasoning in an open meeting, and told the board members simply that he was recommending termination. Easton told the board that by not following his advice, they would be responsible for the consequences.

The committee, which usually follows the administration's advice regarding staffing, is officially the hiring and firing body for the region and must approve such actions by the Superintendent.

In this case, however, members agreed they could not fire the two instructors without evidence that it would be appropriate. "We aren't dealing with equipment here," said John Doyle, Rockland regional representative. "We are dealing with two men."

Hoyt, a graphics art teacher at Vo-Tech for the last five years, will gain tenure if rehired this year. Anstead has taught drafting at the school for three years. Both had received favorable evaluations and recommendations in the past.

The Committee criticized Easton for not giving them sufficient back-up materials or time to investigate the matter. "You have put us in a corner," Cohasset's David Chittim told Easton. "We are in the position of turning down the superintendnet, of whom I am supportive, or possibly doing a disservice to the two men."

Whitman's member Lloyd Patriquin suggested that the meeting go into executive session, closed to the public, in order to discuss the matter in detail. But Hoyt and Anstead, as is their right, insisted that any discussion be held in an open meeting.

In light of Easton's resolute refusal to offer any support for his position, the committee voted unanimously, on a motion by Robert Molla, to indefinitely postpone the superintendent's request. Because of the April 15 deadline, postponement effectively defeats the measure.

South Shore Teacher's Federation president Frank McKeen said that Easton's proposal had caught him and two instructors by surprise. "We fail to understand why this action has been taken," said McKeen. "We hope it's a dead issue now." McKeen refused to speculate on Easton's reasons for recommending the firings.

Howard joins Dwyer & Mullin ERA

Marcia C. Howard of Wampatuck Ave. in Scituate has joined Dwyer & Mullin ERA, announced Robert J. Mullin, president of the 12-year-old Cohasset real estate firm.

Mrs. Howard, who began her career in real estate in 1983, has successfully completed Course I of the Realtors Institute of Massachusetts, a continuing education program which deals with subjects such as residential construction and design, listing and pricing properties, and finance and law as they relate to the real estate business. She also attended an ERA training seminar.

Fashions by the sea poster

Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club, will hold their principal fund-raiser of the season for their scholarship fund award with a luncheon and fashion show.

This year the event will take place at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, Wednesday, April 24 featuring the beautiful fashions of "Your Advantage" of Norwell on Rte. 53.

The theme of the Luncheon will be "Fashions By The Sea." The club has commissioned three local students from Scituate High School to display their art talents.

Patricia Bandell, 16, has collaborated the mannequin and dress design with the graphic print of Diane Cilento, 17, a senior at Scitute High. Kim Feraulo, 15, has designed the eye-catching flyer you see posted around the shops.

All of the girls are aspiring to an art career. Diane has been accepted by SMU School of Art; her decisions have not yet been made. She is interested in B.U. School of Graphic Art. Patricia, a model, is interested in a career in Fashion Design.

Scituate can be proud of these students for the time and effort they have donated. The Club coordinated the efforts of the girls with John Crowe, the Art Chairperson of Scitute Schools K - 12. Mr. Crowe stressed the girls worked entirely on their own, with proven professional results.

Tickets for the lunch may be purchased at Mr. John's Hairdress in Scituate Harbor and Quincy Cooperative Bank on Rte. 3A. Further information call Bobbi at 545-1303 or Sue at 545-3616.

Harlem Magicians April 21

One of the finest family entertainment units, the Harlem Magicians, will be coming to Cohasset High School for one game only Sunday, April 21 at 3 p.m.

History is made everytime the Magicians take to the courts, for the simple reason that player-coach, and owner, Marques Haynes adds another game to the over 12,000 he has already played on the hardwood, before millions of fans located in 96 countries around the world.

Playing and coaching the Harlem Magicians, the diminutive Haynes is establishing many new friends, who are seeing him in a new setting and witnessing what some writers have described as "The youngest-oldest professional basketball player in the history of the game."

The Magicians leader, whose team plays all over the states and makes tours for the USO, in order to entertain the U.S. Military Personnel, located abroad, added a new feather in his dribbling cap in 1983 when he appeared in the NBA veteran's game, commemorating the 25th Anniversary of the start of the famous Maurice Stokes Game.

Recreation League foul shooting and lay-up contests will be held at 2 p.m. Advance sale tickets are available at Good Sport and Horizon Video, at a cost of $4 adult and $3 student. Tickets at the door will be $1 more.

The Division III State Champion boys' varisty and Division III State Runner-up girls' varsity basketball teams will be introduced at halftime of the Magicians game.

Join the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club for this fun-filled afternoon!

Notre Dame honors

Sister Anne Monica Ruane, S.N.D., principal of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, has announced the names of students who have earned Honor Roll eligibility for the third marking period. Students on Principal's List qualify with a quality point average of 3.9 with all grades B or higher. Those earning First Honors have a quality point average of 3.5 with all grades B- or higher. Students receiving Second Honors have a quality point average of 3.0 with all grades B- or higher.

Senior Julie O'Rourke of Cohasset has achieved Second Honors for the term.

Friends meeting

The Weymouth Chapter of Friends of the New England Home for Little Wanderers will meet at the home of Mrs. Lydia Hill at 25 Hammond Ave. at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 24 to hear the results of the chapter's recent Easter sales.

Plans will be discussed for its Annual Garage, Bake and Handmades Sale to be held at 580 Pond Street, South Weymouth, Saturday, May 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Proceeds from all of the Friends' activities benefit the New England Home for Little Wanderers, which is now in the midst of a capital campaign to raise funds for badly needed renovations and additions to its existing buildings, including the administration offices and Knight Children's Center located in Jamaica Plain, Longview Farm residence for adolescent boys in Walpole and two adolescent residences for girls in the Boston area.

Anyone interested in further information about the New England Home or the Friends may contact the Development Office of the home directly at 232-8600 or any Friends' member at the local chapter's Garage, Bake and Handmades Sale on May 11.

Plans for annual brunch

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset will be honored for her legislative service to the Town of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull at a reception scheduled for Sunday, April 28 at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The brunch is scheduled to begin at 11:30 a.m. and run until 1:30 p.m.

Rep. Murray has served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives since 1977. She is a member of three key legislative committees: Taxation, Local Affairs and Counties. She represents the Third Plymouth District.

"Rep. Murray has been a forceful advocate for the interests of this district — of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull — during her years in the House," said Mrs. Raymond G. Buckley, an organizer of the brunch.

"She has led the fight against casino gambling. It has been a difficult fight, but Rep. Murray has won the fight," Mrs. Buckley said. "And she has fought to preserve the unique charm and dignity of our home towns. We of the committee hope to see many of her friends at this brunch in her honor."

Persons interested in attending may obtain ticket information from Lillian Murray at 383-0695 or from Mrs. Buckley at 383-0304. Donation is $20.

Summer reading clinic

The Cohasset Reading Clinic will offer its annual six week summer program for children, young adults and adults with reading, spelling and writing difficulties. This is open to all students in area towns.

The clinic will be held July 1 through August 8 at Cohasset High School. It will be directed by Marcia H. Murphy, a Massachusetts General Hospital certified reading therapist.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 85P0907E1

Estate of MARY McELWAIN COLLINS AKA MARY M. COLLINS late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that HORACE S. NICHOLS of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK and GRANT H. GRAY of CUMBERLAND in the State of RHODE ISLAND be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 8, 1985.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the eighth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-five.

Educational programs available to learning disabled

Mary Chatillon and Marcia Murphy from the Language Disorders Unit at Massachusetts General Hospital provided a film about learning disabilities which was shown to a concerned group of individuals at the Community Center last Wednesday night.

The film provided information geared toward an understanding of what dyslexia is, methods of testing, and treatment available through the Language Disorders Unit.

It explained the many difficulties that dyslexics must face in spelling and letter formation which make it difficult to put even simple thoughts onto paper.

They may also experience difficulties understanding and delivering spoken instructions, have word-finding problems, or a confused sense of direction. Almost all have a history of difficulties learning to read, write, and spell. They are often very bright, but their passage to a world of print is not easy.

These children and/or adults may have special talents or abilities, but without help, they are forced to live on the outskirts of society and often fail to perform on a level that is consistent with their potential, they explained. The emotional cost can be devastating. The humiliation and frustration of constant failure can lead to feelings of inadequacy, anger, anxiety, hopelessness, depression, and fear, according to Chatillon and Murphy.

It is suggested that there are as many types of dyslexia as there are dyslexics. Research provides no answers or solutions; however, an educational approach which addresses cognitive strengths and weaknesses is widely recoginzed as a most effective treatment.

They may also experience difficulties understanding and delivering spoken instructions, have word-finding problems, or a confused sense of direction.

The Language Disorders Unit at Massachusetts General Hospital has been providing this kind of treatment for over 50 years and has helped thousands of dyslexics of all ages. In 1983 the unit served over 12,000 patients.

A remedial approach is taken which is based upon the Orton-Gillingham alphabetic phonetic method. It is a highly structured, multi-sensory program for teaching children and adults who have not been successful in learning to read, spell, or write with conventional classroom methods despite possession of average or above average intelligence.

After an appointment has been made at the unit for evaluation, the patient is then given a cortical function test, followed by a discussion of diagnosis and plan of treatment.

When a patient is diagnosed as dyslexic, individual educational therapy is recommended and specific recommendations are made to schools. Some patients are recommended to special schools, or to tutors who are trained with the language disorders unit and many are referred to the units disabilities reading clinic.

Another area of participation is support groups for adults. This provides an opportunity for adult dyslexics to discuss interest, problems, coping strategy and needs.

Several participants of the program who were present Wednesday evening expressed their gratitude for the benefits that they have personally experienced by working with the Orton-Gillingham approach. They have found successful ways to deal with their dyslexic problems and highly recommended the program to others.

Marcia Murphy will be sponsoring a summer reading clinic for children, young adults, and adults with specific language disabilities at the Cohasset High School. For complete details and information contact Marcia at 383-0839.

Also, there are training programs available for teachers wishing to specialize in the teaching of pupils with specific language disabilities. Members of the training course spend 300 hours working at the clinic. Upon satisfactory completion of the course, a certificate is granted by Massachusetts General Hospital.

A college degree or equivalent is required for admission and teaching experience, though helpful is not required.

An appointment for an interview must be made between January 1 and March 31 with the units director of reading at the disability clinic. The phone number is (617) 726-2763. Formal application is made after this interview.

Awards presented

Alna Ekberg and Barbara Holander of the Cohasset office of Hunneman and Co., Inc., Better Homes and Gardens were recently presented awards by Liz Murdy, manager.

Ekberg was presented with the top producer award, having listed and sold nearly $3 million of property in her first year with the company.

Alna Ekberg

Also in her first year with Hunneman, Hollander received an award for listing the highest number of properties in the Cohasset office. She has sold and listed more than $2 million of property.

They are both members of the Medallion Club which is an organization of million dollar brokers sponsored by Better Homes and Gardens. Holland er and Ekberg are longtime South Shore real estat brokers. Their manager, Liz Mundy, credits thei success to understanding the needs of customers i their search for the perfect home, and their professional knowledge of marketing property.

Hunneman's Cohasset office is located at 17 South Main Street, and is one of 20 residential offices.

Barbara Holander

New associate

Deborah Cunningham of Cohasset is the newest associate of Home Realty Center in Hingham.

Deborah attended Sandhills Community College in North Carolina where she studied horticulture. After graduation, she and her husband, Robert lived in Houston, Texas, before moving to Cohasset a year ago.

They have a two-year old son, Robin, and enjoy gardening, sailing, and interior decorating.

Jayne Nussdorfer

Nussdorfer joins Hallmark

Jayne Nussdorfer recently joined Hallmark's 100 Properties "90-100 Plan", according to Chris Ford, president of the Cohasset-based firm.

The 90-100 plan is a radical departure from the traditional format where salespersons receive approximately fifty percent of the commissions generated in a real estate transaction. Under the 90-100 plan, participating sales associates are actually in business for themselves, but share in all of the benefits of a large professional firm, with a national referral network. Associates retain from 90-100 percent of the commissions they generate and are responsible for a proportionate share of the company's overhead costs as well as their own advertising and related business expenses.

Nussdorfer has been active in real estate sales in the Cohasset area for several years. She and her husband Dan also own and manage rental income property, and are presently in the process of building a new home on Jerusalem Road.

Hallmark 100 is located in the Brigatine East Building on Route 3A. It is a fully computerized office and is affliliated with the All Points Relocation Network.

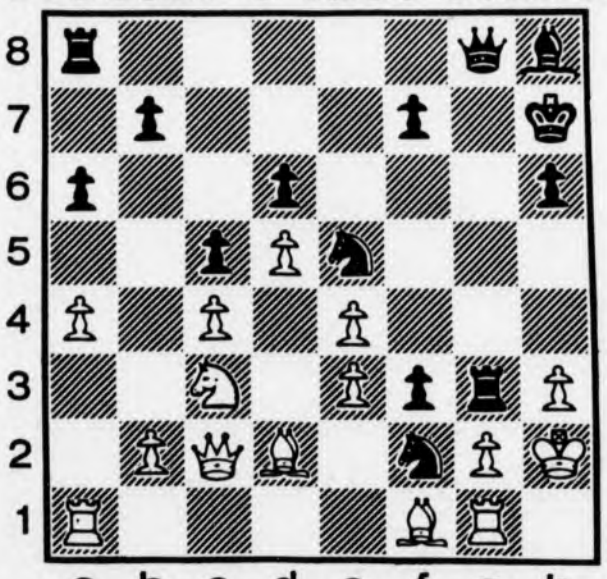
Chess release

If competitive chess is what you want, then you should have been in New York March 30-April 7. In what has become one of the most prestigious tournaments in the U.S., the New York Open has well over a thousand wood pushers turnout to do battle for large cash prizes. The international section started March 30 and ended April 7, first prize $18,000, not bad for eight games of chess (one round per day). The amateur sections 2-6 began April 4 and also finished on the 7th with prizes starting at $6,000 first prize in section two down $1,000 first prize in section six (under 1400 or unrated).

Why am I telling you this now after the fact, you say? Well it's not too late to get your pieces in play. In the not too distant future a similar event will take place in Philadelphia, The 13th Annual World Open June 29-July 8, with a projected price fund of $135,000 with $90,000 guaranteed.

A word to the wise, don't go to win money you may be very disappointed, go to compete and you can't lose.



Incidently my 'fish' score in N.Y. was nothing to write home about (4 wins, 4 losses), but it was still well worth the trip. I leave you this week with an unusually short game which I had the good fortune to win in round 7, and of course the all new chess quiz.

One more check: Anyone know what blacks opening is called?

1. P-K4 P-K4. 2. N-KB3 P-Q4. 3. NXP B-Q3. 4. P-Q4 PXP. 5. N-QB3 Q-K2. 6. B-QB4 BXN. 7. N-Q5 Q-Q3. 8. PXB QXP. 9. B-B4 QXP (as good a move as any). 10. NXP+ Black resigns. Not exactly a candiate for a brilliancy prize, but a fun match, total game time about 15 minutes.

"The Krugerrand stops here"

By Darrell Berger

Commentary

The South Shore Council for Human Relations wrote a letter to Donald Winn, owner of the Hanover Coin Shop, asking him not to sell Krugerrands, the South African gold coin.

The South African government practices racial segregation and oppression as an official policy. The council feels that selling the coin gives a kind of tacit support to that government.

Donald Winn has sold one Krugerrand this year, to a former South African citizen as a special favor. He gets maybe one or two requests a month for gold coins. He encourages his customers to buy the Canadian Maple Leaf coin instead. Winn is against apartheid, but since he does virtually no business in Krugerrands anyhow, he ignored the letter.

March 23 he was picketed by a dozen or so people on behalf of the Council on Human Rights. They presented him with a pledge to sign, stating he would not sell the South African coin. If he signed, he was told the pickets would leave. Feeling coerced, he refused.

Something is wrong here. Winn and the Council on Human Rights have a common interest. Both are against apartheid. Yet they ended up on different sides of a picket line. Why?

Winn probably should have responded to the original letter, letting them know his basic sympathy for their cause. Together they might have come up with a more constructive alternative to the picket.

The council should be more sensitive to the human rights of their own neighbors. A famous Ben Shahn poster reads "You have not converted a man because you have silenced him." You do not win support for a cause by picketing a local businessman and making a moral issue over a part of his business that is almost too small to measure, or by asking him to agree with your position in exchange for making the pickets go away.

If Winn only sells a very, very few Krugerrands anyway, why wouldn't he sign the pledge? It would cost him nothing and give the Council on Human Rights what it wanted.

It was the principal of the thing. He didn't want anyone telling him what he could or could not sell, even a group whose sentiments he might share.

This is the familiar conflict of civil liberties. The free market, whether it be of ideas or coins, cannot be selectively free. Hustler magazine will fold when the demand for it ends. So will the Krugerrand. You can deplore its sale, but you can't deny it's right to the marketplace and still have an open society.

Donald Winn called the whole thing a tempest in a teapot. He was wrong. The small shop in the small town with the small picket might in itself be unimportant, but within it lies the most important issues before us.

The world is a lot smaller than it used to be. "Internal matters" of foreign nations aren't as internal as they used to be. Not when foreign cartels and border wars can turn off our oil supply. Not when electronics can bring images of starvation and apartheid into our homes and images of American affluence and avarice can be brought to the third world. And especially not when increasing numbers of missles are minutes away from almost every human being in the developed world.

The frustration and outrage against apartheid is real and appropriate. Centering that outrage on the single Krugerrand that Donald Winn sold this year is not.

The Hanover Coin Shop isn't the enemy. The Krugerrand itself isn't the enemy. Fear and prejudice is the enemy and they have no place of national origin. Along with whatever publicity the picket created, also created was a fair amount of animosity when none existed before, and the opportunity for the council to be discounted as do-gooders and bleeding hearts.

It's awfully hard to get people's attention these days. It's hard to get them to sustain interest or commitment. A picket like this one, as part of a multi-faceted attack on apartheid, probably seemed like a logical, effective action to take. Maybe so. But when it can be dismissed, rightly or wrongly, as a tempest in a teapot, then the main purpose becomes diluted beyond effectiveness.

If the Krugerrands really do stop, it will finally be because people like the Council on Human Rights discover new and better ways of eliciting the support of citizens like Donald Winn, rather than their hostility or contempt.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

ANGLER'S CORNER

by George Doucette

"Dust off the fishing rods and find your tackle box," we are ready to get out and start a new season.

The best thing about spring is that with the first warm weather, both salt and fresh water species begin to move and feed regularly. Here are a few hints on how to enjoy some early spring action in saltwater.

Cod: Moving and feeding along rocky beaches at night. Use clams and seaworms on bottom rigs. Boat fishermen are enjoying good action three to 10 miles off shore from the North River to Plymouth in 40 to 60 feet of water using cod jigs (9 to 21 ozs.) on the bottom.

Flounder: Just beginning to show up in bays - use seaworms or nightcrawlers on the bottom. Fishermen on the jettys and piers, as well as boaters, will connect.

Tautog: A few off of Duxbury coming on clams fished just off the bottom. Five to eight pounds not uncommon; big fish are due in April and May. Duxbury Bridge is a good hot spot in late April.

Pollack: Due on Stellwagen Bank in April - good fishing with jigs on the bottom.

Shad: Light action fishing will start any day with spinning rod and fly rods as huge schools of fish move up the North River and South River in the annual spring mating ritual. Three to 10 pound fish will be raising havoc with anglers in search of this gamiest of fighters.

Adams Sports and Tackle Annual Shad Derby starts April 1 to June 30, with trophies and prizes to the winners. There are no registration fees, but all fish must be weighed in at Adams on our scale. We have the large selection of shad darts and shad flies available.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 10 key education bill roll calls from the week of April 8 to 12 and also on four roll calls in the Senate.

INITIAL APPROVAL (H 5900)

House 110-31, gave initial approval to the controversial $521 million bill making major changes in the state's public education system. Key provisions include a local option $18,000 minimum teacher salary with the state paying for the increases; an estimated $72 million in state grants to be spent for innovations by local school improvement councils comprised of parents, teachers, and admiinstrators in local buildings; Equal Education Grants for communities that have been spending below the state average for education; statewide testing of students; and regular teacher evaluation.

Supporters said the package is a bold, innovative, and fiscally responsible attempt to truly overhaul the public education system in the state.

Opponents said the package is too costly and contains no provisions for funding. They said it is nothing more than a special interest pay raise bill and will do very little to improve education.

Voting for the bill were Reps. Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn, and Frank Hynes. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Rep. Robert Ambler did not vote.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE CONTROL (H 5900)

House first approved 80-70, then rejected 82-64, an amendment allowing the local school committees, instead of the school improvement councils, to decide how to spend the $72 million in state grants.

Amendment supporters said the council would make recommendations, but the school committee, which is elected and accountable to the voters, would make the final decision.

Opponents said the amendment destroys the councils' powers and noted the councils will look at individual buildings and innovative programs while the school committees look at the district as a whole.

Approving the bills were Reps. William Flynn, Frank Hynes, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Suzanne Bump and Robert Cerasoli rejected the bills.

UNDER 50,000 (H 5900)

House 115-33, rejected an amendment providing that in cities or towns with under 50,000 population, the local school committee take the place of the proposed school improvement council.

Amendment supporters argued there is no need for councils in small communities where parents and teachers already influence school committees and have direct input.

Opponents said the amendment would eliminate the councils in 80 percent of the districts and argued all communities should be treated alike.

Voting for the bill was Reps. William Flynn, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Voting against was Reps. Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, and Frank Hynes.

MORE USES (H 5900)

House 104-38, rejected an amendment which would broaden the allowed uses of the $72 million in grants to school improvement councils, including allowing the funds to be used for current operating costs. Amendment supporters said this makes the bill more flexible and allows the funds to be used for current worthwhile programs which may be short on funds. Opponents said the amendment scuttles the intent of the councils and argued funds should not be used for current operating costs.

Voting for the bill were Reps. William Flynn, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Voting "Nay" were Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli and Frank Hynes.

CITY COUNCIL AND TOWN MEETING (H 5900)

House 98-48, rejected an amendment allowing school committees to spend the $72 million in improvement grants unless the city council or town meeting approves the proposed creation of school improvement councils to decide how the money is spent.

Amendment supporters said this local option provision will allow the local governing body to decide who controls the funds. Opponents said the amendment is designed to kill the councils and claimed it takes power away from parents, teachers, and students.

Voting for the bill was Reps. William Flynn, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Voting "Nay" was Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes.

TEACHERS (H 5900)

House 135-11, rejected an amendment requiring teachers to submit lesson plans quarterly to principals and requiring principals to observe and evaluate each teacher's performance and adherence to the lesson plans four times each year. Amendment supporters said this would address the evaluation process being done by principals and set basic standards. Opponents said the bill already calls for teacher evaluations based on methods established by the Board of Education.

Voting for the bill was Reps. Mann and Murray. Voting against the bill was Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes.

House 118-26, rejected an amendment eliminating the provisions requiring a minimum salary of $18,000 for every teacher with the state paying for the increase. The provision is a local option one effective only in communities where the school committee and appropriating authority accept it.

Amendment supporters said a local option minimum salary is ineffective and claimed that most communities will not approve it because they will eventually have to fund the "ripple effect." They said a minimum salary is not the answer to quality education.

Opponents said the local option aspect is a compromise which allows local communities to decide whether to initiate the $18,000 minimum while insuring the state funds the increase. (A "Yea" vote is against the local option $18,000 minimum salary. A "Nay" vote is for the local option $18,000 minimum salary).

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Flynn, Mann and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes.

SALES TAX (H 5900)

House 105-35, rejected an amendment earmarking a portion of the state sales tax to fund the costs of the education bill. Amendment supporters said this will fully fund the costs from existing revenues over the first three years. Opponents said unding of the package should be dealt with when the general fiscal 1986 budget is considered.

Voting for the bill was Reps. Mann and Murray. Voting against the bill was Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, and Hynes.

SENATE

FLUORIDATION (S 306)

Senate 18-16, rejected a bill providing for lower health insurance rates for dental coverage to residents of communities with water fluoridation systems. Supporters said water fluoridation results in less dental care and argued premium rates should reflect the lower claims.

Opponents said the bill would be difficult to enforce and discriminates against communities which have voted against fluoridation.

Voting for the bill was Sens. William Golden, Anna Buckley, Paul Harold and Edward Kirby.

REGISTRY (S 2184)

Senate 20-10, rejected a budget amendment providing $1.2 million for 60 new positions in the Registry of Motor Vehicles. Amendment supporters argued the Registry has many problems because of recent cutbacks made by the legislature.

Opponents said the new positions are inappropriate in a supplemental budget and should be dealt with in the general fiscal 1986 budget.

Voting for the bill were Sens. Buckley, Golden, Harold and Kirby.

LOCAL AID (S 2184)

Senate 28-7, rejected an amendment to increase the amount of local aid to cities and towns from fiscal 1984 from $860 million to $943 million. Supporters, noting communities received 40 percent of estimated growth revenues in fiscal 1984, said the $83 million increase will result in communities receiving 40 percent of actual growth reveues.

Opponents said it was too late to go back to 1984 and claimed when indirect aid is included, communities have already received close to 40 percent of actual growth revenues.

Sen. Kirby voted for the bill. Sens. Golden and Harold opposed the bill.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Cabin fever's gone for now and it's goodbye to windows sealed tight against cold winds. Flung open, they bring the outside in and with daffodils in every room, we even feel the food we eat should be in keeping with the season. The asparagus I saw last week was irresistible, even though priced at $1.59 a pound and so I welcomed spring with a feast of asparagus on toast. I'll wait till the price comes down before making Judy Holmes' recipe which calls for four pounds of the heavenly stuff.

ASPARAGUS SUPREME

4 lbs. fresh asparagus
2T butter
2T flour
2 c. light cream
1 c. diced cooked ham
1/4 tsp. salt
2 tsp. fresh lemon juice
1/8 tsp. nutmeg
1/4 c. shredded Swiss cheese

Wash and cook asparagus, covered, in an inch of boiling water until tender, about 12 min. Prepare sauce in medium saucepan by melting butter over medium heat. Blend in flour. Remove from heat and stir in cream. Return to heat and cook, stirring until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add ham, lemon juice, nutmeg and cheese. Heat until cheese melts. Drain asparagus. Serve at once with sauce. Serves eight.

The deluge is on here, with spring seed catalogues arriving daily, the latest a complimentary copy of Shepherd's Garden Seeds. Different, in that it offers European vegetable seeds, it has elegant, shaded drawings and recipes using gourmet baby vegetables such as Barletta Baby Onions, Dutch Baby Early Cabbage, tender French Squashes and Filet Green Beans. There's a selection of herb seeds and edible flowers and everything from growing fresh ingredients for Italian, French, Mexican dishes. Please call me if you'd like their address. Here is their way with

BROILED EGGPLANT

Slice an eggplant thin and spread each slice sparingly with mayonnaisse. Then dip each slice in freshly grated Parmesan cheese, covering both sides. Arrange the slices on a no-stick or slightly oiled cookie sheet and broil them on each side just until they are golden brown and crunchy outside and soft and tender inside. And who can wait for the first fresh spring peas? Among their seeds are the French "petits pois," tiny, tender, sweet peas favored by European gourmet cooks. Here is their

PETIT POIS SALAD

3 1/2 c. petit pois peas cooked in a little water until tender, drained and chilled
1 c. sour cream
2 green onions, finely chopped
6 slices bacon, cooked crisp, drained and crumbled
1/2 tsp. salt and freshly ground pepper

Toss peas with the rest of ingredients and serve.

Someone once said that "April is the cruelest month" and that makes plans for the Patriot's Day weekend rather iffy. But for those who are beach crazy, hungering for a day of fishing, or just hoping to spend a lazy spring day with family, a picnic lunch of wine, cheese, fruit and bread may tempt your fancy. Just puttering in the garden can work up an appetite for rhubarb, botanically a vegetable, but used as a fruit. Introduced to New England from Europe about 1800, it was often called "pieplant" and used in tarts, sauces, puddings, punch, jams, jellies and pies. Here is an old favorite sent to us in 1976 by Margaret Ward, one which I have served warm or cold with ice cream or whipped cream.

RHUBARB CRUNCH

1 c. sifted flour
3/4 c. Quaker oats
1 c. light brown sugar
1/2 c. melted butter
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
4 c. cut rhubarb
1 c. light brown sugar
2T cornstarch
1 c. water
1 tsp. lemon flavoring

Combine first six ingredients. Place half mixture in 9" square pan. Add rhubarb. Combine remaining ingredients and cook until thick and clear. Pour over rhubarb and cover with remaining flour mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour.

CREATURE COMFORTS — by Liz Gorfinkle

A common misconception about naturalists is that they are all good at identifying birds.

After countless attempts, I am still capable of getting completely confused.

Fellow naturalists are amazed at how poor I am at identifying birds. They, of course, can usually spot a tiny bird 200 feet up in a tree and list its species, sex and interesting behaviors off the top of their heads in 45 seconds or less. And then they whistle the bird's song in perfect bird pitch.

During conversations with a few skilled birders, I asked about simple bird watching methods.

Warren Harrington, Marshfield's conservation administrator who has been a birder for the last 35 years, said, "If you keep a feeder going, you will see what's in the neighborhood and at the same time get insect control in your yard."

Harrington said birds don't rely on feeders, even in the winter. But throughout the year, they will snack at them.

He suggested the use of a daily field card put out by the Massachusetts Audubon Society. The card, which costs about five cents at the society's South Shore Regional Center in Marshfield (837-9400), lists birds by species with median arrival and departure dates.

Harrington said many of the species we see at our feeders are migratory. For instance, fox sparrows, scarce birds this year, arrived in the first week of March and will leave in the last week of April.

The first common arrivals are grackles, cowbirds and redwing blackbirds. Many of the robins we see spent the winter here, he said.

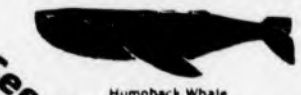
A popular feeder visitor is the evening grosbeak. The yellow, black and white bird usually arrives around November and stays until early May. "This year they arrived in the middle of January, because of great feed up north," he said.

Beverly Litchfield, expert birder from the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, provided tips on how to watch out for birds' safety at feeders. "The biggest obstacle to bird feeding is cats. Don't let them out in the early morning and late afternoon, the times when birds are very hungry and not very alert."

Litchfield said a variety of hawks are attracted to feeding stations. Beware of the sharp-shinned hawk (common, robin-sized predator), the goshawk (adults are good-sized and pearly grey) and the Cooper's hawk (medium-sized with banded tail).

All three are long-tailed hunters with short, rounded wings that help them dart through the woods. "It's very necessary to not have food aimlessly thrown in the open, but thrown in (cover such as a) brush pile. And place feeders near cover," she said.

And what is good food for birds? Barbara Devine, a life-long birder and a teacher/naturalist at the center, said the best is natural: cranberries, popcorn, peanut butter, commercial seed mixes, suet (usually beef fat).



You can fill an old onion bag full of suet and hang it from a tree branch. Or you can melt suet in a double boiler and mix in seed, peanut butter or both.

Pour the mixture into an empty can of any size, let cool then pry out. Devine said you can put this treat in an onion bag, commercial suet holder or in a peanut butter stick.

A peanut butter stick is a scrap piece of wood drilled with a few, inch-wide, shallow holes. It's perfect for holding peanut butter or anything sticky.

Devine said hanging feeders with coated wire will protect tree limbs. And the slippery surface of a record strung on the wire will discourage squirrels.

Educational overhaul '85. . .U-Haul Mike Dukakis '86

Reach for your pocketbooks, the legislature is in session. As the weather warms, as the Red Sox soar atop the American League, your pocketbook is in its greatest peril; for it is precisely at this time that the legislature in its perversity is most inclined to vote the big ticket items you will be paying for in the 1990's. A case in point is local education overhaul, which passed the Massachusetts House last week on the day the Sox copped their third straight win over the New York (expletive deleted.)

The first thing we optimists of early spring need to get straight is that education overhaul '85 is merely a variant of "education reform" as discredited in '84. But recently the all mighty Boston Globe, recognizing that the former name had suffered what philologists call pejoration, renamed it local education "overhaul"—much the way the immortal Chicago Packers of the N.B.A. were renamed the "Zephyrs" shortly before being run out of town. What the proposal really should be called is "education U-Haul," because you are going to be paying the $521 million it is said to be going to cost in the first three years.

Perhaps the taxpayer should be grateful for small favors from Beacon Hill: in a number of ways education U-Haul '85 is not as terrible as education reform '84, a fiasco that would have mandated that local school committees spend half their time producing paperwork, not educating kids. The improvements is this year's proposal include:

. . . Estimated start-up costs for the first three years have been reduced slightly from $566 million to $521 million—still too much given reduced enrollments and the likelihood that federal budget reductions will require remedial spending by the state in many areas including education.

. . . Unlike the 1984 proposal, education U-Haul '85 would have to be appropriated each year, it would not be a single half billion dollar expenditure. Should you not like it you will have a fighting chance to get your legislator to change his vote in 1986 and 1987.

. . . The shocking plan to give the Secretary of Education arbitrary power to deny funds to school districts that displease him is, as near as I can tell (sometimes these things get camouflaged in the language of legislation) absent.

. . . Absent also is early retirement for teachers—an odious proposal given that there is not and never will be an early retirement for those who pay taxes.

. . . The previous proposal to mandate a minimum $18 thousand salary for teachers has been replaced by a "recommendation" for same backed by a commitment by the state to fund increases.

. . . Education U-Haul proposes "equal education grants" for communities spending less than the statewide average on education. This item is a potential can-of-worms/bottomless-pit. It tends to reward the inefficient at the expense of the efficient. But, as I have argued in this space before, some effort by the state to equalize spending for education is in everyone's interest. It is in the interest of the relatively affluent communities of the South Shore because all it would take is one successful court suit on behalf of one urban child to put all the state's schools under some judge. Come that to pass, if you have moved to the South Shore to escape busing, your next move might have to be to Rhode Island.

But despite both some good points and the removal or moderation of some of the worst features of education reform '84, education U-Haul '85 remains rotten to its core. That is because at the core of education U-Haul '85 is the creation of 1,600 councils in schools across the state. These councils would consist of parents, teachers, and administrators, and they would be given $72 million to spend as it might please them, and to do so independently of elected local school committees.

That would hardly help our school committees in their gargantuan task of providing better schools. Already overregulated with state and federal mandates and constraints, they would be losing one more increment of control over budget, and therefore over policy. And special interests would have one more juicy target to lobby.

Furthermore, in addition to the special interests, these councils would surely attract the professional screamers who inhabit every town and show up at public meetings, but who have to stay minimally in line at formal school committee sessions. Mere concerned parents, on the other hand, would be discouraged from participating in the education of their children by the creation of these school councils. Here's how:

Imagine you are a busy, working, hard-pressed, but concerned parent who attend the P.T.O. faithfully and who attend school committee meetings when necessary. But you find that isn't enough, now you have to attend "school council" meetings. If you choose not to attend, you surrender your voice to the screamers, the professional meeting-goers, and the special interests. But if you decide to suffer that crowd, it is almost inevitable that your participation in the P.T.O. and the school committee will decrease. School committees and P.T.O.'s, then, will see reduced input of mere citizens, and a corresponding increase in the influence of special interests.

Thus, at a time when school committees and P.T.O.'s need nothing so much as the directed attention of parents and teachers, the proposed councils would be a cacaphonous distraction. The $72 million the state proposes to give them to spend guarantees it beyond the shadow of a doubt. Take it from a reporter who has taken in a few more public meetings than six packs in his 42 years.

What, then, would school councils really accomplish? They would U-Haul Mike Dukakis back into office, that's what they would accomplish. $72 million of your tax dollars would be divided among 1,600 schools. That comes to $45 thousand per school—not exactly enough to turn a school around. But it is sure enough to buy new outfits for the cheerleaders, and, what is at the heart of the matter, to make members of the school councils feel important—important enough the Democratic majority in the Massachusetts House reckons, to work for Mike Dukakis in 1986.

What we have, therefore, is not so much an education overhaul at the local level as a Dukakis Coalition overhaul at the local level. The proposed school councils conform perfectly to the modus operandi of the 1982 Dukakis election campaign: Create an elite by buttering up interest groups around their pet issues. Then use the elite as a source of highly motivated campaign workers. In 1982 a variety of single issue councils were created under the aegis of the privately-financed Dukakis campaign committee. It was a legitimate and a brilliant stratagem.

Now, however, they want to recruit volunteers at the public trough—prime them to do political battle in 1986 with $72 million of your taxes, and it stinks. If it were otherwise, if the intent were not political, they would simply send the $72 million windfall to the duly elected school committees who properly have the responsibility of deciding how to spend education moneys.

In short, the proposal to create school councils cannot be justified, and it cannot be explained except as Mike Dukakis' "Trojan Horse" for 1986. Yes, and out of Mike's Trojan Horse will pour hundreds of earnest Dukakis campaign workers knocking often on your door in 1986, and you the taxpayer will have paid for it in the name of education.

And that is wrong.

☐ With income tax time approaching may I remind you that golf is a lot like taxes — you drive hard to get to the green, then wind up in the hole.

☐ He said his golf was improving: "Today I hit a ball-in-one."

☐ When I was working on the biography of former NYC Mayor Bill O'Dwyer, he told me that when he was running for District Attorney, he would often appear on the platform with a piece of paper in his hand, ostensibly covered with notes. Looking around the hall, he would say, "Hello Jo, hello Harry, I didn't know there would be so many friends here tonight. I don't need a prepared speech to talk to you." Then he would crumble and throw away the piece of paper. A reporter who had seen O'Dwyer do this in a few Brooklyn neighborhoods picked up the paper one night. It was an old laundry bill.

☐ I think it was Horace who said, "No poems can live long or please that are written by water drinkers."

☐ If you want to put your guests in a traveling mood, start showing them slides of your last trip. This recalls a definition of a tourist: a person who drives thousands of miles so he can be photographed standing in front of his car. Incidentally, because of the endless superhighways under construction, America will become a wonderful place to drive in — if you don't want to stop.

☐ A few more proverbs:

Beware of the man who does not drink.

Learn a new language and get a new soul.

Chaste makes waste.

Trust in Allah but tie your camel.,

The shortest answer is Doing the thing.

Large trees give more shade than fruit.

☐ In the 1950's, Edgar Bundy, executive secretary of the Church League of America, led a campaign that declared the Girl Scout Handbook un-American. Humphrey Bogart had the same idea: "They'll (the un-American Activities Committee) nail anyone who ever scratched his fanny during the National Anthem."

PATCHES by Lois Martin

A comfortable meander to Manhattan

There is nothing supersonic about Amtrak. There is enough clanging and lurching and whistle-blowing to be familiar and enough speed to justify the choice of rail.

But the best thing about a train trip is that it forces the passenger to sit back, fully out of control of the pace and direction. There is more room to move around than is afforded in a bus, less hassle than getting in and out of the airport.

And as a means of transportation it was a pleasant change.

The last time I'd been on Amtrak I'd been asked to jump trains, literally, when our engine bogged down somewhere in Pennsylvania.

PATCHES

But for the Easter weekend I was invted to visit the city, New York, which seems well beyond city status. Boston is a city, so is San Francisco. New York is something more.

I drove to Rte. 128 to get on the afternoon train with all the college kids headed home. I had a whole seat to myself, a great book, treats from the snack bar and a different view of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

There were two women behind me. At first they weren't sitting together, then they switched as they fell into conversation. Their brief friendship was that stranger phenomenon. Within 20 minutes, they were confiding their most precious thoughts to one another, their disappointments, and their hopes. Each encouraged the other, advised how to dispel family problems, a son or a father.

"One thing I know," said the older woman in the black suit, "if you want a change in your life, you have to make it happen."

Right on, sister. They got off at Bridgeport, refueled with a bit of esteem they'd got when they gave it away.

Our train lights went out now and then, don't know why, didn't give a hoot, not my problem. We had to wait for an engine in New Haven. That took awhile and everyone apologized.

If I had expected New York to live up to the terror it can impose on a country mouse, I was to be disappointed. Outside Penn Station I waited with others for a cab. My driver swished me to my Manhattan destination and a doorman let me in his building.

Their home, unlike mine because my sister refused to decorate my little house, is in a large apartment building. It is spacious, smart city living. And the next morning I sat on a stool by their kitchen window, seeing their sights. The East River flows by their area. There are little parks here and there and you can see trees and blooming rhododendrons on the top of other high buildings.

They had thought their traffic would keep me awake. No such thing. Where I live I hear weather rather than wheels, hail on the skylight over my bed, wind whistling through the window. I've come to ignore it all. So cozy as could be, I was, deep in the guest bed somewhere in New York.

They have little grass or open space in New York but they don't seem to notice. They use their concrete and asphalt as their backyard. The joggers are everywhere. And the dog population is one of the better trained in the world because of the law governing dog deposits.

I'll tell you one thing New Yorkers do more than we do. They walk. My word, do they walk. I had taken the most sensible of my shoes for transportation. We trekked to Fifth Avenue to see the good stuff, on to Rockefeller Center, Trump Tower, and on to the theatre district for 42nd Street.

My niece is accomplished at dealing with street vendors. Country folk love the Yankee swap and dealing. No less the city people. Out of her negotiations I got a necklace for $7 that someone else later said was probably 'hot.' No matter, I love it.

For a mere pause on the sidewalk there is art to be purchased, or flowers, hot dogs, fat pretzels. We walked by day and in the late evening. Bernard Goetz was nowhere to be seen. Common sense, they say, in a city, is all that's needed. No eye contact, go about your business as if you knew what that was.

Something happens to city people, though. Ask 'em how much farther it is to any place, and they'll tell you 'two blocks.' It was never that short a distance. And they don't walk slowly. Swift mobility becomes one of their accomplishments, a byproduct of city living. They hike it, putting miles behind them with a sense of gusto.

The weekend was a respite. The trip home was not long enough to finish the book. A different Easter. And you'll be glad to know the Easter Bunny and bonnet and lillies bloom there as well as they do around here.

What sets New Yorkers apart is their strong thighs. That, of course, and their inability to tell visitors that one of their 'blocks' equals two of our miles.

SERIES OF THREE CONCERTS in a program titled, "The History of Jazz," will be presented by saxophonist Joel Press and members of the Evolutionary Jazz Ensemble, Thursdays at 11 a.m., April 4, 11 and April 18, at Wentworth Institute of Technology in Boston.

Admission to the one-hour concerts is free. The concerts will be held in the faculty lounge in Beatty Hall on the Wentworth campus located across from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Three outstanding guitarists will appear during the series: April 4, Jon Wheatley will also play banjo in a program of Early Jazz including spirituals, blues and the music of New Orleans — King Oliver, Jelly Roll Morton and Louis Armstrong. April 11, Gray Sargent, an outstanding exponent of swing and bebop, will highlight a program of music of Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Charlie Parker and Theolonious Monk. April 18, Bruce Arnold will also utilize a guitar synthesizer, heading a program of Contemporary Jazz, including original compositions in the Jazz/Rock, Fusion and Free Idioms as well as music by Wayne Shorter and Herbie Hancock. They will be joined by bassists Mark Henry and Marshall Wood and drummer Bob Savine.

COUNTRY JAMBOREE AT CORDAGE PARK will be held April 28 with the Carver Ridge Band. A square dance demonstration and country music performer look-alike contest will be held at this outdoor festival (indoors if it rains). Call 746-7707 for more information.

Cohasset Dramatic club play 'Scapino'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be performing its spring production "Scapino", adapted from Moliere's comedy, by playwrights Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale. The play will be presented April 25 through 28.

The play is directed by Ellen Kelly of Weymouth. Tamsyn Elliot of Cohasset is the stage manager.

There is a perfect spring setting for the festivities in "Scapino," Naples, Italy.

The casting of Bob Julian of Cohasset as Scapino is ideal since he brings a solid background of stage experience to the part. Bob is remembered for his past roles in such Cohasset Dramatic Club productions as Nausea in "Cinderella," Lt. Monahan in "Detective Story" and Spirit Present in "Christmas Carol."

The cast includes many young adults.

Leandro is played by Ken Agress of Scituate. Ken is a senior at Scituate High School where he has participated in the high school chorus, jazz choir, and has membership with the Chamber Singers. Ken's dramatic experiences include roles in "Adaptation," "Tom Jones," "Our Town," and "David and Lisa."

The part of Giancinta is portrayed by Amy Nordahl of South Weymouth. Amy is presently attending Weymouth South High School. She is enrolled at the South Shore Conservatory of Music, in a theatre worshop class.

The role of Zerbinetta is enhanced by Beth Colburn of Cohasset. Beth is presently working at Cohasset Village Printers. She enjoys acting, drawing and singing. Her theatre experience was enriched at Connecticut State University in stage managing, acting and directing. Beth has been quite active in this year's earlier productions of the Cohasset Dramatic Club; make-up and set construction of "Cinderella," and stage managing and set painting for "Mornings at Seven."

Other young talents in "Scapino" are Laura Doherty and Catja DeHaas of Cohasset - waitresses; Patrick Healey of Scituate and Matthew Kuhn of Cohasset - waiters; Brian McDermott of Weymouth - busboy; Caroline Struzik of Marshfield, and Susan Carr of Weymouth - schoolgirls; Mary McElroy of Cohasset - a nun. The roles of the gypsies are delightfully interpreted by Judy Gutry, Kathy Haase, and Joanne Cannon of Cohasset, and Rita Heidman, Kristy Monroe and Eileen Lavalle of Scituate.

Four performance dates for "Scapino" are scheduled at the Cohasset Town Hall. They are Saturday, April 25 through Sunday, April 28. There will be three evening performances, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and a fourth matinee on Sunday at 2 p.m.

Tickets for "Scapino" may be purchased in advance at Fleming's in Cohasset Center, or at the door at the times of the performances; $4 for adults, $2 for children.

"Scapino" is an enchanting way to spend an April afternoon or evening in Naples.

Recreation programs

Vacation special

On Thursday, April 18 at 1 p.m, Town Hall Auditorium the Cohasset Recreation Department will present a special vacation program: The Mike Bent Show.

Mike Bent is a comedian magician. If there was ever a funny magician, Mike is it. He is a sure-fire comedy magic act with lots of audience participation. His act has received accolades from all ages. The children love him. He has played private birthday parties for young and old, and played to thousands in functions rooms, family shows, colleges, schools, nightclubs, major corporations . . . everywhere! For a fun time for the whole family, don't miss the Mike Bent Magic Show!

There will be a $1.50 per person admission charge at the door. Cartoons will also be shown. Pick up time is 2:30 p.m.

Aerobic exercise class

The Cohasset Recreation Department will begin a new session of Aerobic exercise classes on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, at 6:30 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium.

Participants may register for either one or both evenings. The fee for one evening for eight weeks is $15 per person. The fee for two evenings for eight weeks is $25. Checks should be brought to the first class, and made payable to the Town of Cohasset.

For those interested in classes, please come to the Town Hall auditorium Tuesday and/or Thursday evening, April 23 and/or 25. No aerobics classes will meet the week of April 15.

Margret Watson, well-known instructor on the South Shore, will be teaching the classes.

Cohasset sailing club elects officers

The Cohasset Sailing Club began its 27th season recently with the election of officers and trustees at its annual meeting.

Officers for the 1985 season are: Edward T. Atkinson, Commodore; Raymond Kasperowicz, Vice Commodore; Peter H. Greenman, Treasurer; and Robert M. Davenport, Clerk. Head instructor will be Sean Curran.

Commodore Atkinson announced that application forms for the 1985 sailing program, which start June 24, will be mailed to all Cohasset residents before the end of April. Applications and membership information can also be obtained from Membership Chairman Harry St. Onge at 383-9457, or by contacting any officer.

The club offers junior and adult training on a fleet of ten 15-foot Mercurys. Juniors can choose from four different levels of sailing ability from beginning, able seaman, to the more advanced, sailing master.

Classes are held three days a week for two hours and include classroom instruction and a generous amount of hands-on boat time. Sailing experience is not required, but students must have completed the fourth grade by June, 1985 or be at least 10 years old by Labor Day, 1985 in order to enter the programs.

Last season, over 100 youngsters enrolled in the sailing programs, bringing the total student enrollment to nearly 4000 since the club's inception in 1960.

Adult training is also available, in either basic or intermediate training. Classes are held for three hours during the weekend and combine classroom instruction with boat handling and racing.

For the racing family, the Stanton Series allows parents and juniors to share racing competition on Wednesday evenings.

Besides sailing instruction, club membership entitles use of the boats at no additional charge; a sail can be taken anytime boats are not being used for instruction - generally after 4 p.m. on weekdays and after noon on weekends. Dock space is also available for members' dinghies.

A special pre-season get-together for members and nonmembers is being planned and will be announced soon.

Defending the sale of cluster

By Jane Lane

Local developer Wayne Sawchuck is "extremely upset" about the planning board's recent remarks regarding the sale of the condominium cluster development at Wheelwright Farms.

During a board meeting last week, several members responded angrily to the new price tag attached to the 42-unit cluster development by new owner, John Rodolph. What they had envisioned as $139,000 homes, will likely be sold now for about $212,000, according to Rodolph.

Some members, including Patrick Plante and John O'Toole, expressed doubt as to whether the original owner ever intended to develop the property and construct the units.

Sawchuck, who was one of the three original partners in the development of Wheelwright Farms, explained that the sale of the property was purely a business transaction which was initiated by an out-of-town realtor. The property was never listed for sale, but after an unsolicited offer was made, two of the three partners, Hingham architects Streklovsky and Hoit, and Dick and Joe Lambert of Norwell, encouraged Sawchuck to sell the property.

After a month of consideration, Sawchuck said he agreed with the majority partners, and the land was sold to Rodolph for $1.1 million. That amounts to $25,000 per unit, he explained, but does not include the costs already invested in the property, such as engineering and site plan work.

As for the sale price prior to the land sale, Sawchuck said that was never a consideration in the planning board's extensive review and subsequent granting of a special permit for the plan.

It's been a year of AFS 'firsts'

By Charlotte Carney

There's no place like home, but for Alejandra Castro, Cohasset is pretty close.

On July 27, 1984, the Denis Rossi family of 230 South Main Street welcomed Alejandra Castro, from Tejucijalpa, Honduras, into their home as part of the American Field Service exchange student program.

Alejandra is a senior at Cohasset High School, where she is enjoying her school experience as an average American teenager. She shares her home life now with two "average all-American type" younger brothers, Daniel, a junior at Cohasset High, and Andrew, an eighth grade student.

Alejandra explained however, "in Honduras, I was finished with school, because it only goes to the eleventh grade. When I return, I will begin at the University.

"The first thing I noticed that was different about school here was that the students change classes," said Alejandra. In Honduras, she had attended an all-girl school with about 53 classmates. "The teachers changed classes, not the students." We stayed in one classroom all day, and it was easier to have close friendships, because of all the time we spent together."

"We did not have a lunch period. We did have several snacks throughout the day. We went to school from 7:15 a.m. to 1:20 p.m. and went home to have our big meal," she said, explaining that more mothers stay home in Honduras, so a big meal at that time is possible. "People get off from work around that same time," according to Alejandra.

"Although I find that the life styles are similar here," she said, "the pace of life here is so much faster than in Honduras. In my city, Teguicijalpa, there are smaller buildings and only the larger cities have paved streets. The smaller towns have one or two paved streets."

People in her country do not have as many cars, Alejandra explained, because the poverty level is so high.

"The food in my country is more like Mexican," she added. "I have enjoyed most of all the food I have had here. But my favorite thing is 'Certs.'"

Alejandra continued, "here in the United States, you get to meet a variety of people and do so many different things. It's so nice."

Her host, Denis Rossi, explained, "Alejandra shares ordinary household chores. When we first showed Alejandra the vacuum, she didn't know how to use it."

"You see," she quickly added, "the weather is so warm in Honduras, we don't have rugs. It was my first experience with a vacuum."

She noted that in her home, her family employed a maid, "so I never had to do the housework at all. I do more housework here than I ever did at home," she said, smiling.

Selectmen to negotiate contract

Selectmen have offered the position of Executive Secretary to a Norwood man. Board members decided Monday night to contact Bernard Cooper, with an offer to sit down and negotiate a contract.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said he called Cooper Tuesday and a closed door contract negotiation session was arranged for early next week.

Board members interviewed Cooper Monday night. He is currently assistant general manager in Norwood. He has held that position since 1978. Prior to that job, Cooper was administrative assistant to the general manager there.

Cooper did not respond to an advertisement for the position, but was referred by Michael Woods, selectmen's previous choice for Cohasset Executive Secretary, who declined the offer.

A 1971 graduate of Tufts University, Cooper has a Bachelor of Arts in Economics.

Cooper confirmed Tuesday he had been offered to negotiate a contract with Cohasset selectmen. He said his decision whether to accept the position would be made within a week.

At their Monday night meeting, selectmen took little time to decide to offer a contract to Cooper. The only discussion came when they pondered what salary to offer.

"He's fine with me, but we've got to offer him more," Mitman said Monday night. The salary level for the Cohasset position is $28,000 with benefits. Cooper is currently making $29,500 in Norwood as assistant general manager.

"The advisory board has been alerted we need more money. I think they're willing to listen and up the ante," Mitman added.

The question, according to Chairman Frank England, is what that ante will be. Selectman Rocco Laugelle answered that the top salary level "should not exceed $31,000."

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested a top salary of $30,000 now, with a five percent increase July 1. Mitman responded that was Cooper's current salary level. He suggested offering a ten percent increase.

Laugelle then commented, "I don't understand how we could offer $32,000 when we have so many underpaid town employees."

Selectmen then discussed whether to reopen the advertisement for the position and whether to advertise a salary. "What about $30,000?" Laugelle asked. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur endorsed Mitman's proposal of a ten percent increase over Cooper's current salary.

Selectman England agreed that a two-year contract with a ten percent salary increase was an acceptable contract offer.

Advisory board members said Tuesday night they would accept a contract offer of $30,000 as "reasonable."

Cohasset's week . . .

Building permit fees raised

Upon the recommendation of Building Inspector Edward Poskus, selectmen approved raising the building permit fees for the second time in two years.

After recently meeting with area building inspectors, Poskus found that Cohasset's rates are generally lower than other towns. The inspector said the Town of Weymouth, which does a much greater volume of construction than Cohasset, generated $262,000 in the first quarter in permit fees.

For residential building, there will be a fee of $10 for the first $1000 evaluation, and $6 for each additional $1000. The previous rates were $10 for the first $1000 valuation, and $3 for each additional $1000 of work.

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle insisted that the real problem with permit fees is that residents fail to give the correct valuation of the work to be completed, Poskus disagreed. He said the permit fee is based on his estimate of the work, not the person who pulled the permit.

Plumbing fees will cost $10 for the first fixture, and $5 for each additional fixture. That compares with the previous $10 for the first fixture, and $2 for each additional fixture.

Gas fees are now $12 for the first fixture, and $5 for each additional fixture. The previous rates were $12 for the first fixture and $2 for each additional fixture.

The commercial rates include $15 for the first $1000 valuation of building, and $10 for each additional $1000 valuation. That compares with the past commercial rates of $10 for the first $1000 valuation and $5 for each additional $1000 valuation.

The commercial plumbing permit rates are now $15 for the first fixture, and $8 for each additional fixture. Those rates are the same for the commercial gas permits. Previous commercial plumbing and gas permit rates were $12 for the first fixture, and $6 for each additional fixture.

If someone is doing remodeling work or new construction without a permit, those fees will be doubled. Poskus said he has found several residents doing work without required permits during the past year, and the rates were doubled.

The discussion became heated when Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked if the entire permit fee had been paid by the contractor working on the high school roof. Poskus explained that because the permit payment for the first half of the work was mailed late, he doubled the fee to $3000. Half that amount was paid, with an order that the second half be subtracted from their final job payment.

Laugelle angrily responded that the job should be stopped until the entire payment is made. "Stop the job tommorrow until the second payment is here," he ordered.

Selectman Chairman Frank England explained there was a misunderstanding between what selectmen had intended, and what Poskus had ordered the contractor to do. Since the job is almost complete, England suggested that Poskus' previous order to the company be followed.

No other selectmen supported Laugelle's suggestion to halt the work.

England named chairman

Frank England was unanimously voted chairman of the Board of Selectmen. He replaces Cliff Mitman, who served as chairman the past year.

Mitman was voted vice chairman of the five-member board.

Monday night's session was the first meeting for newly-elected selectman Diane Sullivan. At the conclusion of the session, Sullivan said she would like to discuss the need to move the annual Town Meeting date and the local election date to another time. The current dates coincide with spring vacations and Easter. Another issue she would like to discuss soon is a proposal to draw Town Meeting warrant articles at random.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur added her endorsement of the proposals which will be discussed at next Monday's meeting.

Special Town Meeting warrant open

Although no specific date has been set, the warrant for the special Town Meeting will be opened Tuesday, April 23 and will close Thursday, April 30.

The meeting, selectmen decided, will take place sometime in June. They will await a recommendation from Moderator William Weeks, who is vacationing, before deciding on a proposed date of June 17.

Among the items which may be discussed, along with several leftover articles from the annual meeting, will be a proposal to complete extensive renovations to the police and fire complex on Elm Street.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur called the deteriorating conditions to the attention of the board. The department complex needs a new roof, replacement of windows and a new floor. Although no estimate has been specified, the repairs could cost anywhere between $50,000 and $100,000.

Currently, members of the Town Hall Study Committee are making proposals for the repairs, and obtaining costs for the work. Although there was some discussion about adding this work to a proposal for a Town Hall addition, selectmen agreed it will be a couple more years before that work is specified and estimates are finalized. The need to repair the fire and police stations is immediate, Selectman McArthur stated.

Road race proposal

A representative of the South Shore Striders asked selectmen permission to conduct an eight-mile roadrace the first Sunday in August.

Selectmen said the roadracing club must first discuss the proposal with Police Chief Joseph Kealey and with the Scituate selectmen before any determination is made. The race, which would begin at Cohasset Town Hall, will travel up South Main Street into Scituate, down to Border Street, to Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road and back to Highland Street.

Selectmen were concerned that the race would be conducted about 6 p.m. on a Sunday. Selectman Rocco Laugelle explained that Sunday nights in Cohasset, specifically along Atlantic Avenue, are among the busiest.

The club representative said the race could be run in the early morning, but no later since it would be too hot. Selectmen nixed the idea of an early Sunday run, saying it would interfere with traffic generated from the local churches.

This race has traditionally been run in Weymouth on Routes 18 and 53, but those areas have become too congested for a safe race. The representative said the entire project would take no more than three hours to operate.

Town Accountant interviews

Selectmen, who received about 20 applications for the position of Town Accountant, will interview three candidates Saturday morning.

Former Accountant William Signorelli, who resigned effective last week, recommended one of the candidates and said another deserved an interview. Since his input, Acting Executive Secretary Janet Chalke said they received another application. Selectmen agreed the third candidate should also be interviewed.

In the meantime, Assistant Town Accountant Kathleen Conte was named Acting Town Accountant until a replacement is found.

Signorelli was earning about $34,000 a year when he retired last week. The former accountant has repeatedly requested that the position be retained within Civil Service. Selectmen have extensively discussed the subject and support taking the position from the ranks of Civil Service.

FY85 reserve fund dwindling

After five transfer requests were approved Tuesday night by the advisory committee, Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer warned the reserve fund is down to about $18,200.

That's not the worst it's ever been, she said, but town departments should be notified that there is not an unlimited supply for additional transfer requests. The reserve fund must last until July 1.

Dormitzer noted that continual transfer requests must be expected to fund the unexpectedly high cost of cover material at the landfill. Also, large legal bills, incurred during contract negotiations, are expected soon.

Tuesday night, advisory approved $11,607 in transfer requests from various town departments. They approved $658 for cover material for the landfill. The Board of Health expects it will cost about $13,800 from the reserve fund to pay for the fill material during the remaining months of this fiscal year; $2800 for electricity at Town Hall. Advisors noted that conservation of electricty must continue to be practiced in Town Hall, and warned that if air conditioning is installed, the bill may increase by one-quarter.

Advisors also approved $3655 to pay for insurance deposit premiums for wages paid in 1983; and $370 for the gas and electrical accounts for the highway department; and $1123 for printing costs and voting machine repairs made for the election and town meeting.

The advisors noted that the Sewer Department this year has used up ten percent of the total reserve fund for FY85.

Board members said that special Town Meeting articles which will be transferred from the previous annual meeting, total about $190,000. That will bring the surplus cash supply to a level of $200,500. If more back taxes and Water Dept. bills are paid and certified by the meeting June 17, then more surplus funds will be available.

There are also some large money articles to be considered in the June meeting, which were not reviewed during the April meeting,. A $20,000 request to renovate Milliken Field is not recommended by the advisors, who say the most immediate need to refurbish the soccer field can be refurbished for about $7000. A possible article to make extensive repairs to the police and fire station must go before the Capital Budget Committee before it appears on the warrant, according to advisors.

Student financial aid

There is more financial aid than ever before available to help Massachusetts students keep their plans for college, according to Representative Mary Jeanette Murray. Three hundred forty-three Cohasset area students in Rep. Murray's district are getting $327,240 in state scholarships for college this year.

A $16 million increase enacted by the Legislature last year means there is now a total of $50 million in the state student aid budget. This record amount of state student aid money provides help for close to 44,000 Massachusetts students to pay for part of their expenses at state or independent colleges and universities.

The Legislature is considering a bill now that would increase state student aid funds by an additional $25 million. This would help 15,000 additional Massachusetts students. The number of students from Rep. Murray's district that applied for a state scholarship last year was 905.

Rep. Murray encourages students to apply for a state scholarship for the coming school year. Financial aid, including the state scholarship, often is available to students and families who do not think they can get it.

Information about how and when to apply for the state scholarship is available from high school guidance offices, college financial aid offices and the Massachusetts State Scholarship Office. Students and parents can call the State Scholarship Office at (617)727-9420 for more information.

Students can also call or visit the new Higher Education Information Center at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square for college admissions and financial aid information and application forms. The number to call is (617)536-0200, or 1-800-442-1171, toll free.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

REPORTING AN ACCIDENT

Although there may be considerable emotional upset after an automobile accident, you must have the presence of mind to report it to the police. A police report will protect your from the possibility that the other party may make a wild claim to his insurance company. If he is injured and brings suit, it is best to have an official report to back up your facts. When the police come to the scene of an accident, they will note the physical evidence at the scene. They make note of the position of the cars and the skid marks. They will also look for open bottles of alcohol and possibly take breath samples in addition to gathering other evidence. Their investigation can be very helpful if you later have to defend yourself.

The details of any accident are vital in the course of any legal action. Likewise, the manner in which this evidence is presented can have a substantial bearing on the outcome of the case. Sometimes, personal injury or other damages are an integral part of these proceedings. Such considerations are serious matters and should be presented after consulting with your legal representative. The LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882 is available to answer your questions and to take whatever legal action is in your best interests. I am available daily by appt.

It's been a year of 'firsts' for AFS student

The excitement and discovery of being in another country and doing new things for the first time is wonderful. The Rossi's have delighted in sharing these new experiences with Alejandra, as much as she has enjoyed them herself.

In recounting some "firsts" in Alejandra's life, Mr. Rossi told of her first skiiing experience on a weekend to Stratton Mountain, Vt. However, Alejandra said she "chose not to do it again," when the family took their annual skiing trip for a week at Sugarloaf Mt. in Maine.

Alejandra also became acquainted with her first lobster, but attests to "not liking seafood very much.

"I went on a subway for the first time; I ice skated on a pond, and I really never thought I could stand up, but I did.

"And a really wonderful thing was when I saw the snow falling for the first time, and having warm fire in the fireplace. It was beautiful."

Not residing near the water, Alejandra said she had never been on a boat. "But when we had that nice warm day last december, I took my first ride on a boat down the Gulf in Cohasset. It was thrilling," she recalled.

Her American brother Andrew added that he planned to take his new sister on his small boat this summer.

At CHS, Alejandra has been involved in many new experiences.

"I played field hockey and powder puff football for the first time," she said. Alejandra played line backer for the powder puff team, Mr. Rossi said proudly. "I also participated in the senior play which was a fun experience,' she added.

The AFS has a wonderful support group and provided the exchange students in the area with a diversity of interesting and educational field trip experiences during their saty in this country.

The Rossi's hosted a Christmas party for seven or eight exchange students and their American families. The students brought food typical of their native country.

Denis Rossi, a corrosion engineer with the Boston Gas Company, and Joanne, a Bio chemist at Milton Hospital and assistant professor at Northwestern University, became involved with the local AFS student exchange program when it first started in Cohasset in 1980.

Along with chairing an auction to raise funds for the program, the Rossi's have hosted an exchange student taking 'the bus trip' home.

Alejandra will be taking this 'bus trip' this July 3. The trip was designed to help make the breaking apart easier for the visiting students and their American host families.

The families who house the students are not told of the "bus trip" destination, because in some instances, Andrew Rossi explained, "the families go after the visiting student. It's hard for them to let go."

Mr. Rossi further explained, "it gives the student time to think and reflect on going home. Some need this time because they find it difficult to go back into their own cultures."

Daniel will be traveling to Norway this summer as part of the AFS student exchange program and will experience the other side of the project.

The Rossi's are a loving family who have provided Alejandra with a learning experience. She will keep the memories forever. . Alejandra will be the first to say that.

Cohasset Colonials in catalogue

The Cohasset Colonials, a manufacturer of American colonial furniture, has joined forces with the Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport) to help boost international sales of products and services from New England.

Included as one of 82 New England companies which produce products with high export potential, Cohasset is listed in a new Massport catalogue entitled "New England Exports: A Massport Guide to Products and Services." The new 48-page publication is designed to provide foreign importers and distributors with an introduction to the high-value, high-quality products offered by New England businesses.

For more information about "New England Exports" or to receive a copy of the new publication, please contact Massport Foreign Trade Unit, Ten Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116.

Jim was among the first five roofers to be certified nationwide. He offers a brief explanation of the program. "Bird Inc. is attempting to insure a high standard of workmanship that will equal its quality line of products. The qualifications necessary for certification are:

1. Minimum of 3 years in business.
2. Must be licensed & insured.
3. Must have 24 references from satisfied customers.
4. Must complete a minimum of 25 jobs per year.
5. Must provide a clear written estimate and warranty of workmanship."

Ready for the Cancer Crusade are (l to r) Taffy Nothnagle, Jane Goedecke, daughter Megan, Chairman Regina Schultz and Nancy Sandell.

Cancer crusade ready to make calls

A corps of house-to-house Cancer Crusaders, guided and assisted by a group of area captains, will begin their town-wide effort this week with the objective of calling on every home in Cohasset by April 30 to leave important preventive information about cancer and to ask for a donation to the American Cancer Society.

The Cohasset callers are among more than 100,000 volunteers throughout the state who will be bringing information about colorectal cancer to their neighbors. It is estimated that there will be as many as 4200 news cases of the disease in Massachusetts in 1985, but because of progress in detecting such cancers early, about three out of four of these individuals will be cured.

Regina Schultz, herself a house-to-house caller in previous campaigns and last year an area captain, is chairman of this year's Crusade in Cohasset. She recently distributed Crusaders' kits to the area captains at a continental breakfast in her North Main Street home, where she outlined plans for the Crusade.

"You are part of the largest volunteer organization in the country," she told the captains, " and it has a record of great progress in the fight against cancer. Its symbol is the daffodil which is the "flower of hope,' symbolizing the hope that the Cancer Society has helped to offer to millions of people through its programs of research, professional and public information and service to cancer patients. I know that we are going to do a great job this year of providing people with valuable information and encouraging them to give generously to the Society."

Cohasset has a goal this year of $2775 and will be attempting to reach it through calls to be made to over 100 volunteers. The callers are being asked to make their calls by April 30 and to turn in their receipts at the Rockland Trust Company branch in Cushing Plaza by May 1.

AFS house workers

Need some help around the house? Break the rake and let your AFS club do the work! During the weekend of April 27 and 28 and also May 4 and 5, the AFS club is at your disposal to do any odd jobs such as yard work, house cleaning, even the windows.

For only five dollars an hour, an AFS student will perform any job and the money you pay will be used for scholarship funds for students going abroad. Just in time for spring cleaning! Please call 383-0530 or contact any local AFS club member.

Thayer entrance exam

The next entrance examinations for the Thayer Academy Middle School for sixth, seventh and eighth grade applicants will be given on May 4.

Students with applications on file will receive full details regarding the examination. Others interested in admission should call the Admissions Office for information on making application.

Candidates for admission to Grades 9 and 10 in Sept. 1985, may take the SSAT (Secondary School Admission Test) June 15 at the Academy. Registration deadline for this test is May 17. Registration forms may be obtained by calling the Admissions Office (843-3580).

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

EASY COME . . .

An acute condition is one that occurs suddenly and usually remains for only a short period of time. If segments of the spinal column have been misaligned for only a short period of time, the body has been abnormally functioning for only a short interval. The muscles are generally still strong and, consequently, resist these subluxations (misalignments). A chiropractor can adjust these subluxations. When there is good muscle tone and a short time element, positive results may be quicky attained. It is important to immediately visit your chiropractor when a problem with your health is suspected. Ignoring it often leads to a problem that becomes more firmly entrenched.

Such sudden occurrences are often the result of accident and violent injury. Likewise, with today's athletic and sports minded society, such problems are occurring at more frequent rates. For attention to such problems as well as the establishment of periodic and preventive chiropractic exams, we invite you to call COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. When it comes to your well-beir.g, it's time to see us. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. Many insurance plans accepted as well as Workers Comp. cases.

☐Senior Gary Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Carlson, has been listed on the Honor Roll for the second semester at Thayer Academy.

☐Mary Murphy of South Main St., has been promoted to Liaison Nurse at the Boston Visiting Nurse Association (VNA). In her new role, she will work with discharge planners at Boston City Hospital to plan home health care services for patients leaving the hospital.

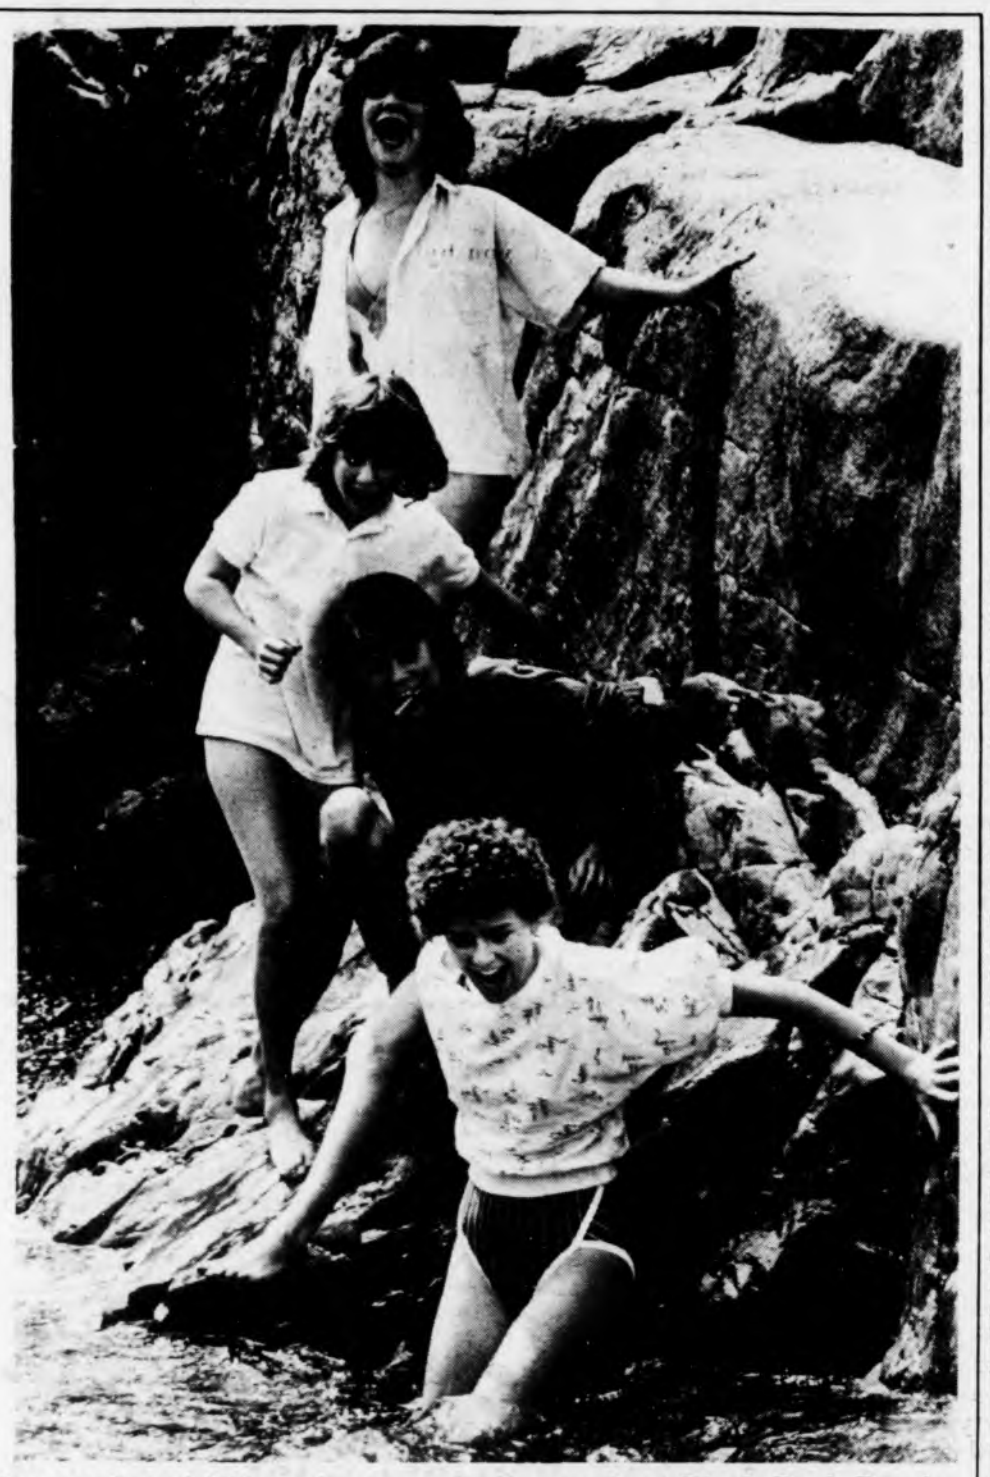
Murphy has worked as a staff nurse since September 1980, serving patients out of the VNA's Southwest office in Roslindale. Before joining the agency, she worked as a staff nurse for Bridgeport Hospital in Connecticut and as a charge nurse for St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Cambridge.

She received her nursing diploma from the Bridgeport Hospital School of Nursing.

☐Peter A. Maich has been named Vice-President, Senior Merchandise Manager for T.J. Maxx stores. Prior to joining T.J. Maxx, Mr. Maich was with Jordan Marsh, Co.

He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and the University of Notre Dame. He resides in Cohasset.

☐ Cohasset's Jean Bailey is a member of the 1984-85 Bridgewater State womens' swim team.



The freshman breast stroker/free styler is a graduate of Cohasset High School where she swam under Coach Gino DiGirolamo.

Jean is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Bailey Jr. of Cohasset.

☐ Birthday wishes to Anne Curley, April 30 and Bill McAuliffe, May 1. We won't mention the age but you can find them both in the 1935 Town Report.

Best wishes also to Mary Fleming who celebrates her 90th birthday on May 1.

☐ There is a grand brochure out on sailing, "Seaport News," that tells you all about sail training programs on the "Spirit of Massachusetts." Students participate in the operation of a traditional vessel, learn basic and marlinspike seamanship, rigging and sails, navigation, small boat handling, and emergency operations, with an introduction to the ocean's resources. Instruction is suited to all levels of ability, from beginner to experienced sailor.

Forget about it! These brave, unfeeling souls at Black Rock Beach are Cindy Dormer, Katie Murphy, Katie Ryan and Robin Haynes.

There is also a theme to each program, so that the student may participate in New England's maritime events. On the "Spirit of Massachusetts," each student becomes a member of the crew, with an experienced captain that is the leader. Sounds like it would be an experience of a lifetime . . . contact New England Historic Seaport in the Charlestown Navy Yard, Boston, for more details.

☐ A gang of Cohasset friends went to visit the Richard Fesslers over April vacation. If you remember, they are newly moved down there, and have a beautiful home, complete with a huge pool, green grass, etc. They love the area, and the nice home that they have, but . . . do they ever miss Cohasset and the fine friendships that they made here! They asked to be remembered to all.

☐ Larry Fone asks to put in "one more plug" for the Arts Lottery Committee to receive applications. There have only been three received so far, with a total of six applications being given out by the selectmen's office. He reminds one and all that the funds are to "encourage the art community of Cohasset not only to pursue their objectives, but to contribute in some way to every interested Cohasset resident." If you need any information on this, Larry is more than willing to help, call him at 383-0898.

☐ Now that spring is officially here, there is one thing that cannot be ignored . . . your dog! It is rather like walking in a mine field as you navigate certain sidewalks, and the only one responsible for cleaning up is the owner, so . . . what say you, especially those whose dogs are running all throughout illegally anyway!

☐ Congratulations to Annie Henry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William B. Henry, as she attended the National Age Group Synchronized Swimming Championships in Canton, Ohio . . . her next event is the New England Junior Olympic Meet which will be held in Worcester on May 5. Annie is a seventh grader, so this is only the beginning of what we are sure to hear about her!

☐ Lisa A. Creedon of 81 Border St. was recently awarded a bachelor of science in business administration from Suffolk University, President Daniel H. Perlman announced.

Some 250 students were February graduates of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the School of Management.

Developer defends sale

"About nine months ago, I was asked by one of the planning board members what I was going to sell the units for. I responded that I wasn't sure, but somewhere around $134,000 to $175,000," Sawchuck recalled.

"The planning board has no say, and price never once entered into their consideration of my plans," he added. "They have no jurisdiction to dictate what the units will sell for."

His attorney, Roberta Sawyer, agreed the setting of sale price is beyond the scope and responsibility of the planning board. "The price of any single-family home is a condition of the market at that time. Price is a function of the market conditions," she said.

"Any single-family homeowner wants to sell his house at the best price. The planning board has no authority to dictate that price. I don't know how they could," she added.

Sawyer defended the local developer by ensuring that Sawchuck "always intended to develop the property. But he and his partners got the right price."

She continued, "it's very important to note that Wayne had two partners who were anxious to accept this offer." Sawyer noted that the planning board attached several rigorous conditions to the plan, which Sawchuck met. Narrower pavement widths was one area that Sawchuck attempted to meet the board's demands. "No special concessions were made to Wayne just because he's a local developer," she added.

The planning board's objections to the $212,000 proposed unit price, is that it would eliminate younger, lower income residents from purchasing the property. Sawchuck said his original price of about $160,000 also would not have qualified as low or moderate income housing. "I never intended to build low income housing. From the start, this was going to be a quality, first-class development. And I don't think the price I mentioned many months ago would qualify as low or middle income," he said.

The local developer added that he researched the proposed purchaser, and found him to be a quality contractor. Following that study Sawchuck agreed with his partners to sell the property,

"The planning board should be pleased that this person is a quality individual. They should compliment us for selling to a quality developer, rather than criticizing us," he said. "I was very concerned about this. It was very important that the developer follow the restrictions placed on the plan. I really never intended to sell this property. If anyone wanted to see this project through, it was me.

"I thought about the offer for more than a month. My partners wanted to sell, and with the profit, we could invest it in other opportunities. There are risks involved in any property development, and there's a question of how long the economy will stay strong," Sawchuck continued.

"But there's no doubt in my mind that we got a lot less for the property than what we were actually paid. Right from the top of that money, you have to deduct the extra things we did, the hydrogeological study for the health board, and about $200,000 in engineering studies,' he added.

The reason the unit prices were hiked by the new property owner is because of "extras" he is constructing, to upgrade the quality of the development. Essentially, Sawchuck said, the plan will remain the same, with the 42 units sharing a large portion of open space commonly owned by the homeowners. But Rodolph intends to install wood shingle roofs and other first-quality, more expensive items to the development.

Any proposal or discussion of purchase price is premature, according to Sawchuck. The real estate market could fluctuate drastically in the time the owner states a proposed price, and the time the units are ready for sale.

In fact, he said, when planning member Plante suggested months ago that some units be combined for lower sale price, Sawchuck balked. Combining the units, he said, would have detracted from the marketability of the entire cluster development. "No matter what, you have to sell the units," he explained. "There must be some flexibility for the developer to determine what should be built at what price."

Sawchuck remains supportive of the cluster development plan. "It's never a liability for the town," he noted. "Residents within the cluster contribute to the tax base, but very few are tax burdens on the town. We are addressing the housing needs for many Cohasset residents, including the elderly. Cluster living is a good thing for elderly residents, who don't have to worry about the maintenance of their property."

Discussing the proposed bylaw changes recently adopted by Town Meeting, Sawchuck said if he had built according to the larger lot size requirements, he would have been able to sell only 18 lots, and would have been forced to sell at a much higher price. The developer, in turn, would have to raise the purchase price of the invididual units even higher than currently estimated.

Another side

Construction is booming in Cohasset, as well as in other communities. But let's just deal with us.

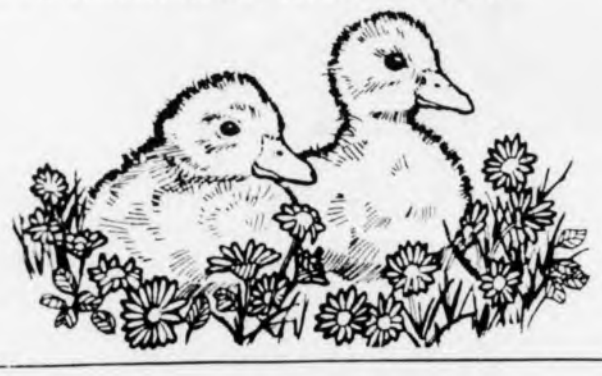
Right now, the planning board is in the midst of a simmering argument with a local developer. What has happened is that a plan for 42 cluster units on Beechwood Street, previously approved by the board, has been sold. The units, which the planners insist were going to be sold for about $150,000, are now going to cost about $212,000.

The board members have cried out against the increase, saying this price range automtically eliminates the younger, lower income families from moving into town.

How true. Depending on the interest rates, a $200,000 mortgage will cost a hefty sum. But on the other hand, $150,000 is hardly accessible for middle or low income persons. Those teachers and municipal workers pulling in $400 or $500 a week can hardly afford a $1000 monthly mortgage..

The planning board chairman has admitted the board has no legal authority to state what price the units will be sold. It would be great, however, if some of the units could be within the reach of the middle income workers.

We have no argument with that. But for the board to question why a developer sold his land to another private developer, is beyond their authority.



Sawchuck, anxious to get his side of the story, was happy to talk with the Mariner this week. It seems the Patriot Ledger claimed they attempted to contact him the night of the planning meeting, but he was unavailable for comment. Sawchuck was on vacation at that time, but he noted there were no messages left by the Ledger on his answering machine the entire time he was away.

We tend to believe his side of the story. He simply accepted a good, solid offer of more money for his land. Most people would be quick to take the money and run. It's all legal.

But Sawchuck checked and was assured that the new developer was a quality man, someone who would continue to enhance and compliment that area of town.

Lord knows this town has been raked over the coals enough by inventive developers and their sliderule engineers. But we tend to think this is not one of those situations.

Sawchuck is not a fly-by-night developer, intent on developing a half-assed project and selling for a reasonable profit. He is our neighbor, indeed a neighbor of this development. He has a large stake in the ultimate conclusion of this project.

Planning a peach of a prom

"Remember when you and I went to an Emmanuel College prom?" I asked the Dragon. "It was at the Somerset Hotel, and they had a large ball on the ceiling that rotated and shot zillions of colored lights all over the room."

The Dragon smiled fondly. "I hadn't thought of that in years. That thing must have had thousands of facets."

"Do you remember what we wore? The camelia wrist corsage you gave me?"

"I remember that it cost a bundle," he replied, "and for some reason, when I try to picture you, I keep getting an impression of black and blue. Had you been in an accident?"

"Not yet," I told him. "Actually, though, you're doing well. My gown was black lace over pale blue taffeta. And you wore a rented black tuxedo."

"That's right!" he agreed. "And we danced to Baron Hugo's orchestra. And your father was so mad because I kept you out late, that when I parked the car in front of your house he stood on the porch and threw rocks at it."

"That wasn't my father," I told him. "It was my mother. And they weren't rocks, they were peaches."

He looked startled. "Peaches?"

"Uh huh. She got so nervous waiting for me to come home that she decided to make a peach cobbler. We just happened along at an unfortuitous moment."

He shuddered. "To think, in the prime of my life, I could have been peach cobblered to death."

I put my head on his shoulder. "It was worth it, though, wasn't it, honey?"

"I'll get in trouble if I say I'm thinking it over, won't I?"

I favored him with an icy stare.

"Just kidding," he continued hastily. "But seriously, why do I get the feeling that I'm being set up?"

"Would I do that?" I asked.

He favored me with an icy stare.

"Not really set up," I told him. "It's just that I know you'll want our children to experience the same wonder and glamour that we did."

He groaned. "I knew it. I thought Breida's gown was already paid for."

"It is. I'm talking about Skip's junior prom."

The Dragon waved a magnanimous hand. "Not to worry. The tickets are only $25 a couple, and it'll include a dinner right in the high school gym. Skip won't have to take Leslie to the Meadows."

"No," I admitted, "but he will have to rent a tux."

The Dragon looked incredulous. "Rent a tux? Skip?"

"Unless you think his social life is going to be so hectic that it's worthwhile to buy one."

He shook his head. "Any other expenses?"

"Well," I told him, "gym shoes would probably be inappropriate. What say we spring for black shoes and socks? And then there's Leslie's corsage and gas for the car."

"We have to let him use the car?"

"Probably," I replied. "Leslie's gown might get damaged if she rides on the handlebars of his bike."

"Right," he replied. "Anything else?"

"They'll want to have their pictures taken," I told him. "Just like we did."

The Dragon sighed. "It could be worse," he acknowledged. "After all, Leslie's mother has to pay for the peaches."

Morrissey granted ZBA approval

The zoning board of appeals recently granted a special permit to fill and grade 160 square feet of land in the floodplain and watershed district. The permit was issued to Dr. Patrick Morrissey, who plans to construct a subdivision on a road off King Street.

At the hearing before the zoning board February 21, the applicant proposed to fill and grade 3700 square feet of wetland, 160 square feet of which is inside the floodplain and watershed protection district. The filling and grading is necessary in order to properly construct the cul-de-sac which would mark the end of the proposed subdivsion road. According to the board, the applicant would create compensatory water storage by displacing 3570 square feet of wetland near the proposed construction site.

The Cohasset Zoning bylaw requires the obtaining of a special permit by an individual who wishes to fill, excavate or otherwise change the grade of land located in the floodplain and watershed protection district unless such change is allowed under Section 9.5.

According to the board, Dr. Morrissey demonstrated by affirmative evidence that: the land is not subject to flooding or wave damage or unsuitable for the proposed use because of drainage conditions; the land, is subject to tidal action or adjacent to tidal waters, is ten feet above mean sea level; the proposed construction, use and or change in grade will not obstruct or divert flood flow or reduce natural flood storage capacity to the extent of substantially raising the high water level in the same or adjoining districts; the proposed system or private drainage system will not cause pollution or otherwise endanger property or the public health; the proposed use of the land does not derogate substantially from the purposes of the floodplain and watershed protection district as set forth, or the purposes of this bylaw.

Paul Berens appeared at the hearing and expressed concern that the proposed work might cause flooding on property he owned in the area. Dr. Morrissey's engineer, Henry Nover, presented a topographic map which indicates that Berens' property will not suffer any ill effects as a result of the applicant's proposed work and use.

The board found that all the requirements of Section 9.7.8. of the bylaw have been shown by affirmative evidence and by a unanimous vote, the Board grants the applicant's request for a special permit.

Sixty percent subscribe to cable

American Cablesystems of Cohasset has successfully grown in its year of existence.

To date, there are 1,400 subscribers, which equal 60 percent of all residents. The members of the cable council extended their thanks to coordinator, John Ronan. He has allocated his time and efforts to train over 200 volunteers for production and editing. Many have produced programming on their own. Although many of the volunteers are students, anyone can become involved. This would be a great way for senior citizens to get involved in the community, said Ronan.

Ronan would like to see programming on community TV 24 hours a day, but to make that possible, more people need to actively participate.

Most programming must be preplanned. It does not operate like a news agency, he said. This is time consuming, and participation is the key. Existing groups and organizations need to take responsiblity for their own programming. It's a great way to advertise, Ronan explained. There are workshops available on a regular basis. Also, Ronan would be willing to work with his schedule to accommodate volunteers.

An exceptional job has been done with programming this year, according to the coordinator. Once trained, volunteers have produced programming on their own. The idea is to get involved, become self-sufficient, and stay involved. Probably the best productions included the service at St. Stephen's Church and the Cohasset Road Race, which took three days of prior preparations.

A crew of 40 worked with three camera set-ups at various locations in the town. There was a mobile unit in a truck and Ronan was working with a unit in the air. It was televised live to six area towns and has been edited and shown twice since. Michael Grimes did a lot of work with production of this event and recently won producer of the year award at the Golden Awards Ceremony.

Up and coming workshops will provide an opportunity for individuals of all ages to get involved. The schedule is as follows:

Basic TV Programming at 8 p.m., May 6, 8, 13 and 15.

Editing at 7 p.m., May 14.

Advanced Editing (evening), May 17, and Character Generation at 7 p.m., May 21.

Thank you Cohasset

You opened your hearts, homes, arms. You helped us find the strength we didn't know we had. You fed us, cried with us, mourned with us. You have been true friends.

If Seanna knew how many people cared, she would have been so proud.

Our love and thanks to each and every one of you.

Junior League decorators showhouse

Philip H. Smith, an associate member of the American Society of Interior Designers, owner of Designers Creations and Flemings of Cohasset, has been chosen by the Junior League of Boston for the 10th consecutive year to decorate a major room, the living room, at its 15th annual Decorators' Show House and Garden Tour. The Showhouse is the Endicott Estate in Dedham.

Smith, one of the Boston area's most prestigious and published designers was chosen from among hundreds of New England interior designers whom were asked by the League to submit proposals to decorate rooms. Smith and Hilda Tarlow of Hillwood Interiors in Chestnut Hill share the honor of being chosen each of the last 10 years to decorate a room.

Since 1970, Decorators' Show House has been the League's most extensive and successful Ways and Means project, the proceeds of which are turned over to the Junior League's Community Program Trust. All the work done by the designers is done at their own expense.

The participants are chosen according to their capacity to meet the challenge of restoring the rooms of the homes done each year to their former excellence. Because of the size and elegance of this year's living room, only a designer of Smith's caliber and reputation could possibly expend the time and money necessary to create the opulence called for. The 25-room mansion was the home of Endicott shoe millionaires from 1905, when it was completed, to 1966, the year the last resident Endicott died.

Smith had two large sofas custom made, and covered in a Manuel Canovas fabric, along with four swivel chairs. Both fabrics were designed and made in France by Manuel Canovas, the world's leading fabric house today. A semi-antique Bijar rug compliments the color of the fabrics. The draperies are a custom made treatment designed by Smith and made for him by European Craftsmen of Medford. They consist of swags made from a Scalamandre fabric, and draperies made from a Clarence House fabric.

The Clarence House fabric is also used on four French reproduction chairs from Trouvaille Furniture Co. A baby grand piano, made by Chickering Piano Co. in 1905, which has been completely rebuilt, and is also a player piano, adds to the spendor. It and other antiques in the room, along with much of the furniture, will be used by Smith in a new home in Nantucket.

Generally, most furniture is borrowed from the local showrooms but in this year's Show House, Smith found it necessary to have all the furniture custom made because of the size. All the furniture is oversized to make the large room appear smaller and more comfortable. Smith calls this room a gathering room rather than a living room. The house in Nantucket has the same type of room as does a home both in Palm Beach, Florida and New Seabury that Smith is presently decorating.

Smith and his associate Debbie Boyle, a graduate of Buffalo State College in the field of fabric design, operate Designers Creations on Main St., Cohasset where they feature exclusive designer's fabrics and wallpapers along with furniture not to be usually found without the aid of an interior designer.

Be sure and visit Show House. The best designers are represented as well as the lastest fabrics and decorating ideas. Show House opens to the public April 28, and runs through May 19. Advance sale tickets are $7 and may be purchased at Designers Creations or Flemings in Cohasset Village.

Committee reorganization

At 8 p.m. Monday, the Cohasset School Committee gathered at the junior-senior high school.

Supt. Eugene Crowell, after calling the meeting to order, immediately moved to have nominations and elections of officers.

Nominations were taken and voted. Re-elected secretary of the committee, Diana Kornet, said, "we've reorganized, and it's only 8:04 p.m."

The current officers were re-elected, with Dr. Joseph Nedrow as chairman for the second year. However, the school committee's total reorganization, including sub committee memberships, were tabled until all contract negotiations are completed.

Teacher evaluations

The school committee voted to instruct Supt. Eugene Crowell to make available teacher evaluations for the committee's review.

Robin Suhbier, P.S.O. president, raised the concern of how best to serve the teachers with effective evaluations.

Committee member Diana Kornet said, "the most effective way is to encourage people to write letters of comment during the school year. Petitions at this time are the least effective way.'

The question was raised as to how the teachers are evaluated. Member Jack Langmaid answered that the current system "is standard, which has withstood the test of time. It is fair and equitable." Supt. Crowell added, "we are looking for teachers who have a respect for learners."

Student committee reps

Suggested changes relating to the election of next year's student representatives to the school committee, brought about a lengthy discussion at Monday night's meeting.

Ingrid Anderson and Jay Contis, current student representatives to the school committee, suggested that junior class members be elected for two-year terms, and seniors to a one-year term to ensure continuity to the system. Currently, any student who petitions and campaigns for office, may be elected a school committee representative.

Committee members, concerned with ensuring more involvement by more students, suggested that students should not hold more than one office in student government leadership.

High school Principal Richard Streeter suggested that students be allowed to make that decision themselves, discussing their concerns with the high school administrators.

VAT REFUND

The strong American dollar has been much in demand all over the world. Many countries encourage tourists to spend dollars by offering tax breaks. Except in Italy, there is a form of sales tax in Western Europe called a VAT (value added tax). It is generally refundable to foreigners. The minimum-purchase requirement is generally $100 or more and tax rates vary from 5.5 to 35 percent. Basically, forms are filled out at the shop. They should then be validated by a customs official when leaving the country. The forms are then mailed back to the store and you must wait for your refund check. The check will be made out in the foreign currency and may take several months to arrive.

COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER is your passport to vacation spots around the world. With many years of continual service to this area, we have the well earned reputation for service and integrity. Let us assist you with all your travel plans. We are conveniently located at 3 Brook St., Scituate. We are open to serve you Mon.Fri. 9-5; Sat. 10-4 and by appointment. We can be reached by calling 545-4500 and 383-1717.

Children's art center course

Several children's courses are about to begin at the South Shore Art Center.

Students are invited to register at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset for a junior high workshop, painting and drawing courses and for the younger set, a mothers' and tots' workship. Advanced registration is required for all classes.

Serena Brundige's Junior High Workshop, meeting Friday, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., starting April 26 offers students activities emphasizing individual expression and exploring various art concepts.

Painting and Drawing I for ages six to eight and its corresponding course for ages nine to 12 begin the first week of May. Painting and Drawing I, taught by Brundige, meets Tuesday, 4 to 5:30 p.m., starting May 7, and Painting and Drawing II, taught by Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, meets Thursday, from 4 to 5:30 p.m., starting May 9.

A new series of creative projects mothers can reproduce at home with their little ones begins Monday, May 6 from 10 to 11 a.m. Brundige will explore with the class batik dip designs, magic color circles, and plastacene. The workship is best for children ages three and four.

For complete information, contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

"The best of Porgy and Bess in concert"

The Unicorn Singers, directed by Margo Euler, with orchestral ensemble will present "The Best of Porgy and Bess in Concert" Sunday, April 28.

There will be two performances: 4 and 8 p.m. at the Weymouth East Junior High School, Weymouth, Mass.

Advanced tickets are available for purchase ($5 or $4 for students and senior citizens) and may be obtained at Hingham Square Bookstore, by calling any member of the Unicorn Singers or by phoning any of the following numbers:

Cohasset—383-9584; Hingham—749-0162; Norwell—659-7919; Weymouth, after 3 p.m.—337-0790.

Tickets available for purchase at the door at the time of the concert will be $6.

Cohasset flea market

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its gala annual Spring Flea Market Saturday, May 18 at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset. The hours will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Since last year's highly successful yard sale the society has received many useable, preowned items as donations to its flea market.

Included will be books, clothing, household wares, bric-a-brac, toys, sporting goods, artwork and other collectibles.

Also featured at the forthcoming Lothrop House flea market will be refreshments in the form of hot dogs cooked on the spot, and a tableful of home-cooked baked goods.

Cohasset library news

The Executive Board of the Friends of the Cohasset Library voted last week to make a gift to the library book fund in memory of Jeanne "Pat" Gwinn, a former president of the Friends.

The board also voted $1,600 for family passes to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Children's Museum, the Science Museum, and the New England Aquarium. These passes are free of charge to Cohasset residents. Reservations may be made by calling the library, 383-1348.

The board voted $200 to co-sponsor with the Parent-School Organization a program in May for Osgood School students by children's book author and illustrator Marc Brown. The aim of the program is to encourage a love of reading in young people.

In addition, the board also voted $200 to support the Paul Pratt Memorial Library summer reading incentive program. The funds will be used to award free paperback books to children who complete their reading goals in the summer program.

Board members made plans for the annual book sale to be held at the library on May 10 and 11, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There are thousands of books in all subjects, for all ages, with prices starting at 25 cents. The book sale is the major fundraising activity of the Friends of the Library.

Members of the Friends' Executive Board are Jane Goedecke, president; Joan Remington, vice-president; Thomas Williams, secretary; and June Hubbard, treasurer. Other board members are Ann Bowdoin, Cissy Cullivan, Peggy Soltesz, Lucille McLoughlin, Frederick Garrison, Shirley Marten, and Rudolph Talbot.

All residents are invited to join the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Membership forms are at the library.

Legion scholarship raffle

It's that time of year again for Cohasset 118 American Legion Auxiliary's A.L.B.O.L.A. (scholarship raffle). As usual, they have many nice gifts.

Help support the seniors of our towns by contacting any auxiliary member or stopping by the post for a raffle ticket.

CHS bloodmobile

A bloodmobile will be held at Cohasset High School Monday, April 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Anyone wishing to donate, may sign up in the Health Room. Students must be 18, or 17 years-old with parental permission. The Red Cross would appreciate your support. Thank you.

Attention all soccer players

Registration for the Cohasset Soccer Club summer camp is being held at the Recreation Department Office in the Town Hall.

Camp begins Monday, August 5 and runs through Saturday, August 10. It runs from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. weekdays and 10 to 11:30 a.m. on Saturday.

The camp is conducted by North American Soccer Camps, Inc. and provides one professional (FA badge) British soccer coach per 15 players. This camp was a great success last year. The club feels that the quality of instruction is unsurpassed.

Registration is open to all players ages 8 through 19. Cost is $75 and $66 per each additional player from the same household. Please pay by check, payable to North American Soccer Camps, Inc. We ask that you register early.

'Helping Children Cope with Death'

The Christian Education Committee of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will sponsor a special program for parents and children this Sunday at 6:30 p.m. The program will be at the Benbows' home, 22 Red Gate Lane.

Making use of Susan Linn's puppet videotape "The Death of a Friend," it will seek to increase communication between parents and children on this important but difficult topic. Following is a part of the introduction to the videotape: "When their friend Allison is struck by a car and killed, Audrey and Catalion have many fantasies and fears. They ask why Allison died and when she will return. With Susan Linn's help, the puppets explore their worries and feelings about Allison's death and consider some ways they can remember her. This puppet presentation helps children talk about the sadness, anger, and confusion they feel when a friend dies."

Parents and young children are invited to attend the program together, though parents are also welcome to attend without their children. Any member of the community is welcome to participate.

Job Fair May 4

The right place to find just the right job is Job Fair Eighty-Five. It's coming Saturday, May 4 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Over 60 companies will have representatives ready to talk to you about thousands of great jobs and opportunities on the South Shore. Job Fair Eighty-Five makes it easy to talk to employers in one place at one time. Whatever job you're looking for, the place to be on Saturday, May 4, is State Street South in North Quincy.

You'll find helpful advice in preparing for your next job, tips on writing successful resumes, interviewing pointers and a computer to help match you with those jobs all over the South Shore.

For more information on Job Fair Eighty-Five, call 479-1111. The Job Fair is sponsored by the Personnel Manager's Group of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the South Coastal Private Industry Council, and the Quincy Jobs Matching Center of the Division of Employment Security.

Meet the Red Sox

Have you always wanted to spend a day with the Red Sox and meet the players? You can do just that if you are the highest bidder at the St. Paul's School fundraising auction on Saturday, May 4, at 7:30 p.m. at the school, 18 Fearing Road, Hingham.

By making the best bid, you can spend a day with a professional photographer who will take you to Fenway Park for the day with a chance to meet the players included.

The auction of goods and services will also offer you the chance to bid on a windsurfer, donated by Steve Mehl of Mehl's Boathouse in Hingham Harbor, and an Apple IIc computer, complete with monitor and stand, donated through the auspices of George Hamrah at Personal Computer Resources, 45 Pond St., Norwell.

In addition, there will be opportunities to bid on a flowering crab apple tree, a Hitchcock chair, Waterford crystal stemware, a weekend at a condominium in Queechie, VT, paintings, jewelry, cameras and numerous other goods and services. Included among the services will be a simple reciprocal will and interior design consultation.

The public is welcome and invited to attend. Viewing will begin at 6 p.m. and the auction will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m. Jack Knight will be the auctioneer.

Beer, wine and soft drinks will be available during the evening as well as snacks and desserts. Coffee will also be served.

The auction has been organized by a committee consisting of Ed McGovern and Anne Leland of Hingham and Cheryl Monahan of Ridge Hill Road, Norwell. Admission is $2 a person.

All funds raised by the auction will benefit St. Paul's School, which is a small parochial school in Hingham Square across from Talbot's store.

Art center scholarships

Graduating seniors who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited art school are invited to apply for one of three scholarships awarded annually by the South Shore Art Center.

The awards to be made by the center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, are the $1,000 Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship, the $600 Marion Huse Scholarship and the $200 MacIvor Reddie Award. Portfolios of original work are to be submitted to the center on Saturday, May 4 between noon and 1 p.m. Students may pick up their portfolios on Wednesday, May 8 between noon and 4 p.m.

As in the past, the scholarships are awarded to assist and encourage students who live on the South Shore and who show the most promise in the field of art to further their art education. Selection of the scholarship recipients will be based on a student's application and portfolio.

The selection for the Bergfors scholarship, named for lifelong Quincy resident, businessman and civic leader Fred E. Bergfors, will be made by Mrs. Constance Bergfors Rice, one of the trustees of the Bergfors Fund. The selection of the recipients of the other two scholarships will be made by jurors Don Lettis, academic dean, Massachusetts College of Art and Virginia Allen, professor and program director of art history, Massachusetts College of Art. Lettis is an abstract artist working in acrylics and has won several prizes at the Gallery Naga in Boston. He is also on the board of directors of the South Shore Art Center.

Allen works with monoprints, collages and etchings and has had one-person shows at Bentley College Art Gallery, Thomas Crane Library and Bazza Gallery in Oklahoma City. Her work is represented in numerous corporate collections in Oklahoma City and Pittsburgh.

Portfolio requirements for all three South Shore Art Center scholarships are eight examples of the student's best work including a self-portrait or portrait done from life, a still-life drawing from actual objects and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any medium. Quality slides or pictures of 3-D work will be accepted. Slides or photographs of work must be marked with applicant's name, title of work, actual size and arrows to indicate top of slide or photograph.

Work should not exceed 18" by 24" and must be matted but not framed.

All applicants will be informed of the jury's decisions by the South Shore Art Center and the winners of the scholarships will be announced at graduation exercises. The scholarships will be paid directly to the winners' schools at the beginning of the second semester and will be applied to tuition costs.

The scholarships are open to all students attending South Shore schools--public or private--and who will graduate in 1985. Any questions regarding the scholarships or portfolio requirements may be directed to the Center, 383-9548.

SHS one-act plays

Friday, April 26, Scituate High School will be hosting an evening of one-act plays, "Canadian Gothic" and "The Diary of Adam and Eve."

"Canadian Gothic" was the Massachusetts drama festival entry this year for Scituate High. The play is a drama set in a small town on the Saskatchewan prairie in the 1950's.

"The Diary of Adam and Eve," is a lively musical comedy about the story of Adam and Eve.

The evening begins at 8 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday, April 26 and 27. Tickets are $3 and will sold at the auditorium on performance night.

Cohasset man heads new office

Gallery 360, the Gallery of Homes, has opened a new Commercial Division to add to its expanding list of services, according to Gallery 360 President Alexander Rutledge.

Located at the Queen Executive Center at 167 Washington Street in Norwell, the Commercial Division "represents a logical extension of our real estate services," Rutledge explained. "Our growth has mandated expansion into specific marketing areas, and we are in a period of great commercial development here on the South Shore. This region is fast becoming the most sought after area in the Commonwealth by business and industry."

The Gallery 360 Commercial Division is headed by Robert Najar of Cohasset and John Jessup of Kingston. Both men come to their posts with extensive national and international industrial marketing experience.

Easter Seal summer camp

The Massachusetts Easter Seal Society is now accepting referrals for its residential summer camping program for youngsters with physical disabilities.

The society will fill some 150 openings in its unit at Camp Agassiz Village in Maine. Four, two-week sessions have been planned for boys and girls between the ages of six and 17 years who are physically disabled.

A trained counselling and nursing staff and specially adapted facilities at Agassiz Village are designed to provide campers with individualized attention amid surroundings which are accessible for even campers in wheelchairs.

For the second consecutive year, a special teen camping program will be sponsored for boys and girls between the ages of 14 and 17 years. Campers will be housed in the newly constructed William E. Maloney Lodge. The facility features a fully equipped kitchen, recreation room and semi-private living accomodations.

The society also conducts a limited program for severely disabled young adults, ages 18 to 25 years, at Camp Hemlocks in Connecticut.

Prospective campers interested in making application to Easter Seal camping should write to the Easter Seal Society, 934 Statler Office Building, 20 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116 or call (617) 482-3370.

Arts applications

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Committee is seeking applicants for the annual arts funding.

The only ones received thus far are from the Cohasset Historical Society, the South Shore Art Center, and the Scituate Chorale. The selectmen's office has given out six applications.

The committee has only $200 to be recommended for this funding period, but anyone interested in improving the arts climate in Cohasset is invited to apply. Individuals or organizations may apply for the money before April 29.

The committee consists of individuals who insist on providing funds to deserving artists and organizations who will provide some cultural input in Cohasset, as an exhibit, a concert, restoration of artworks, or handicrafts.

In case you don't know, the committee is appointed by selectmen.

Linda Stearns Halloran is a member, whose stichery work is well known. She recently designed custom made shades for imported Staffordshire lamps. Tom Lucas, director of art in the Cohasset School system, is a knowledgeable and talented artist with the experience to guide our Cohasset kids toward expression in the visual arts.

Sigrid Carey is a well-trained designer and artist who has pursued weaving most of her life. She has traveled extensively worldwide, researching her craft. Helen Ketcham is a writer. "Mistress of the Wynds" was one novel by Meg Haviland (her pen name), and another novel will be published soon. She is also the proud mother of local artist Scott Ketcham.

Joan Appel Jensen is involved in many areas of the arts; theatre, visual arts, and fine arts. Chairman of this committee is Larry Fone, who is interested in industrial design, aimed toward promotion in the industrial exhibit area. His one aim in chairing this committee, he has stated, is to provide information and funds to derserving arts interests.

The committee urges any in Cohasset to apply for funding. The committee is dedicated to the ideal of the best for Cohasset.

Get the applications in at the selectmen's office by noon, April 29, or bring them to Larry Fone's house, 17 Reservoir Road.

Anyone who would like to observe the committee's activity is invited to Town Hall, April 29 at 8 p.m.

O'Toole completes course

Nancy O'toole of Cohasset, legislative aide to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset has completed a special four-week course in legal and legislative research, sponsored by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Library.

Conducted at the State House, the program covered such topics as Massachusetts General Law research; state and federal rules and regulations; The Federal Register; the State Register; Massachusetts Legislative History; and services and resources of the state library.

The legislative aide/library workshops were developed by State Librarian Gasper Caso and Assistant State Librarian Mary McLellan.

The program was a continuation of the training sessions held for legislative aides in January, part of the biennial orientation program for new legislators and staff. The library workshops were for both new aides and veteran staffers desiring an up-date on the latest research techniques.

The state library is a public affairs research center with rich historic collections, and historic maps and manuscripts. The state library has been designated as a selective depository for federal publications for more than a century.

Winter Gardens show

Cohasset Winter Garden will be having their annual ice skating show April 27 at 7:30 p.m., directed by Marcia J. Breen.

The show this year is called "Celebration" and the feature star attractions are Mark Mitchell, the 1985 New England Junior Men's Champion, Sally Pacios, New England Intermediate Ladies' Bronze Medalist, and Paul Frey, New England First Test Men's Champion, along with many of our local skaters.

The show is sponsored by the Silver Blades Skating Club of Cohasset. Admission for adults, $3—Children 12 and under, is $1.

Spring auction April 26

An auction will be held Friday, April 26 at The First Baptist Church in North Scituate.

The auction will begin at 7 p.m. Coffee and dessert will be avilable.

Seniors invited to 'Scapino'

South Shore and Cohasset Senior Citizens are invited to attend without charge the Cohasset Dramatic Club's performance of the farce-comedy, "Scapino," as guests of the Club this Thursday, April 25 or the matinee show on this Sunday, April 28.

The Thursday performance is at 8 p.m., the matinee is at 2 p.m. Both events will be at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

"Scapino," adapted from Moliere's 1671 play, "The Follies of Scapino," by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale, is a rollicking slapstick done in a way which combines elements of English music-hall pantomine or "panto" and American vaudeville. It is an update of a classic which has been entertaining European and now American audiences for 300 years, and this version dates from 1972.

Performances by the Cohasset Dramatic Club will begin at the Cohasset Town Hall Thursday, April 25 and will produced the evenings of Friday, April 26 and Saturday, April 27. The Sunday matinee on the 28th will close the Dramatic Club's 64th season on the Town Hall stage.

Directing the Cohasset "Scapino" is Ellen Kelly, a teacher of dramatics at the South Shore Conservatory. The title role of Scapino the loveable rogue, is played by Cohasset's Bob Julian, seen recently in the Club's madcap English "panto" version of "Cinderella."

Playwrights Dunlop and Dale have produced a modern comedy from Moliere's original 17th century Comedia dell' Arte "clown show" which delighted audiences at the Comedia Francaise for numerous generations, and is just the thing to start-off this spring season.

"Scapino," in the twists and turns of its comedic events, is a wonderfully funny spoofing of the age-old situation of an impudent employee mocking his boss, all directed toward the goal of seeing that the right boys end up with the right girls! The whole thing is right out of the 17th century, with a generous mixture of the 20th century thrown in for laughs.

Be sure to take in the Dramatic Club's "Scapino" this week. Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for children under 12, and are available at the door or in advance at Fleming's, Elm Street, Cohasset Center.

Spring programs at the SS science center

Spring programs at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, offer exciting opportunities for adults, children and families to discover unknown talents, explore new places and have fun learning about their surrounding world. Enjoy Sunday afternoon family programs. Saturdays are for children's unique activities and craft workshops. Get away from TV reruns and get acquainted with your constantly changing environment.

Leisurely Strolls originate at the Science Center on Tuesday, May 7, from 10 a.m. to noon. The programs are for those who like to walk slowly through different areas, but don't like to go alone. The first stroll will be on the footpaths of Norris Reservation with one of the Natural Science Center naturalists. Fee: $3 members, $4 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Carpool from the Center. For information, call 659-2559.

Armchair Travel — Yellowstone Park on Friday, May 3, 1 to 3 p.m. Carl Barasel, hiker and lecturer, will take you on a 10-day walking tour through this National Park. Share with him the excitement of climbing mountains, skirting mineral springs and observing geysers, elk and buffalo. Dessert served after slide show. Fee: $3 members; $4 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Call 659-2559 for information.

Learn the Secrets of Blending Herbs on Sunday, May 5, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Sample soup, salad and various herb teas. Learn lots about herbs and how to grow them. Joanne Morgan, teacher. Fee: $4 members; $5 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Call 659-2559 for information.

PROVENDER BASKET

Make a Provender Basket on Monday, May 6, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This attractive 12" x 7" flat splint basket is useful to carry cut flowers and herbs from the garden. A sample will be on display at the Science Center. Susan Pithie, instructor. Bring: pail, utility or mat knife, wire cutters, awl, ice pick or knitting needle, 10 clip clothespins, ruler or tape measure, pencil, scissors, hand towel and lunch. Coffee and tea provided. Fee: $22 members, $25 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For information, call 659-2559.

SONGS

Whose Song is That? Find out at the Science Center on Tuesday, May 7, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Join ornithologist Wayne Petersen on a Look/Listen Twilight Walk. Identify some familiar and not-so-familiar spring bird songs. Walk to be followed by indoor discussion of the Why's and How's of bird vocalization. Tapes and slides will be used. Fee: $6 members, $8 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Call 659-2559 for further information.

FIELD JOURNAL

Sketch and Make Your Own Field Journal on Wednesday, May 8, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Claire Walker Leslie, professional artist, naturalist and teacher, has given courses throughout New England on drawing, nature and field sketching. She has written and illustrated four books and is now at work on her fifth. Join her workshop to learn how to observe and document animals, plants and landscapes with word and image. Start your own field journal. No experience necessary.

Bring sketch pad, two soft pencils, black felt tip marker, color pencils (optional), binoculars (optional) and lunch. Wear comfortable outdoor clothing. Fee: $27 members, $32 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further information, call 659-2559.

CHILDREN'S PROGRAMS

More Spring Programs for children at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

Indians in the Spring on Saturday, May 4, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Children in Grades 3 through 6 can be Indians for a day! Learn about the Indian methods of cooking, hunting and communicating. Go home with your face painted Indian style and with an Indian tool, too! Fee $3.50 members; $4.50 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For information, call 659-2559.

Nature Sketching Workshop for Children in Grade 3 and up. Saturdays, May 4, 11, and 18. Focus will be on basic skills, form, negative space and correct concepts in seeing and interpretation. Classes held outdoors, weather permtting. Sketching folder — yours to keep. Joanne Papandrea, instructor. Fee: $12 members; $15 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further information, call 659-2559.

Country Jamboree at Cordage Park

The Cordage Park Marketplace will usher in the tourist season this year with a free, all-day Country Jamboree.

Scheduled for Sunday, April 28, from noon to 5 p.m., the event "will feature continuous live music, a 'Country Celebrity Look-a-Like' contest, and specials in many of our 55 stores and food concessions," said Marketplace manager William Rudolph.

The Carver Ridge Band, a local five-piece country group with continually ascending popularity will be "host" band for the day. Carver Ridge will lead off the festivities, playing from noon to 1 p.m., and will provide the finale music from 4 to 5 p.m. According to band spokesman Rick Haslett, the group will use the opportunity to show off some new musical combinations.

"We have recently added a country fiddler, David Poland, to our four-piece group," he said. Poland joins guitarist Haslett, Holly Haslett on guitar, Eric Nordin on base, and drummer Steve Fuller, who form the core of the four year-old group.

Two additional country bands, Cranberry Junction, and Peg Gatlyn and Country Mist, will provide music for the remainder of the day.

A square dance demonstration at 2 p.m., with caller Dave Perrault, will round out the music portion of the jamboree.

Rudolph expects "the real fun" of the day to be the Country Celebrity Look-a-Like contest. "We have posted a prize of $50 in Marketplace money, which can be spent just like real money in any of our Marketplace stores, for the person who dresses to look most like any country celebrity of her or his choice," he said. The contest judging will take place at "about 2:30 p.m.," he said.

Studds takes on administration at forum

By Thomas G. Lee

U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds met with his constituency in an open forum at the Norwell town library last Sunday afternoon.

He answered questions concerning aid to Nicaragua, tax reform, student aid, military cuts and his future in politics.

Studds said, "The average American has a better grasp of the Nicaraguan situation than President Reagan has."

Studds said the President's $14 million plan to renew aid to Nicaraguan rebels demonstrated the administration's "stupidity, illegality and inanity."

"The (Nicaraguan) government doesn't constitute a threat to our national security unless they allow outside countries to use Nicaragua as a military and nuclear weapons base," said Studds. "The way our government presently conducts itself in Nicaragua is a violation of our law and international law."

Studds went on to state that in the past the U.S. government has been blind to the needs of the masses in Nicaragua and have only dealt with the elite in the country.

It wasn't until 1981 that the U.S. complained about the Nicaraguan government repressing civil liberties, censoring the press and preventing free elections, stated Studds.

"If the U.S. retards rather than encourages change, then we will allow ripe conditions for communist takeover in Nicaragua," said Studds.

In the issues of tax reform and the national deficit, Studds clashed with Reagan's administration's view of economic tranquility.

Studds said Reagan's economic policy of cutting taxes and increasing military aid was absurd.

Studds explained if tax revenue falls, the government must either borrow to finance those expenditures or reduce its expenditures.

"The national deficit has grown four times under this President," said Studds. "Eventually the roof will fall in if this country continues this way."

Studds said the U.S. Treasury has always borrowed money regardless of the interest charge so sooner or later this country will have economic problems.

"The average person didn't notice any dramatic change with Reagan's tax cut," said Studds. "If a cut eventually soaks the average guy, then it's no cut."

On student financial aid, Studds said it was unfair for the administration to set salary guidelines for eligibility and to restrict the amount of financial aid.

Studds said there might be circumstances such as major hospital bills or other liabilities which should be evaluated in the aid application.

"The burden of financing an education should be taken off the parents and put on the students where it belongs," said Studds.

Studds supported the tuition advancement program advocated by Boston University's President John Silber.

Under the program, the student would pay back the financial debt by payment of his future income tax. A percentage of the student's adjusted gross income will be paid annually toward the liability.

The amount of the annual payment will be large or small depending on the student's income after graduation.

"The initial outlay would be great, but the government could reap the benefits in a short time," said Studds. "There wouldn't be the defaults that we have today."

In other issues, Studds said close to one-third of the current $975 billion budget was for military expenditures. A decrease in military spending would nefit the economy.

"Some of my constituents are military contract companies, but not large ones," said Studds. "Political pressures are less with me than with other congressmen."

Finally, when asked about his future in politics, Studds said he was discouraged about the level of politics in Washington.

"The political rhetoric of the Reagan administration is absurd," said Studds. "There is a 'strained credulity' about the administration — almost as if Lewis Carroll wrote the script."

"We are ruled by the raw political power of people who don't represent the mainstream," said Studds. "Most of the American people are to the left of Reagan."

"The present budget doesn't reflect what is best," said Studds. "The administration doesn't believe the federal government has a role in transportation, education or conservation — only a military role. This flies in the face of most American beliefs."

"When I retire I'll probably write a book," said Studds. "For the last 13 years I've been in politics, and I've found it hard to read and think."

Winter Garden show

Cohasset Winter Garden will be having their annual ice skating show April 27 at 7:30 p.m., directed by Marcia J. Breen.

The show this year is called "Celebration" and the feature star attractions are Mark Mitchell, the 1985 New England Junior Men's Champion, Sally Pacios, New England Intermediate Ladies' Bronze Medalist, and Paul Frey, New England First Test Men's Champion, along with many of our local skaters.

The show is sponsored by the Silver Blades Skating Club of Cohasset. Admission for adults, $3—Children 12 and under, is $1.

Newly-weds Joni and Rich Jensen, star performers in "Porgy and Bess."

Newly-weds in 'Porgy and Bess'

The most lyrical, soulful and jazzy moments of George Gershwin's classic folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess" will be presented in concert this Sunday by the Unicorn Singer soloists and ensemble of 25 voices with orchestra.

The major love duets, notably the famous "Bess, You is My Woman Now," will be performed by the troupe's newly-weds, Rich and Joni Jensen of Cohasset. The Jensen's, who both sing with the group, were married this fall in the midst of an intimate Unicorn Singers concert-ceremony at Broad Cove House, home of director Margo Euler.

Talented Scott Ketcham of Cohasset, familiar to South Shore musical theatre audiences, will force you to sway to the beat of the jazzy "Red-Headed Woman," and "A Woman is a Sometime Thing."

There are only a few days left to get your tickets for "The Best of Porgy and Bess in Concert," which will be presented this Sunday, April 28, at 4 and at 8 p.m. at Weymouth East Junior High School, 89 Middle Street, East Weymouth.

Tickets are available by calling 749-0162 or 383-9584 or at the Hingham Square Bookshop. After late Saturday afternoon, when the bookshop closes, tickets will only be available at the door at a higher price.

Area residents ready to perform in 'Porgy & Bess'

Sunday, April 28 the Unicorn Singers will present "The Best of Porgy and Bess in Concert."

There will be two performances, at 4 and 8 p.m., at the Weymouth East Junior High School, Weymouth. Advance tickets are $5 ($4 for students and senior citizens) and $6 at the door. Advance tickets are available for purchase at the Hingham Square Bookstore or by calling: 383-9584 (Cohasset), 659-7919 (Norwell), 749-0162 (Hingham), 337-0790 (Weymouth, after 3 p.m.), or 770-2183 (Quincy).

"Porgy and Bess" is an opera based on a story by DuBose Heyward (1925). It takes place in Catfish Row, a congested but colorful fishing community in South Carolina during the Great Depression. The music, composed in 1932 by George Gershwin, is filled with jazz and folk elements. Many of the songs and choruses are familiar to everyone, for example "Summertime," "I Got Plenty of Nothin'," and "It Ain't Necessarily So." All the solos will be sung by members of the Unicorn Singers, passing roles back and forth, capitalizing on individual talents and vocal color to portray particular emotions in the songs.

The selected choral numbers from the opera are truly spectacular, dividing into six and eight parts, accompanied by instrumental ensemble including banjo and drums.

The Unicorn Singers, directed by Margo Euler, is a group of 25 semi-professional singers who regularly perform during the year. Their Fall "gala" musical celebrations are well known to a subscription audience which enjoys the performance and wine-tasting party afterward. The traditional Christmas-time concerts and Spring performances have always been of an unusual nature, presenting music which has never before been performed on the South Shore of Boston (such as last Spring's presentation of "The Masque of Angels" by Dominick Argento), or combining elements such as dance and theater with the traditional choral concert. The performances entice even the most reluctant listeners with a distinct combination of the familiar and the new, with humor in many cases, and certainly with an excellent quality of material and performance.

The Spring concert this year of excerpts from "Porgy and Bess" will substantiate the group's philosophy of providing a high calibre of thoroughly enjoyable choral music to the general public on the South Shore. The singers, many of whom are members of other choruses and theater groups in the area, and who sing as soloists in many churches in surrounding communities, have been in rehearsal since January. Gershwin's music is complex and sonorous. The vocal requirements are as demanding as any opera, but with the sheer delight and fun of jazz both for performers and audience.

The story has universal meaning: humankind's struggle with nature and social forces, simultaneously tragic and joyful. It is an affirmation that we can all withstand privation and pursue our dreams. The "promised land" is in each person's heart if one only has the courage to seek it out. The music transcends all barriers of race and creed.

The following area residents are scheduled to peform:

Sarah deLima, Mary Anne Hansen, Marilynn Humphreys, Lisa Koed, Joni Jensen and Scott Ketcham of Cohasset; Ann Wolpers, Debby Gillis, Lorena Zeller, Ed Bartholomew, John Kaloyanides, Tom Potter, Diane Edson and Bill Reardon of Hingham; Diane Whiting, Jennifer Gwinn, Stephen Tooker, Nick Waterman and David Whiting of Scituate; Elaine Wroe, Susan Chapman and Carolyn Curtis of Marshfield, and Jean Scammell of Norwell.

Reviews mixed on Greenbush rail line

By Charlene Vandini

Opponents of commuter rail restoration said it will ruin business in Hingham Square and cause lower property values. But those who favor renewed service said it is necessary to ease transportation problems on the South Shore and will have the opposite effect on property values in the area.

The exchange took place at the April 17 forum co-sponsored by State Sen. William Golden (D-Plymouth/Norfolk) and the Hingham Transportation Committee in Barnes Auditorium at Hingham Town Hall.

Commuter rail serving the South Shore on the Old Colony Line ended in 1959. Prior to cessation of service, three branches made up that line: one ending in Plymouth, in Middleboro and the Greenbush line providing passenger service to Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

Earlier this year, Gov. Michael Dukakis said he would consider restoration of service if there was sufficient support from residents of South Shore towns.

Residents of Hingham, Scituate and Marshfield will find non-binding referenda questions concerning trains on their ballots April 27. Cohasset voters have already indicated their support for reactivation of commuter rail service by a four to one margin.

Deputy Secretary of Transportation Allan McKinnon told the audience the cost of restoration of rail service would be between $180 million and $200 million. Projected operating costs of $16 million annually and revenues of $6 million would mean an annual deficit of $10 million to be financed annually.

McKinnon also said Dukakis "has a strong commitment to public transportation."

Hingham Planning Board member, traffic engineer, and resident of West Hingham Richard Cook opposes restoration of rail service, citing the dangers inherent in 21 grade crossings and the proximity of the track to houses, especially in West Hingham, where 10 feet separate the track from some houses.

Cook said many formerly rundown houses in that neighborhood have been rehabilitated since rail service ended.

He added that a feasibility study of commuter rail showed an estimated total of 7,500 to 9,000 passengers on all three branches of the Old Colony line.

"That doesn't mean there will be 7,500 to 9,000 fewer cars on the Expressway," he said, explaining that some passengers would switch from the bus or boat service they now use. He also cited statistics that only 20 to 25 percent of the working residents of Hingham are employed in Boston.

"This is not as rosy as has been presented to you," Cook said.

Cook also challenged an earlier comment by Golden to terminate the line at the Hingham Shipyard and provide parking there. He said the Hingham Planning Board does not want the shipyard, which is being revitalized as a commercial area, overtaken by a parking lot.

Joseph Keating, a Scituate resident who teaches in the Hingham schools, pointed out that Cook is an abutter to the tracks in West Hingham. Keating said he thinks reactivation of rail service is "a wonderful idea."

Isabelle Leonard said she is an "enthusiastic supporter" of the proposed rail service, even though her South Street, Hingham, home is close to the tracks.

Both Ross Hall of Hingham and Peter Frazier of Weymouth cited the success of train service in Europe in their support of train restoration here.

Scituate selectman Eleanor Seaton urged the Hingham voters, "Don't leave Scituate out." She said there is presently limited weekday bus service in her town and no weekend service at all.

She also said many women had to take lower paying jobs on the South Shore because of the time-consuming commute into Boston.

Hingham transportation committee member William Grimes challenged an earlier statement by Cook that West Hingham property values would suffer. Grimes, who also lives near the track, said North Shore towns, such as Beverly and Prides Crossing, have not suffered due to the trains serving them.

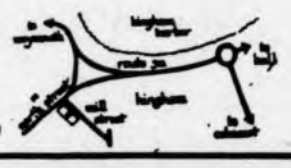
Alvin Spivak, another member of the transportation committee and also an enthusiastic supporter of rail service, noted that government subsidies are granted for highways and a subsidized rail service is more economical.

North Street, Hingham, resident Camille Colantonio asked members of Golden's panel what towns were used in the feasibility study that are comparable to Hingham, which has both MBTA and private bus lines, as well as commuter boat service to Boston.

Consultant John Suhrbier of Cambridge Systematics said it is not possible to find another town that exactly matches Hingham.

Lois Blowers told Golden that the video tape he had presented earlier in the evening was "one-sided." She pointed out it was filmed from an angle that did not show houses — including hers — which are within feet of the track.

Golden's tape showed him walking along the now-abandoned track in West Hingham, with the tracks running through a patch of trees. Blowers said that if he had turned 180 degrees, the proximity of the track to houses would be evident, and she has small children who play in her yard near the tracks.



Arline Sanford, MBTA assistant project coordinator, said if rail service is restored, the track would be fenced in as it passes through residential areas.

McKinnon added that the state "will be very sensitive to the concerns of people living near the track."

Other panelists at this meeting were State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset), Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield/Scituate), and Robert Cerasoli (D-Quincy).

Anti-drunk driving campaign

The physicians of the Norfolk South District Medical Society voted to observe the centennial anniversary of their medical society this spring by funding and participating in an anti-drunk driving campaign, "Think Before You Drink," aimed at area high school students.

The campaign is the result of the physicians' continuing concern for the number of teenagers and young adults whom they have treated as a result of alcohol related automobile accidents.

The physicians are offering their program to Norfolk South area high schools during prom season in cooperation with the Alcohol Resource Center's fifth annual Prom Campaign.

According to Susan Downey, director of the Alcohol Resource Center for Primary Prevention, "We expect that most of the area high schools will welcome the doctors' program.

St. Stephen's

Attention - Parents of Young Children:

Do you ever feel the need to get out of the house and share some adult company during the week? If so, St. Stephen's newly-furnished nursery room may be just the place for you. We would like to experiment with an informal gathering on Thursday mornings from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. We'll put a coffee pot on and you drop in with your youngster for awhile.

Thank You:

Due to the generous contributions of the parishioners who attended the Maundy Thursday Agape Supper, St. Stephen's was able to send $335 to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief. We requested the funds be specifically used to assist the hungry in Ethiopia.

Good Friday Walk:

On Good Friday, parishioners from St. Stephen's joined 700 others to walk up to 20 miles in Hingham to raise money benefitting poor farmers in the deep South. This year more than $3,000 was raised by our parishioners - a significant fraction of the proceeds from the entire walk.

In the Family:

Congratulations to Josiah Richardson Place and Lone Jensen, who were married on March 29, 1985, in Copenhagen.

Services and Lessons:

Sunday, April 28, The Fourth Sunday of Easter: 8 a.m. Holy Eucharist; 10 a.m. Holy Eucharist and Sermon; Host Family: Fran and Marie Johnston. Lessons: Acts 4:32-37, a description of the communal life of the early church in which all property was owned in common; 1 John 3:1-8, the love that the Father has shown for us in the Jesus Christ makes every Christian a child of God; John 10:11-16, Jesus describes himself as the Good Shepherd who lays down his life for his sheep.

Please - Help is Needed:

Can you spare one weekday morning (9 a.m. to 12 p.m.) or one weekday afternoon (12 to 3 p.m.) a month to drive the Social Service League van within Cohasset?

No special knowledge of Cohasset needed, just a wish to help those who need transportation to the local doctor or dentist, beauty parlor, barber or grocery store.

If you think you have the available time, call Ray Remick at 383-1035, or the Social Service League at 383-0771.

Baptist Church

Sunday Worship: 10:30 a.m., call for location, 545-3948, the Rev. Daniel Brodeur

Bible Studies: Adults - Tuesday, 8 p.m., at the pastor's home, Wednesday, 8 p.m., for those who are unfamiliar with the Bible and would like to discuss its contents with others. For location call the above number.

Youth: Sunday evening at various youth homes in Cohasset. Call the above number for more details and information concerning youth activities.

Second Congregational Church

Church school -Thanks to all children who helped plant a "cup of cheer" last Sunday. Our local shut-ins will appreciate your cards and gifts. Congregation members who know of someone in need of cheer, please contact the church office, 383-0345.

Next Sunday, April 28, children will atend church with their parents before church school. All teachers will use this time for a meeting to discuss Children's Sunday. Please mark your calendars.

Deacons -will meet at 8 p.m. April 30 at the Ketchum's house, 40 Red Gate Lane.

Trustees -will meet following the church service on May 5.

Christian Education Committee -will meet Tuesday, May 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Church Committee -Please note the special time and plan for the next Church Committee meeting, to which all members of all our church's committees and boards are invited. The meeting will begin promptly at 8 a.m. on Saturday, May 11. After a gourmet breakfast, we will devote a fast-paced three hours or so to some of the planning we're not able to do in our regular meetings. Each committee should plan to outline its present responsibilities, what it expects to do in the remainder of the year, and areas in which additional planning or help are needed.

Save June 21 -for a very special Family Night: Supper, Youth Talent Show, and Choir Shenanigans! Sign up now for the Talent Show with Ellen Fryling or Marsha Silvia. Anyone invited to participate from Grade 1 through high school. More later!

CCD -Confirmation is April 28 at 4 p.m.

Grade 1 - Thursday, April 25, at 3:30 p.m. The film "When a Friend Dies," from the Good Grief program will be shown.

Grade 7 - Thursday, April 25, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., an excellent film on the life of Jesus, based on Luke's Gospel, will be shown. Parents are invited to attend, also. Since this is the last class of the year, we hope all our students will make a special effort to be present.

Grade 6 - Mass will be Tuesday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. (Rehearsal Mon. at 3:30 p.m.) All classes end this week except the First Communion (Grade 2) and the last class for Grade 1 which will be on May 16. A sincere thank you to our teachers and for the cooperation of parents and students throughout the year.

Christmas Village Fair -Plans are already underway for the Fair, sponsored by the Cohasset churches. Two representatives from our Parish are needed to serve on the Central Committee. Please contact Father Keohane if you can assist in this project.

SS Chapter of Mass. Citizens for Life -will conduct a yard sale Saturday, May 11 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the parking lot of Cardinal Cushing School, Route 53 in Hanover. Donations of items are requested and may be delivered to the site on the morning of the sale. Baked goods and homemade jams, jellies, etc. are most welcome. Please call Judy Fitzsimmons, 383-0567.

The Peace Corps process: Interview to Liftoff

By Lisa J. Messersmith

When I applied for the Peace Corps in the spring of my senior year of college I wanted one thing — to make an adventure out of this life and to help in any way I could.

Poor, hungry, disease-ridden people is what I asked for, and when they gave me the job and friends pronounced me crazy, I took it because my heart, head and gut said "yes" in unison.

INTERVIEW

Dressed in similar garb as other students, I perused the Peace Corps file, while others looked on Merrill Lynch, Chase Manhattan, various medical, dental and law school, as well as pamphlets on how to come through an interview alive.

And when the time came for my Peace Corps interview, I was dressed similarly to the other young women clad in their first professional business suits.

But unlike the others who were to face stern, unforgiving, you-must-grovel-at-my-feet interviewers from banks and other prestigious places, I felt a sense of peace and calm which was to allow me to show my interviewer what I wanted and what I could give the Peace Corps.

This calm lasted through the interview much to my relief, albeit there were moments my sweat glands worked overtime. My interviewer, or recruiter as I was to call him, asked me several vital questions which I have to say I answered well and at times brilliantly.

The most difficult question was why?

Instead of loading him down with too much truthful garbage about helping others, the endlessness of innate optimism and a seeming immunity to dysentry, I told him I wanted to do it for myself. Period.

I want the experience, the full beauty and horror of it all. I want to learn new languages, live closer to the barest elements of human existence, write, stretch my creative self and study the folk culture.

Yes, I have a future in this thing. It isn't a whim, a safari, a two-year fantasy of wild animals, drums and spears.

I found myself talking too much and quickly shut my mouth. I think I got my point across.

When I returned to my apartment I felt for the first time that I had just told someone my deepest wish in the world. . .and they hadn't gone into fits of laughter or asked if I had thought about seeing a therapist.

WAITING

And I waited, and waited for an English teaching position to come up. Unfortunately, by the time I finished submitting all of my dental, medical and security check forms into the main office the positions had been filled by applicants who started the process in the fall of the previous year.

Yes, I was accepted, but that means nothing until an invitation is given for a specific position in a specific country.

When I applied, I had no idea of the endless amount of red tape involved, nor the persistence required on my part to constantly remind my recuiter, the medical office, security office and every other office that I still wanted to go.

By the time I was invited to Burkino Faso (Upper Volta) in West Africa, 11 months after applying, I was convinced the Peace Corps put their applicants through such a long, frustrating process because they wanted to see if I was as persistent, optimistic and ready to pack my bag as when I first met my recruiter.

DECISION TIME

Would I or wouldn't I? It was time to rethink everything from motives to the possibility of leaving a newly found career in journalism. I had already made the decision 11 months ago, but I had to make sure, often thinking too much with my head without consulting my heart or my gut.

This only lasted for a few days here and there for even my intellect realized the opportunity awaiting me.

As a friend said, opportunities don't just arrive, we make them happen. And I felt as ready as ever to pursue the great unknown ahead of me. As frightening a prospect as it might seem, I reasoned that I couldn't go anywhere standing still.

WAITING FOR LIFT OFF

I'm waiting again, this time to leave. I spend a week of orientation in Chicago and then fly from there to Ouagadougou, the capital of Burkino Faso, one of the poorest countries in the world, where I will spend three months training in languages, culture and teaching methods.

After training I am assigned to a secondary school to teach English.

To say that I don't have my doubts would be madness as I am no martyr or fool. The overall experience does not frighten me. It is the day-to-day unknown of what my life might turn into. I question myself: Can I deal with isolation, frustration, depression and other abstracts? And can I deal with millions of bugs, starving children, disease, drought? I feel like the Little Engine That Could. . .at the very beginning of its journey up the great mountain.

And yet, I don't know if I'm really that different from my fellow graduates working in those prestigious places in Boston and New York. We must all deal with similar feelings, albeit different settings. But I'll experience the best. . .and worst of two thoroughly disparate worlds, peoples, languages and existence.

I know this adventure will challenge me beyond anything I've known before and I will be the better for it. I wish myself "bon chance."

(Lisa will be leaving the Mariner Newspapers May 8, and we wish her the best.)

Sandy Beach sunrise

Sandy Beach,
Laid bare by ebbing tide
To shiver 'neath the moon's cold stare
And wait for sunlight's warming rays,
That even now have paled the East
And etched each lodge and rock exposed
In black against the gray.

Sandy Beach:
More stones than sand,
But still a beach along a stretch
Of coastline ribbed with rocks
And shoals and pinnacles
That burst and foam the running swells
And dream of fragile hulls.

Sandy Beach;
All quiet now.
The sea is calm, the air is still,
No wheeling, screaming gulls intrude,
No barking dogs or rocking radios,
No laughter, shouts or squealing tires,
No sound but that of peace.

Sandy Beach.
At last, just to the right
Of Minot's light, a guardian
That minaret, a blood red speck
A line becomes and then an arc;
The sun has come, so quick it swells,
A molten, throbbing coal.

Sandy Beach
Turned pink by the first light
Of sun that cannot leave the sea
But stretches, brightens, hanging there,
Reaches, grabbing for the sky
To offer us another chance:
A new life we may have.

Sandy Beach.
A knot of people join in prayer,
Then sing a song into the wind
That suddenly comes off the sea.
The rocks have taken shape at last,
A gull goes seaward, sweeping low,
Awake, 'tis Easter Day.

TOWN OF COHASSET BUILDING DEPARTMENT

At its April 22, 1985, the Board of Selectman voted to accept two new Building Permit fee schedules suggested by Building Inspector-Zoning Officer, Edward A. J. Poskus.

The fees for permits are listed below:

Residential

Building—$10.00 for the 1st $1,000 of evaluation $6.00 for each additional $1,000 of evaluation

Plumbing—$10.00 for 1st fixture $5.00 for each additional fixture

Gas—$12.00 for 1st fixture $5.00 for each additional fixture

Commercial

Building—$15.00 for the 1st $1,000 of evaluation $10.00 for each additional $1,000 of evaluation

Plumbing—$15.00 for 1st fixture $8.00 for each additional fixture

Gas—$15.00 for 1st fixture $8.00 for each additional fixture.

Any person performing work requiring a building or plumbing permit, and who has not already received a permit, will be required to obtain a permit and pay DOUBLE the normal fee of that particular permit.

Meet the new school board member

By Jane Lane

She was unopposed in her first run for public office. There was no need for a campaign. No bumper stickers, mailings, or debates.

Barbara Bliss, who takes her seat this week on the Cohasset School Committee, sees that lack of participation as a discouraging sign of the times.

The Summer Street resident notes, "I found it very distressing that I was unopposed. It (lack of contested offices) seems to get worse every year. I took out papers about a week and a half before they were due. At that point, I thought it would be nice if I was unopposed, but that wasn't how I felt at the end.

"I don't know," she continues, "running for elected office is a big thing now and it could cost a lot of money. The thing I think is important . . . when the office is contested, people find out about you, but even more importantly, you find out what other people have on their minds."

The former president of the Cohasset League of Women Voters acknowledges that lack of time is a consideration which prohibits many talented residents from contributing to their community.

"I think," Bliss adds, "that some people would have run for the school committee, but they were concerned about the process of running. The time commitment is great. This is a problem with all areas of voluntary activities - to find someone committed to a cause for a long duration. The bottom line, I think, is that everyone should give some time in their life to their community. There's a lot of talent here."

Bliss herself did not jump at the opportunity to enter the election for school committee. It took some persuasion from friends, and agreement from family that the time was right.

Barbara Bliss

"It was time to put my money where my mouth was," she states simply. "If you see some problems, rather than sit back and make a few phone calls, I guess it was just my time to get into it.

"Right after I sent in my nomination papers I thought, 'this is terrible, it's probably a crazy decision. My husband (Dr. C Michael Bliss, Board of Health member) is out at meetings and we have a thirteen year-old son at home.' But now I think I made the right choice and I'll give it my best."

The Smith College graduate says her approach as the freshman member of the school board will be to sit back and listen. Although there are a few issues she'd like to tackle during her three-year term, Bliss has never intended to blow the system apart.

One main thrust of her candidacy was the need to investigate, evaluate and strengthen the high school curriculum. According to Bliss, the entire scheduling conflicts and course tracking system must be re-evaluated in view of a declining student enrollment.

"I think the Cohasset system has a lot of strengths, especially for the student who is highly motivated. They can get a great deal from this system. I'm concerned about the rest of the kids, and I don't know the answer. How do we motivate a child with less ability and how will we work with that child? These are questions I want to look into," she says.

When asked to enumerate some of the issues she considers of major importance, Bliss pauses in uninterrupted thought. She then states, "some things are definitely going to be reviewed. The staffing issue . . . there will be a cutback with the declining enrollment. I don't everything about this issue, but it seems that if you have 60 kids in one grade and you had 85 the year before, that's obviously one less class.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 10 additional roll calls on the proposed bill overhauling the state's education system. Roll calls are from the week of April 8 - 12.

H 5900

House 129-24, rejected an amendment changing the formula and increasing the amount of money the state would pay in Equal Educational Opportunity Grants to communities spending less than the state average on education.

Amendment supporters said the increase, from $25 million to $37 million the first year, will be a major step toward equalization.

Opponents said the $25 million is sufficient and noted the bill contains many other equalizing provisions.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Voting against the bill were Reps. Robert Ambler, Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn and Frank Hynes.)

CHAIRPERSON (H 5900)

House 86-63, rejected an amendment eliminating a section allowing the Governor, instead of the other members of the Board of Education to appoint the board's chairperson.

Amendment supporters, noting the Governor already appoints the members, said allowing him to choose the chairperson is a blatant political move designed to allow him to appoint his chief fundraiser to the position.

Opponents denied the political implications and said the governor simply needs one person, responsible to him, who oversees education.

The House later approved an amendment allowing the current chairperson to serve out her term until 1986. (A "Yea" vote is for prohibiting the Governor from appointing the chairperson. A "Nay" vote is for allowing the Governor to appoint the chairperson.)

'Voting "Yea" were Reps. Bump, Mann and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes. Rep. Ambler did not vote.)

SUPERVISORS (H 5900)

House 109-37, rejected an amendment prohibiting "supervisors" from joining unions. Amendment supporters, noting the prohibition is designed with principals in mind, said it is a problem and a conflict of interest when principals who are themselves in unions, attempt to manage and hear grievances.

Opponents said the amendment is anti-union and is poorly drafted because it implies that teachers who "supervise" teacher aids would be prohibited from joining a union.

(Voting "Yea" were Reps. Murray and Flynn. Voting "Nay' were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes. Reps. Ambler and Mann did not vote.)

PRINCIPALS (H 5900)

House 80-67, rejected an amendment prohibiting principals and other administrators from being in the same collective bargaining unit as teachers.

Amendment supporters said this will allow principals to be in unions, but will eliminate conflicts of interest and enable them to better manage their schools. Opponents said the situation has not created problems and claimed the amendment would drive a wedge between principals and teachers.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Mann, Murray and Flynn. Voting against the billewere Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes. Rep. Ambler did not vote.)

CLASSROOM TEACHERS (H 5900)

House 110-34, rejected an amendment giving a school district $500 for each teacher who spends 90 percent of his or her working time in classroom teaching, provided that the district has a higher ratio of these teachers than the average school district.

Amendment supporters said this is an incentive program offering additional local aid and will encourage teachers to spend more time in the classroom. Opponents said this may be a good idea but claimed it goes too far by creating a $27 million expense.

Approving the bill was Rep. Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes. Reps. Mann and Ambler did not vote.)

REGENTS' SCHOLAR (H 5900)

House 83-62, rejected an amendment establishing a voluntary statewide advanced exam for graduating seniors and giving a regents' diploma to those passing in addition to offering free tuition at any state college to which they have been accepted, to students who score in the top 20 percent.

Amendment supporters said this will provide an incentive for students to excel and will provide financial assistance for many.

Opponents, noting the bill already provides $1,000 scholarships for well-rounded students, said the amendment is too costly and restrictive because it bases full scholarships on a single exam.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Flynn, Mann and Murray. Rejecting the bill were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes. Rep. Ambler did not vote.)

SPECIAL EDUCATION (H 5900)

House 95-46, rejected an amendment providing for full state reimbursement to school districts for certain special education programs for children under five-years-old and over eighteen-years-old.

Amendment supporters said special education costs have been increasing while communities' abilities to raise money have been restrained by Proposition 2 1/2.

Opponents said current reimbursement provisions are sufficient and claimed the amendment would cost too much money.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Hynes, Mann and Murray. Rejecting the bill were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Flynn. Rep. Ambler did not vote.

SUBSTANCE ABUSE (H 5900)

House 127-14, rejected an amendment requiring that all grades in public schools be taught about drug and alcohol abuse by a qualified person with at least three years experience in the field and a master's degree.

Amendment supporters said substance abuse is a major problem among students and noted that many current programs are being taught by unqualified persons.

Opponents said state mandates are costly and often don't work. They noted the House has already approved a grant program giving money to school systems which follow a substance abuse curriculum designed by the Board of Education.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Mann and Murray. Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes rejected the bill. Rep. Ambler did not vote.

TENURE (H 5900)

House 105-47, rejected a lengthy amendment making several changes in the appeals process for tenured teachers who are dismissed or demoted.

The key provision requires any appeal to go directly within 45 days to the Superior Court which shall appoint a court master to make a recommendation within 90 days.

Amendment supporters, noting this also prohibits any further appeal except on points of law, said the current system allows the process to be dragged out over three years, costs thousands of dollars, and makes it difficult to get rid of incompetent teachers.

Some opponents said the amendment goes too far and takes rights away from teachers. Others said there is a need for change but claimed the best way to do so was by changing the certification process.

(Approving the bill were Reps. Bump, Mann and Murray. Rejecting the bill were Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes. Rep. Ambler did not vote.

FROM THE KITCHEN

Figures tell us that 52 percent of all married women are employed outside of the home. For the remainder, so many activities beckon that the problem lies in how best to use one's "discretionary time." Instead of seeking fulfillment in a group, today's women tend to focus more and more on their own personal needs. Which may be why many board meetings of our women's group find us rehashing the questions of how to attract more members and where to find women to serve on next year's slate of officers. After arriving at our usual impasse, we are treated to coffee and dessert by our hostess, but Sandy Hawes fooled us at our last meeting by serving the following recipe. It was a change from our usual calorie-laden sweets and served hot from the oven, enjoyed by all. Sandy explained, as we all reached for seconds, that this recipe may be served hot or cold, can be doubled or baked on a cookie sheet and served as an appetizer, or at brunch.

ZUCCHINI SQUARES

3 c. shredded zucchini with skin on
1 c. Bisquick mix
4 eggs
1/2 c. grated Parmesan
1/2 tsp. salt, dash pepper
1 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
1/2 c. chopped onion, or 1/4 c. flakes
2T fresh parsley, or flakes
1/2 tsp. oregano
1/2 c. oil

Beat eggs in large bowl. Add remaining ingredients and blend with spatula. Grease 9x9" pan and bake in pre-heated oven for 25-30 min.

In our mother's generation, there were morning coffees, afternoon teas, luncheons followed by tables of bridge. These leisurely gatherings seem to be going the way of white gloves at church, long skirts at dinner parties and dressy hats for a day's shopping in town. Our bridge club reflects a different way of life, for there was a time when after playing, we would sit around over coffee and dessert until after midnight, knowing that once the children were off to school the next morning, we could relax over a second cup of coffee, luxuriating in a quiet morning. Now that the snapshots we share are of grandchildren, our days are spent working at jobs we enjoy and the evening that begins with an early dinner comes to an early end at 10 p.m. Days seem busier than ever. Here is the dish Ethel Page served at bridge club the other night, a meal so delicious we lingered at the table and never got to the bridge tables. Simple to prepare, the recipe was an old favorite clipped from a magazine, called

MOIST N'CRISPY ONION CHICKEN

1 env. Lipton's onion soup mix
3/4 dry bread crumbs
1 broiler cut in pieces, 2 1/2-3 lb.
1/2 c. Hellman's mayo

Mix chicken with crumbs (Italian-flavored may also be used) in plastic food bag and shake, after brushing chicken with the mayo. Bake on broiler rack in 375 degree oven for approximately 40 to 45 min. Serves four.

How are younger women spending their discretionary time? Evidence points to a decline in time spent in Scouting, service clubs, PTA, lodges, political and civic organizations. The big increases have been in jogging, bicycling, health clubs, participation in professional societies, enrollment in night school classes; focusing more on their own personal needs. Discretionary time seldom is a problem for Susan Maclagan who is spending long days at home writing and researching her book on flute playing. Faced with an August deadline, we are truly grateful to Susan for taking the time to send along recipes every now and then. This is her quick and easy

LEMONADE PIE

1 small can frozen lemonade, partially thawed, mix with Eagle Brand milk and 1 small container Cool Whip. Place all ingredients in crust and refrigerate. Serve chilled in a graham cracker crust.

Susan writes that the above is their favorite, but another quick and easy dessert made with condensed milk simply calls for: 1 c. sugar, 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, mixed with the Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. Place in the graham cracker crust at top with a can of cherry pie mix.

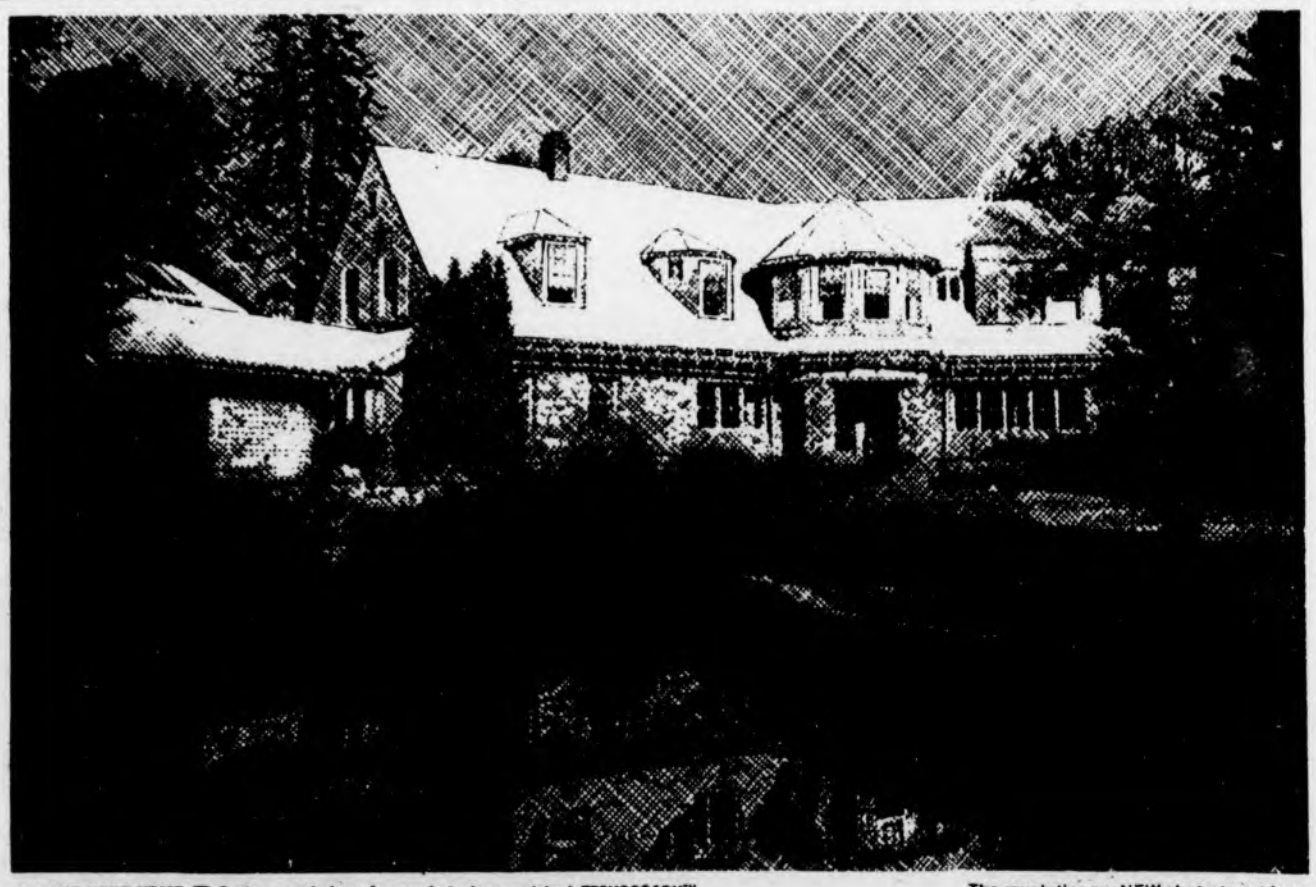
Whatever fish you prefer, if you miss the next couple of months on the ponds and streams, you have missed some of the best fishing of the year. As water and air temperatures warm up, the cycle begins and the game fish will feed more regularly. As body temperatures of the game fish rise, the feeding becomes more frequent and forage fish and insects are not in great abundance. This is your best time to catch a trophy trout, bass, or pickerel. Your lure or bait has less competition from other natural baits and the summer fishing folks have not descended on local lakes and ponds as yet with boats, water skiers, and windsurfers, etc. The best ways to fish are many and varied. Here are only a few that have worked for me in April.

Largemouth bass and pickerel: Rebels and Rapala lures 2 1/2 to 5" worked along the shoreline slow along drop offs where deep holes are known to hold wintering schools of fish. Both bass and pickerel will jump a minnow - cast or trolled in this manner.

All trout: Salmon eggs, corn, nightcrawlers, small shiny lures, minnows, shrimp, marshmallows and many, many other things will catch trout in the spring and the reason is this most active time of the year, for the fish are active, aggressive, hungry and will eat almost any of the above items fished on or near the bottom. (Lures should be fished at various depths and speed.)



Our staff of experts is eager to give you all the current information we have on fish stocking, local hot spots, selection of gear and local fishing contests to make your spring fishing a success.

Politicus

by David A. Mittell, Jr.

The evils of overregulation

Issues come and go and political junkies such as I, as well as normal people, get greatly exercised about them. Alas, time passes and the issues of yesterday lose their cathectic power. This recently came to mind on discovering some Harvard Crimsons dutifully saved from the now largely forgotten week in April, 1969, when a bunch of my contemporaries occupied a building at Harvard with in mind to present a number of non-negotiable demands. I hardly need have saved them, for the thing was a farce, and the issues of the hour, such as whether ROTC should or should not continue to be allowed to parade on a baseball field called "Soldiers' Field," seem today unworthy of the fervid attention received at the time.

On the other hand, issues that really matter, issues that are symptomatic of fundamental problems or of fundamental historical change, are often buried in the back pages of contemporary accounts of events. Such, it seems to me, is the news last week out of Carlisle, Massachusetts.

It seems that Carlisle, population about 3,300, needed a new police station. Mindful of the constraints on budget imposed by Proposition 2 1/2, town fathers undertook to save some money with what on the face of it was inspired thinking. They recruited volunteers to do the job. One sited the building on the lot, one designed the windows, one designed the door, the historical commission selected the shutters, and four members of the police department itself designed the floor plan.

In all, 40 citizens of Carlisle worked on the plan, and in all, $50,000 was saved from what a hired designer would have charged. The professional designer who coordinated the project charged his cost, $7,500. In all probability, the building that will emerge will be better and more appropriate to Carlisle than anything an outside "hired gun" would have produced. Inspired folks, the Carlislites, yes?

"Criminals," says the state Office of the Inspector General. It seems that it is against the law to use volunteers in such a manner. No one to sue of five years hence the roof falls in . . . and modern America just cannot get by without someone to sue.

Furthermore, Inspector General Joseph Barresi has written the town saying that the cut-rate designer "was selected for this work in the absence of written designer selection procedures; without public notice; with no open and fair opportunity for others to apply; with no discernible procedures for comparing . . . qualifications; with no written explanation for the building committee's selection; and indeed without apparent regard for whether he meets the registration requirement."

Now, Mr. Barresi is only doing his job in writing such bureaucratese, and his objections to what Carlisle has done are in a narrow sense entirely valid. But it seems to me that something is very wrong with our political system if a group of patriotic (there's no other word that describes them) citizens in a self-governing town may not undertake to volunteer their professional expertise for the common good.

Regulation always comes about in order to correct some abuse - in the case of the Inspector General's office the gross abuses in public purchasing that were discovered in the 1970's. But when regulation gets to the point, as in the Carlisle case, of stifling human initiative, it seems to me it threatens our liberties in a fundamental way.

What must be remembered is that the Europe our forbears came from was a place where history imposed a tremendous burden of what we would call regulation. From primogeniture to the complex medieval system of economic franchise, the gamut of law and tradition in Europe stifled the individual to the point where, when America became a place to escape to, the perilous passage seemed to many well worth the risk.

In America, free men did as they pleased, and if the emerging laws of one community or colony became constricting, they made like Roger Williams, who departed Massachusetts and founded his own colony - Rhode Island. The proper term in the history books is "salutory neglect," the somewhat unintentional century-and-a-half long British policy of non-intervention in our affairs that allowed us to become free men. It was during this period that colonists, most of them former paupers, created the "infrastructure" for most of the liberties we hold dear. Such men would have found the creation of a public building by community volunteerism (as in Carlisle) completely normal, and they would be astounded by the artificial "criminality" of today's Carlislites.

Not even an eccentric such as I propose bringing back the 17th century at the turn of the 21st. But it seems to me that the events in Carlisle should give us pause. Is our civilization to become so complicated and so regulated that we dare not combine with our neighbors to build a low-cost community police station? If we so much as discuss it, do we run the risk of violating the state's "open meeting law"?

It is doubtful that Henry Ford could get a job with Ford Motor Company today, and it is nearly certain that Abraham Lincoln could not get a job with the government. The policies that would prevent that from happening, like the policies that prevent the Carlislites from combining in the spirit of good neighbors to build a police station, were extremely well intended. Nearly all public and private policies that complicate process and restrict freedoom are well-intended -and that's the problem. If evil intent were involved, the evil of overregulation would be far easier to fight.

I wonder where it will all end, and I wonder what, when government undertakes to protect us from every imaginable risk of evil, will become of our free society.

☐If Rick Monday (a baseball player) and Tuesday Weld (an actress) were to marry on a Thursday, you could attract attention by writing, "She'll be Tuesday Monday Thursday."

☐W. Fowler in his classic, A Dictionary of English Usage, set 5 criteria for good writing —be direct, simple, brief, vigorous and lucid.

☐A sign posted in a children's library in NYC: Be Kind to Books. They Are Your Friends.

☐Since time immemorial folks have been poking fun at cities. Examples:

☐The trouble with Oakland is that when you get there, it's there.

☐San Diego is as close to Utopia as any American city of metropolitan size is likely to come. — Jack Smith.

☐San Diego didn't look like the kind of town where people get born. — Steve Ellman.

☐New York has been called Fun City, the Big Apple, and the place halfway between Sodom and Gomorrah.

☐Finally, there is a famous epitaph written by W.C. Fields: On the whole I'd rather be in Philadelphia.

☐What is wrong with the following sentence: Democrats believe Reagan will renege on his promise not to raise taxes in his second term. (The President can neither raise nor lower taxes; that power belongs to the Congress.)

☐Speak well of your enemies; after all, you made them. This recalls an old proverb: "One enemy is too much for a man in a great post, and a hundred friends are too few."

☐A bookie is a pickpocket who lets you use your own hands.

☐The best thing about the future is that it only comes one day at a time.

☐It was Thomas Carlyle who said, "Genius is the infinite capacity for taking pains." Some anonymous sage had a slightly different definition: "Genius is the infinite capacity not only for taking pains but for giving them."

☐The only way a do-it-yourselfer can stop hitting his thumb is to have his wife hold the nail.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Life time commitment to saying hello

If our children don't speak to you, it's not our fault. And when they're adults, if they still don't come up with a pleasant 'hello,' don't call their parents to complain. Mothers and fathers spend at least 20 years of their lives imploring their children to speak to adults.

"Did you say 'hello' to Mrs. Brownburtle?" "Did you speak with Mr. Bradbury, Dearrrr?" "Perhaps you didn't have a chance to say 'hi' to the Galdbertans, sweetheart, over there darling, you just walked right past them."

Those are the samples, familiar, right? We were raised on them, never weaned from them, and as soon as our voices didn't sound like we were 12 anymore, we started using them on our kids.

Personally, I've never had problems speaking to people. Over the years I've spoken to thousands who probably wish I hadn't. So I didn't get the devil for not speaking. But I have got it for failure to stop.

Usually a little kid of three can find his hallmark beginning of being asked if he spoke . . . to So and So.

For almost two years they get a grace period for failure to say 'hello' politely. That's called shyness. There's that little edge given until the same act of hiding behind a mother's shoulder instead of perking right up with a greeting turns into what's called "rudeness."

By the time kids are 10 or 11 we don't nearly get after them to speak, we expect them to put something into it. "Did you say 'hello'?" becomes spoken through clenched teeth and slit eyes. It's a warning.

If they fail to heed it they hear, "Wait till I get you back in the car."

Thing is, teaching politeness in our young is one of the neverending jobs of parenthood, like feeding them.

We want our children to step into the kitchen, beaming, with a little "A" glowing on the math paper tucked under her arm, giving a gracious nod and verbal acknowledgement to the people who are visiting our homes. That's all.

These expectations, no matter how often outlined and in spite of squeezing their upper arms while we remind them of saying 'hello,' are frequently unmet.

Instead, kids are likely to burst through the door, walking directly in front of the new pastor and his wife without a faretheewell, and on to the refrigerator without a backward glance. When you do get them to speak, it's wi ı their mouth full of stuff that falls out easily.

No small burden, instilling politeness.

As mentioned, I had no problem speaking to people, still don't. But as a child I'd been one to pick up nicknames attributed to small town characters. And when I'd see them, it was the nickname which I used to address them now and then. But I always did it in a gladsome manner, tickled to death to see whoever it was while my parents wished I had overlooked them and come off simply as being rude or nearsighted.

With a child who seems to seize the duty of speaking as an opportunity for center stage, the parent faces a different dilemma. She speaks to everyone all right, circling the room even with the proper names used. But then she lunges on and on with a burble of unwarranted conversation, until her mother must walk behind her and belt her ever so unobtrusively to let her know she's spoken, more than enough.

I have seen kids come into a room while their mother was distracted. I wanted to say to them quickly, "Psst, come here quick and say 'hi' before she asks you." Because I know the nettlesome moments that arise when a mother asks that question as if she were asking about who drove the car over the cliff. And when both the guest and the child swear he spoke, she really doesn't believe it. Or she figures it was a perfunctory rather than a charming greeting.

The responsibility for courteous acknowledgement of other people by my children is not my problem now. They all are elsewhere and I have no way of knowing if they're speaking to people as they should or not. I can only trust them and the many years I invested towards that end.

Of course we haven't even mentioned the further criteria for making us look good with advanced politeness of standing up when an adult enters a room and shaking hands without the pizza palm to palm.

But it should be recorded, and I'm doing that here, that parents are the primitive force behind communication. And they are also the ones who, when they don't speak, get accused not of shyness or rudeness, but of snobbery. But that's something, fortunately, that few grow into as adults.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Now paying 10.94%.

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay like money market accounts! At the current rate—10.94%—you could double your money in less than seven years. Just hold Bonds for five years and you get the new higher variable rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

But some of the best things about Bonds haven't changed. Savings Bonds are still as safe as ever. They're still exempt from state and local income taxes. And since Bonds cost as little as $25, they're as affordable as ever. What's more, Bonds remain a great way to keep our country strong.

You can purchase Bonds almost anywhere. At neighborhood banks, savings and loans and credit unions. Or easier still, right through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

For your free booklet, write: "50 Q&A," U.S. Savings Bonds Division, Washington, DC 20226. U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least 5 years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than 5 years earn lower interest.

A commitment to community for Bliss

"There will be cuts, but I don't know at this point where they'll be. I will definitely examine this issue."

On the subject of instructors, Bliss notes, "we have a core of a very good faculty and I think there are those who really care about our kids. I think there's a need to build on what we have. This school system is not perfect, and there are problems, especially for the non-motivated student. Right now, we are not reaching those kids with lesser ability."

Since Bliss and her husband moved to Cohasset in 1968, she has been an active member of the local LWV. She was also a member of the School Facilities Committee for four years in the early 70's. It was likely the experience of participating in League studies, researching and presenting unbiased facts about local issues, that heightened her interest in municipal politics.

Although the LWV is non-partisan, Bliss explains interest in important contemporary issues ignited there, often leads to personal participation in elected office.

"The League develops a commitment to the community. I think my involvement with the League rubbed off on my husband. His concerns with the Board of Health arose as the League was discussing a related issue. His level of awareness of what was happening in this community was due, in large part, to my participation in the League," she says.

Looking at past and present elected town officials, Bliss notes that many are, or were once, associated with the Cohasset League. "Perhaps it's a natural progression," she adds. "People are intimidated at first of making a presentation in front of people. But you develop that sense of commitment, and self confidence."

Recalling the lack of contested offices in this past election, she says, "Today people are afraid of making a commitment. . . maybe it's the time, or the lack of it."

Although her schedule is crowded, with choir rehearsal at the First Parish Church, and as President of the Friends of the South Shore Conservatory, Bliss feels the school committee will take priority.

"In any town office, and with any of the volunteer activities I have served in, you can do as much or as little as you want. I really plan to commit myself to this. I feel I can put some constructive time into the school committee," she says, adding, "my husband and I discussed this a lot before I decided to run for office. As much as I want to do this, we can't envision getting through one dinner now without a few phone calls."

It was during their recent attendance at the annual Town Meeting, that Bliss' attention was diverted to the need of maintaining the school buildings. "We were sitting in that high school auditorium, and I was embarrassed. There is an immediate need to examine the curriculum at that school, and there's also a need to look at the buildings we have been forced to neglect," she stated.

Bliss' obvious sense of involvement in her community was fueled by family tradition. "That was the way I was brought up," she says, "and my husband, too."

As for the future, Bliss hopes the foundation constructed during her years as a League member serve her well. "I always want to keep an open mind when I look into an issue. That's most important," she explains. "I'll try to search out the facts, a tool I acquired through the League, and not necessarily take someone's word as the truth. I want to approach everything in an unbiased manner."

Paragon Park at art center

Ride the roller coaster, smell the popcorn in the air, listen to the carousel music . . . retrace those exciting days of carefree living at Paragon Park. For generations, the park has served as a meeting place for the young, a chance to soak up the sun and surf for families and a quiet spot for a winter stroll for all ages.

Enjoy all the diversity of this South Shore landmark through the South Shore Art Center's Art of Paragon Park exhibit. The exhibit, which runs May 3 through May 31 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, features the pastels by Patricia Door of Milton and photographs by John Krall of Dorcester plus selected works by selected other artists.

All the vibrant colors of an amusement park, the diversity of the park-goers, the quiet behind-the-scenes preparation for opening day have been captured by the artists selected to exhibit in this tribute to Paragon Park.

During the opening reception for the exhibit on Friday, May 10 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., the Center will transform itself into a miniature Paragon Park with carousel music playing, popcorn popping and carousel horses greeting the guests. The Center's salute to the famous motif used by many an artist will also include a continuous slide show of photos by Krall depicting the preparation of the carousel for opening day and of other park scenes.

Joining Dorr and Krall for this tribute to the park are Elizabeth Pearl, Rosalind Farbush, Linda Cuff, Elizabeth Baglione, Stacy Hendrickson, Dale Willis, Janet Marshall and Patricia McCarthy. From this exhibit guests will readily see the excitement the park created in the eyes of artists and the feelings these artists have been able to translate onto the canvas or into the photographs.

A freelance photographer, Krall has won many awards for his work, including awards at the Hull Harbor Annual Arts Festival and the South Shore Art Center annual arts festival. His work was selected by the Dorchester Arts Council for its first anual calendar. His work may be seen in the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library; Cleary, Page and Esbjorn Insurance Agency; The Bookstore Cafe; Quincy Market and others.

Dorr's Paragon Park series culminated from her interest in architectural forms and the roller coaster lent itself most to this interest in architecture. As a painter it, "attracted me because of its sculptural forms and as a person, it attracted me because of my fond memories of spending time at Nantasket Beach," she said.

As the park is disassembled and removed from its present site, only fond memories will linger. The Center's Art of Paragon Park will become for a brief moment a looking glass into the past. The exhibit is open to the public, Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Morrissey designs for show

Ellen Morrissey of Cohasset is one of the designers participating in the Decorators Showhouse and Garden Tour, opening April 28 at the Endicott Estate in Dedham.

Morrissey is utilizing a dramatic Victorian floral wallcover in the guest lavatory, a textile print from the turn of the century which interprets the period of the home. A mirrored ceiling and glazed paneling create a sumtuous environment.

A 1985 accompaniment to the room is the introduction of the communications components. A telephone, television and receiver have all been included in the room, successfully combining the best of both eras.

French invasion of Cohasset at impasse

It's been several months since selectmen officially proclaimed a small rural French town, our sister community.

And although we had welcomed one visitor from Souppes-sur-Loing to our shores, future plans are currently stalled.

Back in France, where government functions by an autonomous Mayor, there are rumblings about depositing an entourage in Cohasset some time this summer. What His Honor Victor Prudhomme says, is. And he says he wants to see Cohasset in August.

Back here, with a recent change in town leadership, and where the workings of government are not notably hasty, there are no such plans to reciprocate the visit.

It is rumored, according to Thomas Churchill of Bound Brook Lane, the World War II hero whose actions spurred last year's proclaimation, that Maire-Prudhomme intends to bring along about thirty adults during his summer vacation. And they don't intend to bunk at the local inn.

Churchill, who led the Eighth Batllion, Fourth Armored Division which liberated Souppes from German occupation, said the plans were formulated during a recent visit by resident Rene Dine.

Mssr. Dine stayed with the Churchills during his stay in Cohasset. Although he was on a business trip to the United States, he was told by Maire Prudhomme to visit Cohasset.

He did that. Mssr. Dine is remembered for his cordial greeting to residents during Town Meeting.

He then informed the Churchills, interpreted by Atlantic Avenue resident Frances Hajjar, that his town intended to send several couples to Cohasset for a two-week stay in August, per order of the

Mixed reviews for septic rules

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Opinions are mixed on the merit of Cohasset's newly adopted septic system regulations. A group of local developers, installers and engineers agree most of the economic burdens created by the changes will fall on the shoulders of homeowners.

The restrictions pertain to the placement, engineering and upkeep of septic systems. They went into effect April 11 and are designed to assist the health board to protect the environment and public health of Cohasset by insuring that septic systems are upgraded throughout town, according to health agent Joseph Godzik.

The new rules include that septic tanks and their connecting pipes be placed 50 feet from wells. Their leaching facilities must be set 150 feet instead of 100 feet away.

Tanks and leaching areas must now be 20 feet, not 10 feet away from property lines. Two hundred feet, no longer 100 feet, must be the distance between leaching areas and reservoir waters (tanks and connecting pipes should be 50 feet away).

Septic tanks must be 25 feet away and leaching areas 75 feet away from both coastal and inland wetlands.

New septic systems may no longer be constructed in the flood plain.

Homeowners interested in building an addition with a bedroom (a room which affords privacy and isn't a cooking, bathing, dining or purely living area), must upgrade their existing septic system to the standards of the new regulations, Godzik said.

They must notify abutters of the intended construction and submit a certified engineer's plans of the new system to the board of health at a public hearing.

When installations or repairs are being done without the building of such additions, homeowners are still required to submit engineers' plans to the board for approval, Godzik added.

He explained that state regulations concerning septic systems require engineering plans. Cohasset up to now hadn't demanded that homeowners comply with these state regulations.

Owners who want to sell their homes must show that the system has been inspected and pumped within the last year. And the owner must give prospective buyers and the board maps which pinpoint the location of septic tank covers.

New second story raises tempers

By Jane Lane

It's sitting atop concrete pilings, at the edge of a slope on Jerusalem Road. What was originally a one-story, nondescript home with a fantastic view, is quickly emerging as a two-story structure which neighbors say will obstruct their pastoral setting.

Work is continuing at 51 Jerusalem Road, as neighbors begin an extensive appeal of the construction. Attorney John F. Roy, representing the Donald O'Neil family, states simply that the building permit issued this month "is illegal."

That the new owners, Distinctive Homes Trust of North Scituate were not made to satisfy all the requirements of the town by laws is incredible, he continues. "It seems to me this thing has been rubberstamped," Roy says.

As a former member of the Zoning Board of Appeals, Roy recalls how residents applying for permission to construct a simple porch "were made to cross all "t's" and dot every "i" before the plans were approved, with consideration given to all abutters." That this major structural change was "signed off" without a public hearing by the Building Inspector and the Health Agent, is a procedure incomprehensible to the local attorney.

One foundation of his argument against the town is that the remodeling will result in an additional bedroom. According to local by law, an additional bedroom means modifications and enlargement of the septic system.

But Health Agent Joseph Godzik says there is no change in the number of bedrooms, and the septic system, which is currently functional, may remain intact.

And Building Inspector Edward Poskus agrees, saying that the home was originally listed on the real estate market as a three bedroom home, not a two-bedroom as Atty. Roy contends.

"There will be three bedrooms, just as in the original," Poskus says. "Mr. Roy said there was only two, but I disagree."

As far as the other changes to the exterior and interior, Poskus said the new owners have complied with ali town and state regulations. Because the home is on a non-conforming lot, and that footprint, or outline of the home will not be enlarged, there is no need for any hearing before the Health Board, the Zoning Board, nor the Planning Board.

Roy contends the original home included five rooms, a kitchen, living room, a den or alcove, two bedrooms, and one and a half baths. The new proposal calls for a six-room house consisting of a kitchen, dining room, living room, three bedrooms and two and a half baths.

Dr.Godzik explains that additional bathrooms are not a concern to the Health Board. It is the number of people residing in the home, determined by the number of bedrooms, that is used as a factor when considering whether a septic system is acceptable.

In this case, he says, what Mr. Roy considers an alcove or den in the original structure, is, in the determination of the Health Board, a third bedroom. That will not change with the second story addition, he adds.

"They will not be increasing the number of bedrooms," he says determinally. "By definition a bedroom is any room in the dwelling that affords a

Cohasset's week . . .

In memory of Cohasset youths

Ten Cohasset families have presented a videotape to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in memory of Seanna O'Leary and Desiree Yess.

The video is called, "Death of a Friend: Helping Children Cope with Grief and Loss." It is a twenty minute puppet production produced by the Judge Barker Guidance Center and the Junior League of Boston in 1984 as part of the "Good Grief Program," Sandra S. Fox, PhD, director.

The Judge Baker Guidance Center Good Grief Program helps children and families to cope with death, life-threatening illness and injury. The video is designed for use with children from preschool through early elementary years and for use as a resource for parents and teachers and others who work with young children.

A guidebook accompanies the video to help program planners. The video is available for loan free of charge to Cohasset adults. It can be played on any VHS machine.

It takes a lot of practice to be the best. But Timmy Myers is trying hard, along with coaches Mike Suhrbier and Nancy Kromp. (Carol McCann photo)

Special town meeting

Selectmen voted Monday night that June 17 will be the date of the special Town Meeting. The meeting will begin in the high school auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The warrant for all petition articles for that meeting has been open, and will remain open for one week until Monday, May 6.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England said there is a chance that the new quorum regulation may be in effect by the time of the June meeting. If the article, which was approved at the April Town Meeting, is reviewed and approved by the state attorney general, 100 voters rather than the previous 200, must be in attendance before the meeting begins.

Traffic sign proposed

In response to a request from a resident, Police Chief Joseph Kealey has proposed that a 'Merge Traffic' sign be located at the intersection of Doane and Church Streets.

A resident of that area requested selectmen review the traffic problems in that vicinity. Chief Kealey felt a traffic sign would suffice.

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield must now petition the state to install a sign in the triangle at that street location.

Police and fire station repairs

Selectmen requested that Building Inspector Edward Poskus, a registered architect, estimate the costs of hiring an architect to plan major renovations to the police and fire station.

Poskus can not work on plans pertaining to any municipal building in Cohasset, according to town bylaw. In that case, selectmen said he could estimate the cost of hiring an architect to plan the renovations.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur and Frank England have toured the facility and agreed much work needs to be done to the facility. "Let's do a first class job, so we won't have to bother the building for another 20 or 25 years," McArthur suggested.

England further suggested that money for the architect could be appropriated at the special town meeting, with a bond appropriation request to follow at the next annual Town Meeting.

Some of the repairs are on an emergency level, they agreed. There is also a need to combine facilities for women employees and separate facilities for the male firefighters and police officers.

"If we go bit by bit, every two months we are going to bandaid this place," McArthur stated.

Selectmen decided that after the costs are estimated, the board could interview architects who specialize in the construction of police and fire complexes.

Officer requests legal fees

Officer John Small, who returned to the police department after a six-month leave of absence, requested that the town pay his legal fees, incurred when his request to return to work was overturned.

Small told selectmen he had to pay $750 in legal fees after he missed six months of work and about $12,000 of his annual pay. Although selectmen emphasized the need to talk about the matter in closed session, Small told them in an open meeting that he originally requested a three-week leave after a family member's death. He was required to have a doctor certify his ability to return to work after that time. The need of psychiatric care was prolonged, and he was out of work for six months, he added.

He was subsequently certified by a physician and returned to work after six months.

When Selectman Diane Sullivan inquired why a doctor's certification was necessary, selectmen answered that was not a proper dicusssion for open session.

"When he first asked for a leave, he feared for his grandfather's well being rather than his own. I found it quite unusual that his leave was contingent upon psychiatric care, before he returned to work," Sullivan said.

"That's no one's business, except John's and his grandfather," Selectman Rocco Laugelle stated.

Selectmen then warned any further discussion in an open meeting was not in the best interest of the officer.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said he was opposed to selectmen placing an article for the appropriation within the Town Meeting warrant. Selectmen then instructed Small to gather the 100 signatures necessary to place a petition article within the warrant.

need written approval from the board to put cleaners or additives in the tanks. Godzik said board members are against the use of corrosive chemicals such as acids, but accepted the use of biodegradable agents.

And even though haulers in Cohasset have always been required to file monthly reports of their hauls with the board, they are now in danger of losing licenses for not complying with this rule, he said.

Godzik said he didn't think Cohasset's septic system regulations are much more or less restrictive than other towns' requirements and are necessary to tackle the problem of poor drainage in many areas.

He said the town is full of ledge, silt and clay, materials water can't easily permeate. Because of the likelihood of poor drainage conditions, the board also set a unique requirement. Developers proposing to build clustered housing must provide a geohydrological study to prove that the land can absorb great amounts of disposal water.

Neil Murphy, an engineer who works for local developers as a site plan consultant, said the new requirements will make the price of real estate skyrocket and seemed to be a form of zoning.

"This is zoning in a different form. For instance, it's not the health board's place to decide that you can't build a new system in the flood plain. I think that is a matter that should have gone before town meeting," Murphy said.

He also objected to many new requirements for how the engineer's plans should be created, because they will double the cost from $500 to $1,000.

"I am scared to death for the people who can't afford the manner of repairs they (the board members) require. There are many failing systems in Cohasset owned by people of moderate means," he said.

In reply to Murphy's concerns, Godzik said none of the regulations, state or local, are set in stone. Provisions for variances exist for those who show proof of some kind of hardship.

"You know the old cliche, 'there's no free lunch.' When you're attempting to protect the environment and public health, it always costs money. And there is no question that this is going to cost (the people who can afford it) more money," he said. "What's unfortunate is that usually the costs are spread out, such as costs for public sewerage. Here the costs are falling on the individual homeowners."

Wayne Sawchuck, a local contractor/developer and licensed septic system installer, said he fears inspectors will be held accountable for systems failing within months of an inspection.

Godzik said it was highly unlikely an inspector would be considered responsible for the system's breakdown. "All the installer is responsible for is saying the system is sound at the moment. We know he can't predict what is going to happen under the ground," he said.

Sawchuk added that he thinks the old methods for planning installations of new systems and repairs provided economic solutions. In the past, installers worked closely with the health agent and the owner to create feasible and affordable plans.

He said homeowners must now pay for an additional percolation test and observation hole, along with the engineer's plans. The entire job could cost them anywhere from $10,000 to $20,000 on the average, due to the sophisticated designs engineers render.

Godzik explained the additional precautions were instituted to give the board greater assurance that the systems will last.

Ross Rosano of R.W. Rosano Inc., a local hauling and installing company, and Robert Pape, a general contractor who runs the Cohasset-based Oaks Farm Inc., said they think most of the new regulations provide good consumer and environmental protection.

Rosano said, "The health board is working to protect the environment. This makes our job somewhat harder, but we have to do our part to protect the environment too."

Plans with 'Sister Souppes' stalled

Maire. This was an unexpected notice.

"I told him it might be better to have about ten people, rather than 30. But even though we had an interpreter there, he had a hard time understanding why we couldn't have more people," Mrs. Churchill said. The French couples would expect to be fed and housed in private residences as Mssr. Dine did, not to pay for motels, she added.

Former Selectmen Chairman Cliff Mitman was present during the April discussions with Mssr. Dine. He attempted at that time, to deftly explain that government here functions much more deliberately and democratically, than in Souppes. "I don't know how successful he was," Mrs. Churchill noted.

Her husband, who returned to the former battleground two years ago, is anxious for some form of resident exhange to take place. "I want this thing to happen for the kids. They're the ones who can benefit from something like this," he said.

He would like selectmen and himself, to arrange some type of short-term student exchange program with our sister community. He was waiting for the change in selectmen's command to occur. Now that it's complete, he is anxious to discuss some plans with Chairman Frank England.

"Cliff has told me what he had previously discussed," England said. "But there are currently no plans that I know of."

Churchill described Souppes as a rural, blue collar community. It is a beautiful, progressive town. Although not considered a suburb of Paris, it is centrally located, and many Parisiennes own summer homes in Souppes.

"I think the kids would enjoy an exchange program," he said. "And they're really pushing for something over there. The mayor is a very strong person and wants to get this going."

Right now, Churchill said, the French leader is awaiting word from Cohasset selectmen about plans to exchange residents and students. He described it as a "fantastic opportunity for the residents of Cohasset. That's the real value of the proclaimation of a sister community."

He remembered the town as particularly beautiful, and the residents interested in many activities similar to those in Cohasset, such as sailing. All community activities, however, are operated by the government, he said.

Mrs. Churchill explained that their recent guest, Mssr. Dine, is an affluent businessman who currently works for a pharmaceutical company. It was during his stay that he told them of Maire Prudhomme's intended visit in August, along with several other couples from Souppes. "It was clear that they intend to stay in residents' homes here in Cohasset. And as much as we tried to explain, I don't think he understood what a hardship that would be," she said.

During their trip to France two years ago, the Churchill's were treated royally by the Maire of Souppes and all its residents. The Churchills, however, did not overstay their welcome and left after a few hours.

Since Mssr. Dine's visit to Cohasset, no messages have been sent or received from the two sister towns.

Best social club

Coastal Community Counseling Center's Rainbow Club has been recognized by the National Council of Community Mental Health Centers. The social rehabilitation program, located in Weymouth, won second place for the best social club run by a small community mental health center.

The Rainbow Club is an innovative program designed to help mentally ill and retarded people acquire the skills they need to develop relationships and participate in community activities. Operating as a social club, the program provides social, rehabilitation and educational programs for its members in an informal, living room environment.

The club ascribes to a self-help philosophy; members are actively involved in running the club and its programs, and a member's council governs the club with guidance and support from paid staff members, volunteers and interns.

When the club began in 1979, in the Church of the Holy Nativity, it had 35 members. It has grown to a membership of 250 people, mostly residents of Weymouth, Braintree, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, who meet in the Odd Fellows Hall in Jackson Square from 3:30 to 10 p.m. seven days a week. The Rainbow Club's director is Anthony Nardella, who accepted the award at the annual meeting of the National Council of Community Mental Health Centers, in Washington, D.C.

Compulsive gambling

As many as 100,000 Massachusetts residents may be suffering from a disease for which little treatment is available, and few even know it exists — compulsive gambling.

But under legislation filed by Senator Paul Doane (R-Harwich), $500,000 in lottery proceeds would be used to set up a pilot program to treat the disease, which doctors say has all the characteristics of alcohol and drug addictions except that it is easier to treat because there is no complicating chemical addictions.

"Compulsive gambling is where alcoholism was 30 years ago — people thinking it is just a bad habit," said Rep. Murray.

"It is a genuine addiction," said Mary Jeanette. "There are withdrawl symptoms, a lact of control, it often involves other addictions, and it affects those around the gambler," she added.

"But it is imminently treatable. There is from a 50 to 80 percent recovery rate," said Mary Jeanette. Representative Murray also said that the availability of gambling increases the incidence of its abuse.

Currently, Rep. Murray said, there are no existing treatment facilities in Massachusetts, and few physicians in the state are familiar with the disease.

Mary Jeanette said that four other states now use lottery money to fund treatment programs, and State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, indicated an interest in beginning such a program in Massachusetts.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SHOULDER PAIN

The shoulder joint has great mobility, perhaps more than any other joint in the body. As a result, the shoulder is subject to considerable trauma. Forceful exercise, rheumatism, bursitis, sprains and occupational stress can all cause shoulder pain. Pain is nature's warning tht something has gone wrong. Pain signals are caused by sensory nerve stimulation. The network of nerves that coordinate movement of the shoulder and arms is called the brachial plexus. It supplies vital nerve energy that has been transmitted from the brain through the spinal column to the shoulder muscles. A vertebral misalignment can irritate the nerve and distort the nerve impulses. Without a normal supply of nerve energy, muscles cannot heal. Chiropractic strives to remove these obstructions to the nerve pathways.

Through chiropractic techniques points of interference along the spinal column are addressed. When such points of interference are eliminated the normal body flow of energy and instruction, from the brain to all parts, resumes. Thus the body is able to utilize its natural resources to address difficulty or malfunction in any part or organ. Through Mother Nature's wonderful healing instructions normal funciton can resume and an attainable goal of total well-being can be achieved. A PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE

Civil and criminal jurisdictions will occasionally overlap, particularly in drunk driving cases. In most states a "drunk" driver generally will be tried first on the criminal charge. The negligence case will be tried later in a civil court to determine the damages. Courts rarely allow the criminal conviction to be mentioned during the civil suit. In addition, the level of proof required in a civil court is different from that required in a criminal court. Since a civil trial requires a "preponderance of the evidence." The judge or jury decides if the facts asserted by the plaintiff are more probable than not. "Preponderance" simply means having better evidence than the other party.

Substantiation of the facts and proven wrongdoing based on legal considerations are important steps in the successful conclusion of any legal matter. Knowledgeable presentation of your case is important. In such matters it is recommended and many times required, that you utilize the services of an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

Dog vs. jogger: There is a solution

Picture this: The jogger was running along on a calm spring morning when the inevitable dog bounded across the yard and charged straight out into the street. Small jogger, big dog. Hysterical jogger, snarling dog. Owner arrives a few minutes later to proceeds to yell at the jogger, saying, "Hey, jogger, calm down, you're making him excited. Stop jumping around like that. Can't even let my dog out for a morning relief without you fool runners getting him all worked up. Find another road to run on, will ya?"

Sound familiar?

I know if you're a jogger you'll have no difficulty in relating to that scenario.

It seems that at this time of year every dog in town has an irresistible urge to chew on a Nike, Rebok, Adidas, Etonic, Roo, or a Puma, showing no respect whatsoever for the foot that's in it. Some dogs, believe it or not, will even go after Hingham's sacred Docksiders (for some individuals, it's very un-Hingham to do anything without your Docksiders on).

Personally, I think you joggers have one heck of a nerve running around town like fools, provoking every unleashed dog on your route. Why don't you go and run on Route 3 for a change of scenery! You won't find any dogs on the expressway at that time of day—they know better-cars can kill 'em.

Maybe, just maybe, if a few joggers started killing the worst dogs on their route we might begin to clean up the problem of dogs chasing joggers. Can't you see the headlines now? "Hit & run jogger wipes out 3 dogs on Main St. at 6:30 a.m. today"; "Hingham police have issued an all-points bulletin for a 180-pound jogger wearing a pink and green jogging suit that tromped on and killed three dogs that were lying in wait for him at the intersection of Main and Free Streets. Police have taken casts of jogging tread marks from each of the dogs and hope to have an arrest soon."

Seriously, folks, even though I'm making humor with the situation, it is a real problem.

Joggers do have the right to run on the sidewalks and roads of the town without having the fear of being molested by unrestrained dogs. The leash law states that every dog must be restrained on a suitable restraint device or attended by a person exercising control over such dog. How can a dog owner "exercise control" when they're too lazy to exert themselves enough to snap a chain on the dog?

Dog owners beware! If your dog causes personal injury to a jogger, or causes a jogger to flee into the street to avoid being bitten and in turn gets struck by a car or causes any inconvenience to a jogger who is on a town sidewalk or way, be prepared to pay the penalty. You are liable for court action, and fines, and damages. How's your insurance?

Joggers, take note! If you're being harassed by any dog, all you have to do is register a complaint with me. If you can identify the dog and the house where it comes from, I can issue the dog owner, based on your signed complaint, a court citation with possible $25, $30 and $50 fines.

All you have to do is call my office. I will make an appointment with you, come to your home, write a brief report, and have you sign it. I'll then proceed to the dog owner's residence and issue the citation. The only thing I won't do is going out jogging with you.

Now, if the dog owner feels the citation was without merit, he (she or they) have the right to appeal it—in court. They can request a hearing and take their chances before a judge.

For the jogger, let me make one thing perfectly clear—if you sign the complaint, be prepared to go to court and testify on your own behalf that the dog did in fact chase, harass or bite you, if the dog owner chooses to appeal the citation.

I guarantee you that with your assistance I can resolve any problem that is brought to my attention. I will make every effort to help your running be a little less worrisome. I would hate to see every jogger carrying a big stick to ward off unrestrained dogs, so make the effort to call me.

For the dog owner who has a problem dog that likes to chase joggers—take the time to teach him not to leave the yard. Chasing joggers, cars and bicycles may seem like a game to your dog—but it can be a very deadly game. His very life is at stake and he can easily cause a serious accident.

Teach your dog not to leave the yard, regardless of what temptations beckon in the shape of a jogger, auto or bike.

Put a strong cord on the dog and ask someone to either call him from outside the yard or walk or run past him. When your dog starts in pursuit, let him reach the yard limit, then pull back hard on the cord and say "No" sternly. Repeat this procedure again and again on all boundaries of the yard.

The confrontation: but it is a curable situation, according to Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy. (Bill Quigley photo)

When you're sure the dog understands his yard limits, remove the rope and repeat the same procedure. This time when he goes outside the limits, scold him and chase him back into the yard. Once he is back in the yard, pet him, saying "Good dog," to teach him that he will have your approval as long as he stays within the bounds.

The same method can be used to teach him not to chase cars. Again, use a long rope and a friend with a car. As the car goes by and your dog starts to chase it, yank him back and scold him. Remember, scolding or light punishment will not do your dog any harm—but a car may kill him.

A few hours' training will add years to your enjoyment of the dog, keep the joggers happy, and eliminate the possibility of a serious accident being caused by the unrestrained and untrained dog.

Ride-A-Bike set for May 19

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the 14th Annual Ride-A-Bike for Retarded Citizens on Sunday, May 19 from 1 to 4 p.m.

This is part of a state-wide effort by the Massachusetts Teachers Association, who support the efforts of the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens and its affliates. The MTA dollar contributions have revolutionized services for almost 200,000 mentally retarded children and adults.

Your generous contributions have aided passage of Chapter 766; instituting early intervention for newborns; providing respite care; licensing of five institutions under Title 19; "Turning 22" legislation, Chapter 688; and independence for mentally retarded citizens living in the community.

Over $2 million has been raised over the years through this campaign. These funds help the human, civil, and legal rights of the retarded citizens of the Commonwealth.

Registration forms are available at all three schools - junior senior high school (Mr. Plante); Deer Hill School (Mr. Deakin); and Joseph Osgood School (Irene Mello).

If you wish to participate in the ride, please have sponsors pledge the amount of money they wish to donate per mile. Anyone interested in participating in the Ride-A-Bike as a sponsor or donating to this worthy cause, may contact the coordinators for further information: Pat and Maria Plante, 383-9263.-

Ride A Bike route

1.Checkpoint - Atlantic Avenue at Margin Street. Go all the way down Atlantic Avenue by Sandy Beach to Nichols Road.

2. Checkpoint - Atlantic Avenue at Nichols Road (Sandy Beach) - young riders turn left and go down Nichols Road - at the corner of Nichols Road and Jerusalem Road.

or

Older riders - from 2. Checkpoint - continue down Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road.

3. Checkpoint - Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road. Continue down Jerusalem Road to Forest Avenue (Black Rock Beach).-

4. Checkpoint - Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue at Black Rock Beach - turn left up Forest Avenue to North Main Street.

5. Checkpoint - Forest Avenue at North Main Street - turn left at North Main Street and ride back to the Town Hall for the eight mile finish.

You may ride the route as many times as you desire between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m. Refreshments will be served at Town Hall.

Please call coordinator if you have any questions, Maria Plante at 383-9263.

Cape Cod polo season opens May 10

The polo season on Cape Cod will open this year with a three-day tournament expected to draw polo players from clubs in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York.

Some of the best players in New England from clubs such as the Cape Cod Polo Club in Hatchville, Ma., Foxlee Polo Club in Rehobeth, Ma., Newport Polo Club in Newport, R.I. and Shallowbrook Polo Club in Somers, Conn., are expected to participate.

The Cape Cod Polo Club will host the annual Northeast Arena Circuit Sherman Memorial Cup tournament, sanctioned by the United States Polo Association.

The tournament will be held at Boxberry Hill Farm, located just off Route 151 in Hatchville.

Opening games in the tournament will begin at 1 p.m., Wednesday, May 10. Semi-finals will begin at 1 p.m. Friday, May 10, and final games of the tournament will begin at 2 p.m., Sunday, May 12.

Each polo player is rated on ability using a scale of minus one (-1) to ten (10). Each team is rated by totaling the number of its players' ratings. In a zero to five goal tournament, team ratings may not exceed five goals.

Tickets for the matches are $6 for adults, $5 for senior citizens, and $4 for children under 12. One ticket will provide entry for all three days. Tickets are available from members of the Cape Cod Polo Club and will be sold at the gate.

Jim was among the first five roofers to be certified nationwide. He offers a brief explanation of the program. "Bird Inc. is attempting to insure a high standard of workmanship that will equal its quality line of products. The qualifications necessary for certification are:

1. Minimum of 3 years in business.
2. Must be licensed & insured.
3. Must have 24 references from satisfied customers.
4. Must complete a minimum of 25 jobs per year.
5. Must provide a clear written estimate and warranty of workmanship."

☐ Congratulations are certainly in order for Janet DiGirolamo . . . she was a winner of the Women's Sports Foundation Milky Way Bar High School All-Star Award. She was chosen as Cohasset High's outstanding top female athlete and acknowledged by the Women's Sports Foundation for her athletic accomplishments and good academic standing. High schools across the country participated in this awards program designed to bring recognition to exceptional female athletes. Athletic directors were asked to select a female student who demonstrated athletic excellence and good citizenship. Recipients of this award, sponsored by the makers of MILKY WAY Bar, will be awarded with a certificate of recognition signed by Billie Jean King and Donna de Varona, an All-Star Patch, and a copy of the WSF College Athletic Sponsorship Guide. All Entries qualify for an additional award of which only one winner will be selected from each of the four regic ns of the country. She will be selected by physical educators at San Francisco State University based on essays on each athlete submitted by their coach. The four regional winners and coaches will be invited to attend the WSF's Awards Program "A Celebration of Women's Sports" in San Francisco. The four All-Stars will receive their awards at this gala and will have the chance to meet world renowned women athletes such as Donna de Varona, Peggy Fleming, Evelyn Ashford, Connie Carpenter and Debbie Armstrong. Good going Janet, and good luck in your bid for the additional award!

☐ Speaking of athletes, how about Dominic Campedelli chosing to leave Boston College for the pros! We sure wish him the best and hope that he has a fine career with Toronto, though watching BC hockey will be different without watching that shot from the blue line!

☐ John P. Bishop has been appointed director of marketing development by the National Insurance Advisory Services, in Braintree. He has 11 years of senior management experience and was formerly with various companies including Synod Enterprises Inc. and TV Time Foods Inc., both of Maryland where he was president and chief operating officer.

☐ What a nifty idea Ken Coleman has, in his efforts to make personal dreams come true . . . for $168 he broadcasts your custom made superstar performance, even down to the fans yelling in the background! What a neat gift for someone, imagine Dad on tape hitting a home run at Fenway, with Jim Rice on first base. Wouldn't they love it!

☐ Happy Birthday Anne Curley!

☐ Start planning for the Historical Society's annual flea market that will be held on May 18 at the Lothrop House. They already have received many donations that will be for sale, and will gladly accept donations of good, usuable items for this event. If cleaning out for Spring, remember them and either drop items off or call.

☐ If you didn't call for help around the house last weekend, or need to this weekend, call the AFS at 383-0530. For $5 an hour they will perform any job and the money you pay will be used for scholarship funds for students going abroad. They even do windows!

☐ Congratulations to the new president . . . Fred Wood was installed last week as the new Chamber of Commerce president, and was "handed the gavel" by Dan Leahy, ex-president.

☐ Carmen wanted to be sure to wish Ron Goodwin and his bride-to-be much happiness and a long and happy future. We all do!

☐ If you ever need entertainment for your party, be sure to consider Jay Fiori. He certainly does an outstanding job as disc jockey for all of your favorites, no matter what era you want! He knows 'em all, and has a comment for each, he's great! Whether we dance, or just listen, we enjoy!

☐ Alna Ekberg is in the news, as being the top producer having listed and sold nearly $3 million in property in her first year for Hunneman. She is a member of the Medallion Club, which is an organization of million dollar brokers sponsored by Better Homes and Gardens.

☐ Happy Birthday to Craig.

☐ I leave you this week with a parting line that I'm sure many will recognize . . . "Hurray, Hurray, first of May . . . "

☐ Give a call with your news!

Social Service meeting

The Social Service League of Cohasset will hold its annual meeting, Wednesday, May 15, 1985 at noon, at St. Stephen's Walton Rodgers Hall, 16 Highland Avenue.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Joseph R. Godzik, Board of Health Agent of Cohasset. The topic will be "The Environment, It's Impact on Health in Cohasset."

The League invites all interested Cohasset residents to attend. R.S.V.P. 383-0821 or 383-0771.

Book sale at library

The annual used book sale at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be held Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Thousands of paperback and hardcover books will be displayed in the lower level of the library and in the back yard. Prices start at 25 cents.

The book sale is sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library, under the direction of Jane Goedeke, president. Dozens of Friends and library trustees will work on the two-day sale. Proceeds will go to the library's fund for purchase of new books.

The book sale is the main fund-raising event sponsored by the Friends of the Library, a 300-member organization. This event, along with membership dues, enable the Friends to provide the library with book funds; free passes to the New England Aquarium, the Museum of Science, the Children's Museum, and the Museum of Fine Arts; equipment and supplies which are not supplied through the town budget; and other supporting materials and services. All residents are invited to join. Membership forms are at the library.

Anyone who would like to help work on the book sale may call Mr. Hayes at the library, 383-1348.

Editorial

Two sides

In the month of April, 55 building permits were issued. For a town of 8000 inhabitants, that's a lot of construction.

Some permits were pulled for slight remodeling jobs - new ceilings, a new bathroom window. Some were for larger, more expensive work - including new homes and additions.

We call your attention to one particular permit issued this month to Distinctive Homes Trust. Two Cohasset realtors formed this trust with the specific aim of purchasing homes in need of repair, gutting the structures, and rebuilding the interior and exterior.

They have employed crews who are currently working on this home at 51 Jerusalem Road. This is a home that sold for $205,000, but the one-story structure couldn't even be seen from the road. It sits on concrete pilings, on the edge of a slope. It wasn't a particular asset, nor was it an eyesore to this beautiful neighborhood. It simply couldn't be seen, so it didn't bother anyone.

Now, two new owners have decided to build a second story onto the structure. Everything is going to be new, inside and out.

But neighbors, accustomed to viewing nothing but the peaceful marsh on the other side of Jerusalem Road, are angered. 'How can a totally new building be constructed without our knowledge or input?' they ask.

Building Inspector Edward Poskus, a man not squeamish when it comes to conflicts, believes everything has been done legally and according to regulations.

Poskus, whom we admire for his ability to untangle himself from a constant flow of bureaucratic red tape, loves the democratic process. The give and take between residents, hearing both sides of the issue is what this country is all about, according to the town official.

But no hearings, no abutters' opinions, no variances are necessary in this case, he says. The new owners are building everything according to code, whether the neighbors approve or not.

Obviously, with a second story added to the small-framed home, the view of the salt marsh will be obstructed. But the actual outline of the home on this non conforming lot will remain the same, and the height is within town limitations.

Poskus, who actually stopped the job when crews began without a permit, follows the book. This book, which by no coincidence resembles the Bible in length, contains the state's building and zoning codes. Poskus can almost recite many verses by memory.

It is doubtful that in addition to being confident about his decision to grant the building permit, he's also dead wrong. He's convinced us, unlikely as it seems, the neighbors of 51 Jerusalem Road have no recourse but to look onto the salt marsh from another angle.

Spring forward, fall back

By Claire McDonough

"I love spring," Flora informed us. "It's daylight savings time that I hate."

Fauna clasped an anguished hand to her forehead.

"Tell me about it. I can never remember whether to spring ahead or spring back."

"It's 'spring ahead and fall back,' " I told her. "I think."

"That's easy for you to say," she muttered darkly, "but even when I know whether it's 'spring ahead' or 'spring back,' I still can't figure out whether we're gaining or losing an hour."

"I don't think we're doing either," I said uncertainly. "I think we're just sort of saving an hour till we need it later on."

"That doesn't make any sense at all," Flora complained. "And anyway, where is it while we're saving it till we need it?"

Fauna shrugged. "Who cares? I just remember the time everyone else in the world turned their clocks ahead and I turned mine back."

She paused, and thought for a minute. "Or was it the other way around? Maybe everyone else turned theirs back and I turned mine ahead.

"Anyway, Bambi and Robin were babies at the time, and I woke them up an hour early so they'd be on schedule. Only I couldn't figure out what the schedule was.

"I remember that my father came over for the day and I fed everyone lunch at what I thought was noon but they thought was ten a.m. in the morning.

"Nobody was hungry enough to eat, but I insisted. Then later on when everyone really was hungry, I wouldn't give them anything. I was determined that we were going to do things right.

"The kids kept falling asleep, and I kept waking them up to make them play. I was so afraid that if I let them sleep at the wrong time, they'd never go to bed when they were supposed to.

"My father tried reasoning with me for a while, but by 3 p.m., even he couldn't take it. Or maybe it was 1 p.m. Or 4 p.m.

"Anyway, he finally stamped out the door yelling, 'For Pete's sake, Fauna, if I had wanted mindless authoritarianism laced with confusion, I would have stayed home with your mother.' "

"Sounds pretty grim," I admitted. "How did you finally get it straightened out?"

"I don't remember," Fauna moaned. "I only remember that it was the longest day I ever spent in my life, but when I went to bed at whatever time, I was so wound up that I couldn't sleep at all."

"Something like that happened to me once," Flora interjected, "only it was worse.

"I woke up during the night and heard a man on the radio saying everyone should put their clocks ahead. So I got up and I did. Only I didn't know Rowan already had turned them ahead. And so had Fern. Rowan wound up waiting for the 6:30 P and B bus at 4:30 in the morning."

"It's a touching tribute to your marriage," I told her, "that you're still together."

She nodded. "I think the only reason we are is because by the time he got home from work Rowan was too tired to be mad. And none of us was really sure what time it was, anyway."

Fauna sighed. "I just can't figure out why anyone invented daylight savings time in the first place. It must be some sadist who gets a kick out of watching people suffer."

Flora looked startled.

"Oh, no," she explained. "There's really a very good reason for it. By starting the day an hour early, we're able to give our plants an extra hour of sunlight every day during the growing season."

Fauna and I looked at her, then at each other. We nodded.

"Makes sense," we agreed.

Abutters angered by new construction

April 17, 1985

(This letter was written to Andrea Merrill, trustee of Distinctive Homes Trust, Joseph Godzik, Cohasset Health Agent, Edward Poskus, Building Inspector, and Merle Brown, Chairman of the Conservation Commission. Ed).

Gentlemen:

Please be advised that I represent Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neil, who reside at 66 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Massachusetts (ooposite the subject property), and my clients wish to formally advise all interested parties of their objection to the issuance of the subject Building Permit (which as of this date has not as yet been approved by the Cohasset Building Inspector) for the following reasons:

1. The proposed addition to the existing structure represents an increase of one bedroom and the various town boards that have already approved the Building Permit Application have been misled into believing that the proposed addition will not increase the number of bedrooms.

On April 16, 1985, Mr. Poskus and I inspected the premises and found an existing one story five room dwelling consisting of a kitchen, livingroom, a den or alcove, two bedrooms, and one and one-half baths.

The proposed plans call for a six room house on two floors, consisting of a kitchen, diningroom, livingroom, three bedrooms, and two and one-half baths.

2. The applicant has not presented a Septic System Plan prepared and stamped by a Registered Engineer showing the construction, location (in relation to the wetlands) and capacity of the existing septic system.

3. The property is within 100 feet of wetlands.

The "Wetlands Act" requires that whenever there is any alteration to property within 100 feet of wetlands there must be a formal hearing by the Conservation Commission (with all abutters within 500 feet notified by certified letter of the time and place of the hearing) and the Conservation Commission must either issue an Order of Conditions or a Determination of Non-Applicability of the Wetlands Act.

4. Any alteration to an existing structure within 100 feet of wetlands must be reviewed and approved by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE).

5. By my calculations, the subject lot is in the Cohasset Floodplain and Wetlands district and any alteration to an existing structure must be approved upon application and public hearing (with proper notification to abutters within 500 feet) by the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals.

Letters

6. This lot being only 12,300 square feet is a "non-conforming lot" and according to the Cohasset Zoning By Laws, any alterations to a non-conforming lot must be approved upon application, notice to all abutters, and public hearing by the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals.

In view of the above, it is my opinion that the subject Application for Building Permit by Distinctive Homes Trust to enlarge the structure at 51 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, shouid be denied as a matter of law.

My clients and several other abutters firmly believe that various state and town laws and regulations have not been complied with in this instance, including the fact that, as abutters, they have been denied their civil rights to be heard at public meetings by various town boards and, if, the Application for Building Permit is approved, the decision will no doubt be appealed to the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals.

John F. Roy
Attorney for Mr. and Mrs. Donald T. O'Neil

Communication course

What if you knew you could make any change in your life with ease and confidence? New Options: New Results (Make Change Easily), a six-week communications course will be offered by Richard Lanza, Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m., May 2 to June 6 in Cohasset.

This course provides communication skills that can be used in: dealing creatively with stress; balancing work and family; setting and accomplishing goals.

Its emphasis is on integrating verbal and non-verbal communication, establishing clarity and attaining results. The course is valuable for anyone - parents, students, teachers, those in the helping professions, sales and business. Class fee for the six weeks is $90 with a payment plan available.

A student's view as he tours the coast of Spain

(Ben Kennedy of 41 Stevens Lane, a Northeastern University student enrolled at the University of Seville, Spain, for the spring semester, sent home this account of his visit to Gibraltar. Ed.)

Jeff and I decided to begin our Semana Santa (Holy Week) school vacation by visiting Gibraltar, newly opened to tourists. We caught the 10:30 a.m. bus on Monday to Algeciras on the southern coast near the Big Rock. You can see the coast of Africa (Tangier) from Algeciras, but it was very hazy that day so we could barely make out the enormous rock looming out of the strait connecting the Mediterranean with the Atlantic. It was impressive, but we wasted no time hopping another bus for a 15 minute ride to La Linea further on down the coast. A few Moroccans in traditional long dress were riding with us and they certainly do look and act differently. The men stared continually at us and the women were all bundled up to just under the eyes although the temperature was in the 80s with bright sun. The rest of the passengers included a few Punk-dressed English teenagers with yellow and purple hair and several German long-haired hippies smoking Kif.

We got to talking with the English group and after we left the bus, walked with them the 10 minutes to the Customs Gate connecting Spain with England. Many tourists were passing through just for a day's hike, mostly Spaniards and a mixture of Europeans. There are two customs gates, one to exit Spain and one to enter Gibraltar. The Spanish officials took our passports, saw we were Americans and placed them aside on the desk. Meanwhile, the Spaniards had only to flash their passports quickly as they filed by and were waved on. Diana (the purple-haired, pink-dressed English student with us) asked the customs agent after several minutes why we couldn't have our passports back, but she didn't even get a glance. We students and several English tourists stood aside, clucking our tongues in frustration because there was nothing we could do. Finally, when the line of entering travelers slowed down, the agent stamped our passports and shoved the whole pile into my hands. Then they chuckled watching as we sorted the passports out among ourselves. The British Customs agents were friendly and polite and didn't even check our bags. "Carry on," was all we heard as they cheerfully waved us through.

We walked across a small runway, pausing to snap a few pictures as a small jet took off in front of the Rock. We continued on into town with a few friendly Spaniards who directed us straight up "Main Street" to the Tourist Office. All the signs were in English, the supermarket was named Lipton's, and most items in window displays carried a British label. A British "bobby" stood at every corner, and when we asked directions they always answered with "Carry on down this street" and ended with "Cheerio." We also had to change our funny-looking Spanish pesetas into funny-looking English pounds, and then laughed as we asked each other, "How much does that cost, 9 pounds, 10 ounces?" We bought postcards of the Rock apes, sampled a few local beers (good), lunched on fried chicken (equally good), then spent the next few hours looking for a place to stay the night.

No luck, much too expensive for our budgets, so we wandered back to the Tourist Office for help and were told that an "old salt" had just dropped by with leaflet pictures of his boat with basic accomodations that he was willing to rent out for a night or two. We ran down to the docks and hunted around for the ship, hoping that it would cost less than the 30 pounds we'd been quoted at the small hotels. After admiring the sleek yachts and luxury vessels moored at the marina, we asked the dock master where we could find the "Omega" owned by the Dutch sailor. Following his directions to the other side of the marina, we finally spotted our ship at the end of a long pier piled with rusty machinery, abandoned vessels tied alongside, and oil slicks on the water. The "Omega," leaning against the pier, ropes loosely draped over the posts on the dock, did look like a beat-up pirate ship. On the deck sat a very large man with a full red beard, flanked by two very thin women, and they all stared as we approached. "Oh no" Diana stopped short, "this doesn't look very promising" and Jeff added doubtfully that he'd been on a boat only once before and gotten seasick.

While we deliberated, the Captain lumbered over to introduce himself as Ron and invite us on board. His accent was thick, although he spoke English pretty well. He said he was married to his ship, although he lived with the two "sea-women" in his private quarters.

Below deck was really cozy with five or six young people already bunking in and making sandwiches in the galley. For 10 pounds all of us could stay the night and that included a pot of coffee in the morning.

Later the next morning, we took a Swiss-built cable car halfway up the Rock and visited the Cave monkeys who willingly accept bananas from tourists. Diana tried to pet one of the older ones, but he slapped her hand and sneered. They aren't dangerous but very snotty and behave like they rule the kingdom — which I suppose they do.

We also explored the St. Michael's caves that go deep into the rock; inside one is a large theater for shows of some sort. Hiking further up the Rock, we came upon the lookout station and snapped some good (I hope) photos of the Med and the Iberian coastline. Jeff and I decided to dare a climb to the highest point on the Rock, some 1300 feet up. We climbed over jagged rocks and scrubby bushes along a small ridge to the pinnacle. One look down and we learned the meaning of vertigo! Sheer rock faces on either side of us fell hundreds of dizzying feet down. Seagulls were flying overhead and little lizards scuttled over our feet. We loosened a rock and watched as it tumbled town to the sea below. It was hot and we were sweating by the time we climbed back down to the lookout station.

The next morning the sun was so hot, we fried waiting by the roadside for the bus. But it was on time, and wasn't full and we slept on our way "home" to Seville.

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

Since 1982, House Republicans have offered an alternative to the Governor's budget. This year is no exception.

The Fiscal Year 1986 GOP Better Budget represents the Republican philosophy of recommending sound fiscal management, improved administration and the elimination of waste. It also tries to at least hold the line or reduce the state's bureaucracy.

Better Budget this year is approximately $20 million less than the Governor's proposal, rechanneling $165 million into different areas.

Moderate Budget Freeze

When the National Governor's Association met in Washington earlier this year, they overwhelmingly adopted a resolution calling for a federal budget freeze. Republicans agreed with the Association and the Governor of this state. We therefore have called for the same freeze in our state budget.

Infrastructure Funding

Instead of creating another layer of bureaucracy—or MassBank as the Governor calls it—to deal with our infrastructure problems, the Better Budget redirects approximately $70 million from the highway fund towards the repair of highways and bridges. Last year, over $200 million of highway repair money went to non-highway uses such as the MDC, pensions, life guards, narcotics units and others.

Mortgage Interest Deduction

Massachusetts is unique in that it allows a renters deduction on the state income tax return. Republicans feel the same should hold true for homeowners who are currently paying mortgage rates of 11 percent or more. Therefore we have proposed a mortgage interest deduction for homeowners of up to $2,500.

Local Aid Shortfall

The Better Budget also returns the Fiscal Year 1984 Local Aid shortfall of $82.8 million to our cities and towns. It also provides for an automatic feed through of a guaranteed 40 percent of growth taxes to prevent this shortfall from occuring in future years. The community penalty for failure of a city or town to tax up to the Proposition 2 1/2 levels is also eliminated. If a community is doing well and feels it does not need to tax at this level, it is only fair that they not be penalized.

Other Areas

Other areas addressed in the Better Budget include a rainy day fund composed of some of the state's revenue surplus for emergencies. It also expands the METCO program, which voluntarily brings urban students into suburban schools that have more room and facilities. Provisions are also made to fund the Lemon Law Arbitration board, which should add some real teeth to the law. The take over of county jails is also approached in a different manner, requiring any city that receives more than $10 million to show savings of equal amounts. This should prevent cities like Boston from running any serious deficits by spending that money elsewhere.

It is important to make responsible and sensible use of the state's huge revenue surplus and provide reforms that will affect our citizens in the best and most humane manner possible. We think our Better Budget does this and we hope to see it create constructive debate on important issues this year.

Summer jobs for youth

The South Coastal Career Development Administration announces that it is now accepting applications for summer employment from eligible youth 14 - 21 years of age.

This program is designed to provide employment opportunities for disadvantaged youth in the South Shore area. While employed in summer jobs in the public and non-profit areas, participants take part in such special programs as vocational workshops, theatre group and alternative summer school.

Applications are available at local junior high and high schools as well as the South Coastal offices at 11 Hayward Street, North Quincy and Eton's Plaza, Rte. 53, Hanover. Applications should be submitted no later than May 10, to avoid being placed on the waiting list.

Cohasset sports for the week . . .

By Lisa Shumaker

Boys' Track

The boys started off the week a little tired and out of practice which according to coach Jon Anderson, led to his team's loss against Scituate Tuesday. Anderson was pleased with the effort his team put out however, and was impressed with javelin throwers Jeff Aaron and Danny Camardo.

Cohasset bounced back from this disappointing defeat and beat Sandwich Thursday. "Everybody had a real good day," said Anderson, who pointed out that many boys reached their personal bests in this meet. Floyd Hardwick amazed all, winning each of the four events he entered.

As of now, the Skippers have won both of their small schools division meets and Anderson is very optimistic as to his team's future.

Monday, the boys travel to Whitman/Hanson and face some tough competition. Thursday, Cohasset has a meet against East Bridgewater. Anderson feels his team is very solid in its sprints and will be very competitive this week.

Girls' Tennis

The girls had an outstanding week, winning all three of their matches. The Skippers started their streak of victories Tuesday when they defeated Abington 4-1. When asked how she felt her team played, coach Sue Dalrymple simply replied, "They played a great match." Dalrymple went on to praise Kristen O'Brien on her playing that day.

Winners on Tuesday were as follows: second singles player Kerri Kirkendall, third singles player Kristen O'Brien, first doubles team Linda O'Laughlin and Carolyn O'Brien and second doubles team Jessica Hamilton and Megan Kelly.

Wednesday, the girls surprised all and beat Scituate in an exciting match, 3-2. The entire match came down to the playing of first doubles team Linda O'Laughlin and Carolyn O'Brien who after losing the first set came back to win the match for themselves and for Cohasset. This victory moved the Skippers up in the standings and in contention for first place right behind Duxbury.

Kerri Kirkendall won her match and had a great day. Second doubles team Lauren Haynes and Megan Kelly also beat their opponents as well.

Thursday, the girls ended the week by defeating Norwell, 4-1. Dalrymple said she saw much improvement in her team, and she feels they are getting strong.

Kerri Kirkendall and Kristen O'Brien both won their matches along with doubles teams Lauren Haynes and Jessica Hamilton, and Megan Kelly and Carolyn O'Brien.

Dalrymple cited Ingrid Anderson for her playing efforts this week. Ingrid faced some stiff competition last week and played very admirably. Dalrymple also mentioned her non-playing players as being an important part of her team and doing a great job lifting the entire teams spirits.

Monday, the girls face Sandwich. Wednesday, Cohasset will take on Duxbury, which is the Skippers biggest match of the season. The girls then travel to Hanover on Thursday. Dalrymple has been pleased with the support her team has had thus far and hopes it will continue this week.

Cohasset sports for the week

Boys' Baseball

The boys started last week losing to Abington, 4 to 1. Coach Joe Bouchard thinks his team may have suffered a let down after vacation. Jeff Soltesz and Jay Contis both had a hit in this game, as well as Bobby Shultz, who also scored the Skippers only run.

Wednesday, Cohasset picked up and beat Avon, 6 to 2. "The team came alive," according to Bouchard, and improved offensively. The Skippers had a total of nine hits and were led by Jeff Soltesz who hit an impressive triple.

Pitcher Mike Gentile led Cohasset on defense and did a good job.

Thursday, Norwell slipped past the Skippers, 7 to 5. Bouchard felt his team did not generate much offense, but he was pleased with the pitching efforts of Sean Corkery.

Overall, Bouchard is happy with the team's season thus far and feels its 3 and 5 record could easily be 6 and 2. Bouchard is very optimistic for the rest of the season and feels a turn around is in sight.

Monday, the boys face Sandwich. Wednesday Cohasset travels to Duxbury, and Thursday the Skippers are back home playing Hanover. Bouchard believes Cohasset will be very competitive in each of these contests.

Girls' Track

The girls had a disappointing week, losing both of their meets. Tuesday, the Skippers were beaten by a tough Scituate team. Despite the end result, Coach Claire Brady was pleased with her team's efforts and felt they held their own and never gave up.

Sara Seavey set a milestone in Cohasset High School's history, breaking the javelin record against Scituate for which she picked up a first place. Thursday, Sara promptly came back to break the record she set Tuesday. As of now, unless Sara decides to break it again, the javelin throw record stands at 99.7 feet.

Brady also mentioned Jane DeLima, Janet Bagley, Nancy Riley, and Caitlin Staunton as doing well on Tuesday.

Thursday, Sandwich beat Cohasset. Brady said she did see some improvement in this meet and feels it is only a matter of time before the Skippers start coming around.

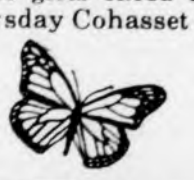
Jane DeLima led Cohasset picking up 2 first places followed by Janet Bagley, Sonya Butler, and Caitlin Staunton who each had one.

Nancy Riley, Colby Mantz, and Julie Bowdoin each turned in a good effort as well for Cohasset.

Monday, the girls travel to Whitman/Hanson, and Thursday the Skippers face East Bridgewater away.

Girls' Softball

Tuesday, the girls were beaten by a tough Abington team, 5 to 2. Cohasset was having an outstanding game up until the fifth inning, when a combination of walks and errors caused four runs and the loss for the Skippers. Debbie Hartley led the team offensively with two hits.



Wednesday, Cohasset lost to Scituate, 5 to 3. According to Coach Bill Fallon, "defensively we played good enough to win but we left too many people on base."

Tara Stanford and Maureen O'Leary each had two hits. Fallon also was pleased with Janet Digirolamo's performance defensively as well.

Thursday, Cohasset crushed Norwell, 13 to 4. The Skippers did well defensively and timed their hits perfectly, so few players were left on base.

Carla Lucas led the Skippers offensively with four hits followed by Maureen O'Leary who had three. USA each picked up two hits as well.

The girls faced Duxbury on Wednesday, and Thursday Cohasset will travel to Hanover.

DUTCH TREAT

Most Americans return from a trip to The Netherlands with the impression that the Dutch are among the most warm, friendly and tolerant people in Europe. That feeling alone is almost enough to justify a trip. Holland however offers much more. It has hundreds of unique museums including tiny ones in the provinces and very large museums in Amsterdam. It has picturesque rural inns and ancient farmhouse restaurants serving simple and delicious "Dutch treats." It offers an early spring with fields blossoming in an astounding array of brilliant colors. Try the lively night life and always at every turn enjoy the hospitality which makes you feel at home. From late March until mid May Holland enjoys a worldwide reputation as one of the loveliest spots in Europe.

Cohasset school news

The electric utilities of Mass. sponsored a statewide poster contest using the theme "Energy Visions for Tomorrow's World". The purpose was to encourage students to conserve energy and become aware of new and alternative technologies that will provide energy sorces for the future.

Cohasset's grades 2, 3 and 4 participated in the area contest sponsored by the Eastern Edison Co. in Brockton, which included 20 towns and 2 cities.

Michael Russell, 4th grade student at Deer Hill School, won 1st prize in the 4th to 6th grade category and Courtney Schultz, 3rd grade student at Joseph Osgood School, won honorable mention in the kindergarten to 3rd grade category.

They were honored at a reception held at the Brockton Art Museum on March 22. In addition, Ms. Ruth Stetson, Educational Services Area Coordinator for Eastern Edison Co., awarded certificates to the finalists at assemblies held at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools.

The finalists' posters were exhibited at both schools the following week, when a grade level poster contest was also held. The winners as judged by a panel of P.S.O. mmbers are as follows:

Grade 2
1st—Jeremiah Stevenson
2nd—Amy Silvia
3rd—Jonathon Hislop
Honorable mention—Andrew Fitzsimmons
Honorable mention—Nicole Ford

Grade 3
1st—Marisol Perry
2nd—Lindsey Tibbetts
3rd—Christa Ansbergs
Honorable mention—Anne Lindgren
Honorable mention—Tyler Studds

Grade 4
1st—Raymond Jones
2nd—Alix Knox
3rd—Kate Barrett
Honorable mention—Colby Lawrence
Honorable mention—Jessica Pyfrom
Honorable mention—John Kinchla

The contest was part of an art learning and activity unit involving concepts of composition, lettering, and poster art.

Many of the posters will be displayed over the coming week in Cohasset shops and storefronts.

What's going on in the rest area woods?

By Dave Warren

The scene is the same nearly every day, on both weekdays and weekends.

Truckers, businessmen and travelers whip past the Route 3 rest area in South Weymouth, all speeding along towards various destinations.

For another group of motorists, however, the rest area is a destination in and of itself. Pulling off the highway, they park their cars, lock their doors, and retreat into the woods through gaping holes they've ripped in the chain-link barrier that lines the northbound side of the highway.

They are gay men, and they've come to the rest area to meet, converse and have sex with other gay men.

State and local police know they're there, but say there is nothing they can do to eliminate the activity.

Gay rights advocates say nothing should be done—that gay activity in rest areas is not "public" in that it is conducted out of the public eye.

The courts have backed this philosophy. Weymouth Police arrested 25 men in July of 1980 for sexual activity at the rest area, only to have a judge throw out the charges.

"The judge felt that it was out of view, so he considered it to be private," according to Police Chief Thomas J. Higgins. "But I don't think that's the correct approach to take at all. To me, a private place is in your home, not out there on the Expressway. Even if you go a little way in, to me it's still a public area."

Yet despite the arrival of warmer weather and the corresponding rise in gay activity at the rest area, Higgins said he does not assign men to patrol the area.

"We don't go down there unless we have a specific call . . . as far as I'm concerned, the courts have set the policy, and if that's the standard they want, that's all we can do. If the courts don't back us up, we're not very effective."

State Police drive through the rest area on a daily basis, but they readily admit that their efforts are ignored by the men who view the rest area as a haven for meeting other homosexuals.

"It's a no-win situation," said Sgt. John Freeman of the State Police barracks in Norwell. "We could send guys in there today and make ten arrests, and tomorrow the problem would still be there."

Freeman supports this assertion by explaining the results of a raid last fall at the Route 3 rest area in Norwell, where gay activity also flourishes.

After receiving complaints from motorists, he said, a number of troopers went in undercover and made nine arrests on misdemeanor charges ranging from assault and battery to indecent exposure and lewd and lascivious behavior.

"They were all found guilty, but we drove through the next day and you'd never know we were there. It was as busy as it was the day before," Freeman said.

Privacy in Public Places

Who are the gay men who flock to these rest areas? Why do they choose public places to congregate with other gays? Do they have the right to do so?

"Fay men—and men who don't identify themselves as gay—go to rest areas and public parklands for a variety of reasons, some of which have to do with sex and some of which don't," according to Kevin Cathcart, executive director of Gay and Lesbian Advocates and Defenders (GLAD), a Boston-based gay rights organization.

"As long as people are unable to feel like it's safe for them to identify as gay or not lead doublelives, we're going to be dealing with large numbers of people who have a somewhat split kind of approach to their sexuality—and it's going to work itself out in some way.

"People don't simply repress themselves and that's the end of it. Sex drives are much stronger than that, and people will find a way to work out whatever they may not be able to work through, consciously or politically, in their minds . . . especially when we're dealing in the suburbs, where a large percentage of the people who go to rest areas are people who lead nominally straight lives."

Gay men choose rest areas to meet other gays, Cathcart said, because they are convenient and out of the public eye. Gays leading straight lives need the anonymity rest areas provide, he added.

"If you live in a nice, residential area in the suburbs with neighbors who pay attention or a wife and kids at home, you can't bring people back. Another concern that people have about going to other places is that it can be very time-consuming. If this is something that someone is sneaking into their life while they're on the way to the grocery store or on their way home from work, time is an issue."

Cathcart maintains that gays have every right to meet at rest areas, as they go far enough back into the woods so that the general public would never come in contact with them. Rulings by the state Supreme Court have echoed this opinion, he said.

Cathcart also questions the use of police funds to crack down on gay activity in rest areas, stating that raids are almost always initiated by the police and not by citizen's complaints.

"Even though many of the arrests are illegal because the places involved are not strictly defined as public places, most people who are arrested are not in a position to fight those arrests. Most people plea bargain to get out of it as quietly as possible.

What's going on in the woods?

" . . . So, in that sense, these are very easy arrests for police officers to make. They look very good on police records."

And although the public does not see the gay activity that goes on, Cathcart said it's easy for the police to get public support for rest area raids.

"All they have to do is say, 'We're trying to make the rest areas safe so that people who are driving to the beach can stop and their kids can go to the bathroom or have a picnic," he said.

But Weymouth Police Chief Higgins said not all the activity is out of the public's view.

"A lady from Hingham called me one afternon about six months ago. She was extremely upset. She said her 16-year old daughter was driving a child home, and she thought the girl was going to get sick.

"So, they pulled into the rest area, she got out of the car, and they actually observed two guys in a homosexual act. The girl, being 16, couldn't believe what she saw. They got back in the car and drove to the nearest phone and called her mother. She was hysterical."

Police cruisers were dispatched to the rest area but found nothing, Higgins said.

Since a judge threw out the 25 arrests made in 1980, Higgins said there have only been a couple of arrests at the rest area.

Higgins said gay activity increases during the warmer months—"Our activity goes right along with the temperature"—but said he will not have his men patrolling an area until the courts decide to support such action.

But that's not to say that he thinks the courts are right.

"I don't condone the practice," Higgins said. "I'm prejudiced, I guess you might say, but I just think they could find a better place to go. . . . What do other people do, heterosexuals? They're not down there frolicking in the woods. Why do these people have to do it?"

Cathcart said that there are plenty of heterosexuals having sex in the woods, but police just tell them to move on.

"There is a tremendous amount of sexual behavior—homosexual and heterosexual—that goes on in all kinds of parklands and rest areas throughout the Commonwealth," he said.

"I'm sure there will be arrests this summer, but it will be the smallest drop in the bucket. But I argue that gay men should not be treated any differently than straight people are."

But while Cathcart feels that police crackdowns against gay activity are illegal and often have devastating affects on those arrested, Higgins sees another side of the question of whose rights are being violated.

"People today are concerned only with their own rights. They're obsessed with civil rights, and they don't know when their rights start infringing on the rights of others. They don't seem to know where to draw the line."

Salt shed location

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield and Health Agent Joseph Godzik have agreed an area of land adjacent to the Cedar Street landfill is the most appropriate location for a state-funded salt shed.

The land, which would be located between the two driveways at the landfill, is easily accessible for Highway Dept. trucks from the street.

The land must first be cleared of huge trees and brush, according to Litchfield, who said his department does not have the equipment to do that. Selectmen then advised the surveyor to gather excavation costs and bring them before the board next week. The cost of the work may be included in an appropriation article for the special Town Meeting.

The state, which has guaranteed funding to construct and erect the shed, will not pay to excavate the land. Litchfield warned the last round of state funding will be in June. After that, he had no idea when the state would be appropriating additional grants.

Computer contract award

After discussing the amount with Acting Town Accountant Kathleen Conte, selectmen voted Monday to award a bid of $41,204 to Data National for the purchase of a disk drive for the town's computer system.

The additional equipment was loaned to the town for several months by the company, in an effort to alleviate some of the computer system's processing problems.

The contract award is contingent upon the appropriation of that amount by special Town Meeting in June. Although Data National had said the price would be firm until June 6, selectmen noted there would be a problem, because no funds would be available until after the special Town Meeting.

YOUTH CAMPING OPPORTUNITY IN AUSTRIA

A special, very reasonable, all-inclusive Austrian camping program for boys and girls between the ages of 11 and 19 will be departing on Monday, August 5, 1985, for two weeks to the lush green heart of Austria, in the town of Schladming, which is approximately 15 miles south of Salzburg.

The Alpine camp, sponsored by ADIDAS, U.S.A., and LUFTHANSA AIRLINES, with licensed instructors, offers glacier skiing, indoor and outdoor Olympic swimming pool, tennis, soccer, aerobics, handball, language courses, arts & crafts, concerts, museum visits and excursion trips to Innsbruck, Salzburg, Vienna, Munich, Venice, Italy and Yugoslavia. All of this as well as three meals a day and deluxe camp hotels are included in the camp tuition.

An experience Hingham teacher will be your tour operator. There is a limited availability, (first come, first serve) for this unusual trip so please call if interested in joining us. This offer expires on Wednesday, May 15, 1985.

St. Paul's School fundraising auction set for May 4

Would you like to own an Apple IIc computer, complete with a stand and monitor? How about a windsurfer? Or, perhaps you'd like to spend a day with the Red Sox and meet the players?

These items and others will be available to the highest bidders Saturday, May 4, at St. Paul's School fundraising auction. Viewing will begin at 6 p.m. in the school auditorium at 189 Fearing Road, Hingham.

The auction will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m. with Jack Knight, of Hingham, as the auctioneer.

The Saturday auction of goods and services will feature a windsurfer, donated by Steve Mehl of Mehl's Boathouse in Hingham Harbor. A professional photographer has donated a day of his time so that the high bidder can spend that day with the Red Sox and meet the players.

Numerous other items have been donated including Waterford crystal stemware, paintings, jewelry, several weekends at condominiums, a flowering crabapple tree, a Hitchcock chair and many other items. There are also services which have been donated including a simple, reciprocal will and interior design consultation.

The Apple IIc, stand and monitor, were donated to the school through the auspices of George Hamrah at Personal Computer Resources, 45 Pond St., Norwell. The store opened in 1983 and is designed to make customers feel comfortable in understanding, selecting and using personal computers. Hamrah developed the unique concept after he purchased an Apple computer for his family and became frustrated with Boston and local computer stores. The store deals almost exclusively with the Apple line of personal computers.

PCR started with four employes and has more than doubled that number. The company deals directly with schools and has developed a full program of 'computer literacy training for teachers' and allows teachers to review software to determine which programs best meet the needs of their students.

Beer, wine and soft drinks will be available throughout the evening, as will snacks and dessert. Coffee will also be served.

The auction has been organized by a committee consisting of Ed McGovern and Anne Leland, both of Hingham, and Cheryl Monahan of Norwell. Admission is $2 per person.

All funds raised by the auction will benefit St. Paul's School, a small coed parochial school in Hingham Square, across from Talbot's retail store.

Theater registration June 3

The Young People's Summer Theatre will hold its annual Registration Meeting on Monday, June 3 at 7 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

YPST will present the circus musical "Barnum" in August and is looking for youths between 13 and 22 years-old to join the group's ninth season of theatrical entertainment.

YPST debuted in 1977 with the musical "Once Upon A Mattress," and since then has grown and improved over the years to become well-known throughout the area. Other productions have included "Guys and Dolls," "Little Me," "Chicago," "How To Succeed," and last summer's highly acclaimed "On the Twentieth Century."

Don Capen, group administrator, indicated that this season is a transitional year since many of the "senior" members have gone onto other endeavors, and so this summer's auditions will be important for new and rising talent.

"Barnum," based on the life of P.T. Barnum, the master showman, will need all types of talent: actors, singers, dancers, musicians, baton twirlers, jugglers, stilt walkers, unicyclists, gymnasts and many other spectacles.

"We'll take everything. In fact, we need people to dress up as animals if we can't get the real thing. For that matter, even if you aren't talented at all we won't turn you down."

The registration meeting will be for all those interested in auditioning for "Barnum." A non-refundable fee of $15 will be payable at the meeting.

Those who cannot stay for the meeting should register that evening, but new members are urged to stay for the entire discussion as details about the program will be outlined.

Capen said, "We have a list of 400 names who have been YPST members or have shown interest at one time or another. Many previous members will receive the annual letter in mid-May, but any new people interested in receiving a letter should write to P.O. Box 41 in Scituate or call 871-5831."

Auditions for "Barnum" will be held Sunday, June 9 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Congregational Church. Those interested should attend only one of those time slots.

Hingham residents William and Jeanne Brady (far left) and Cohasset resident Ozzie Ingram (far right) joined Peter Mehegan, Mary Richardson, and Sumner Redstone at the kickoff dinner for the American Cancer Society's fundraising Crusade in Framingham. Mehegan and Richardson co-host WCVB-TV's Chronical show, while Redstone is state Cancer Crusade chairman. Mr. and Mrs. Brady and Ingram are members of the Board of Directors of the Society's South Shore Unit.

Science Center activities include Canadian trip

A second annual natural history excursion is planned to the Grand Manan Island, New Brunswick, Canada, and is sponsored by the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, Cape Cod Museum of Natural History, Center for Coastal Studies, Manomet Bird Observatory and the Thorton W. Burgess Society.

The nine-day trip, June 22-30, takes place at the height of the breeding season. The island is a "paradise" for birders, botanists and all lovers of the natural world.

Set in the Bay of Fundy, Grand Manan offers a unique opportunity to study not only birds, but sandy beaches, tide pools, salt marshes and craggy cliffs rising 400 feet above the sea.

Participants leave by van from Green Briar Nature Center, Sandwich, and spend the first night on the Maine Coast. The next day the group will ferry to the island and stay at the beautiful Marathon Inn which was built over 100 years ago. It had been refurbished but retains the charm of another age. Seafood specialities are served in the dining room. All meats and produce are delivered daily to the Inn.

Cost of the excursion: $695 per person, double occupancy, $810 per person single. The fee includes a $50 donation to the sponsor of your choice. For information and registration forms, call the South Shore Natural Science Center at 659-2559.

WILDFLOWERS

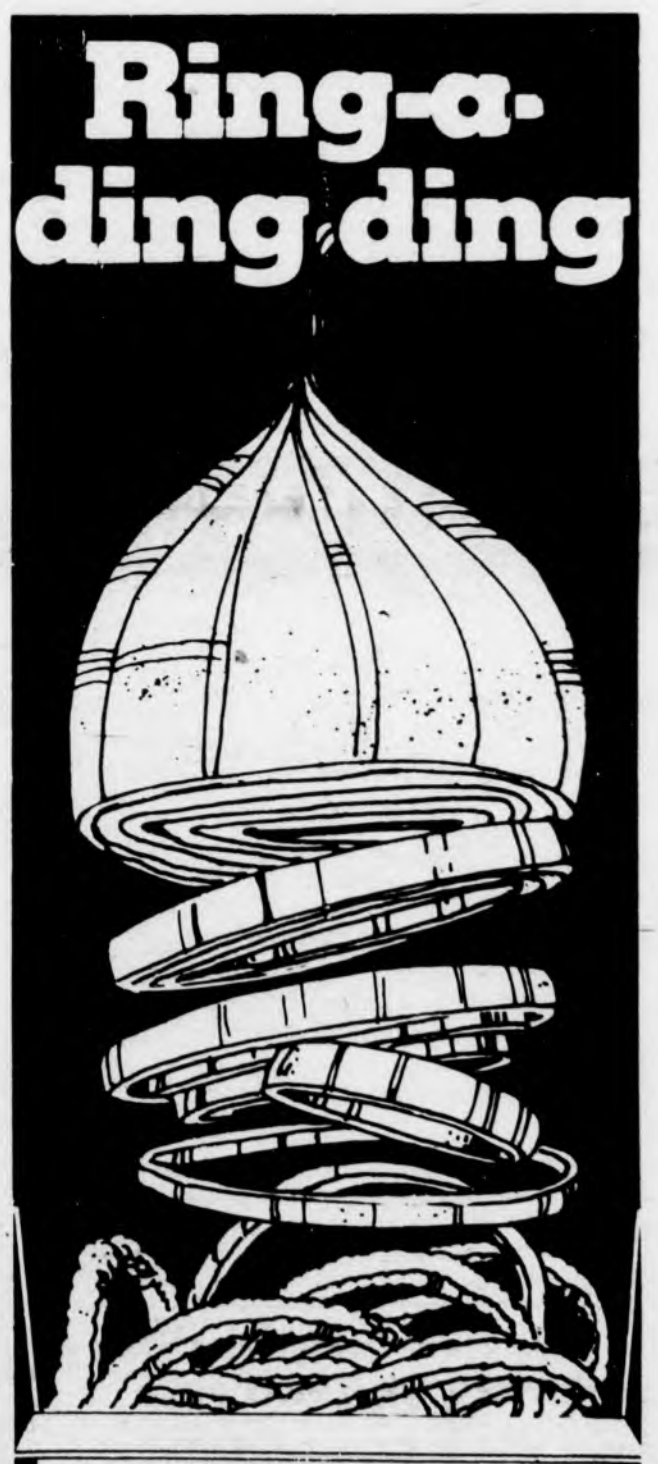
Spring is wildflower time. On Friday, May 10, from 9:30 to noon, the South Shore Natural Science Center is sponsoring a trip to the Garden in the Woods with Dr. Larry Mish, botanist. Enjoy the New England Wildflower Society's extensive botanical garden in Framingham. Dr. Mish will discuss plant names and classifications. If desired, lunch can be purchased at a nearby inn. Carpool from the Science Center. Fee: $13.50 members, $15 non-members. Pre-registration required. For information, call 5492559.

WHALES AND SUCH

Th'ar She Blows on the Whale and Sea Bird Watch with friends and members of the South Shore Natural Science Center, on Saturday, May 11, from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The boat trip to Stellwagen Bank on the Capt John & Son boat out of Plymouth Harbor is always an exciting time.

Wayne Petersen, Ornithologist, will point out and talk about the pelagic birds and the whales most often seen, such as the humpback, fin and minke. Fee: $16 members, $19 non-members. Send check, self-addressed envelope with stamp and phone number to: SSNSC, Box 429, Norwell 02061. For further information, call 659-2559. Pre-paid registration a must.

DAISIES FOR MOM



Daisies for Mother at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, on HER day Sunday, May 12 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. A program for all ages —bring Mother to the Science Center where she will be presented with a daisy corsage, then enjoy a wildflower slide presentation, followed by a family wildflower walk. Fee: $1 members, $2 non-members, Mothers, FREE. Pre-registration requested. For further information, call 659-2559.

HAND-IN-HAND

Creativity and Learning go hand-in-hand at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, on Tuesday, May 14 from 10 a.m .to 3 p.m. Make an artistic picture of delicate seaweed and at the same time learn some seaweed history and how to ID it. In the morning, collect materials from local tide pools; in the afternoon make your pictures. You will be excited and amazed at the results of this day's outing. Fee: $16 members, $20 non-members. Fee includes materials. Bring lunch. Pre-paid registration required. For further information call 659-2559. A sample is on display at the Science Center.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Rte. 123, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m., Sundays and most holidays.

Dramatic Club's 'Scapino' had some amusing moments

By Corinne A. Kutish

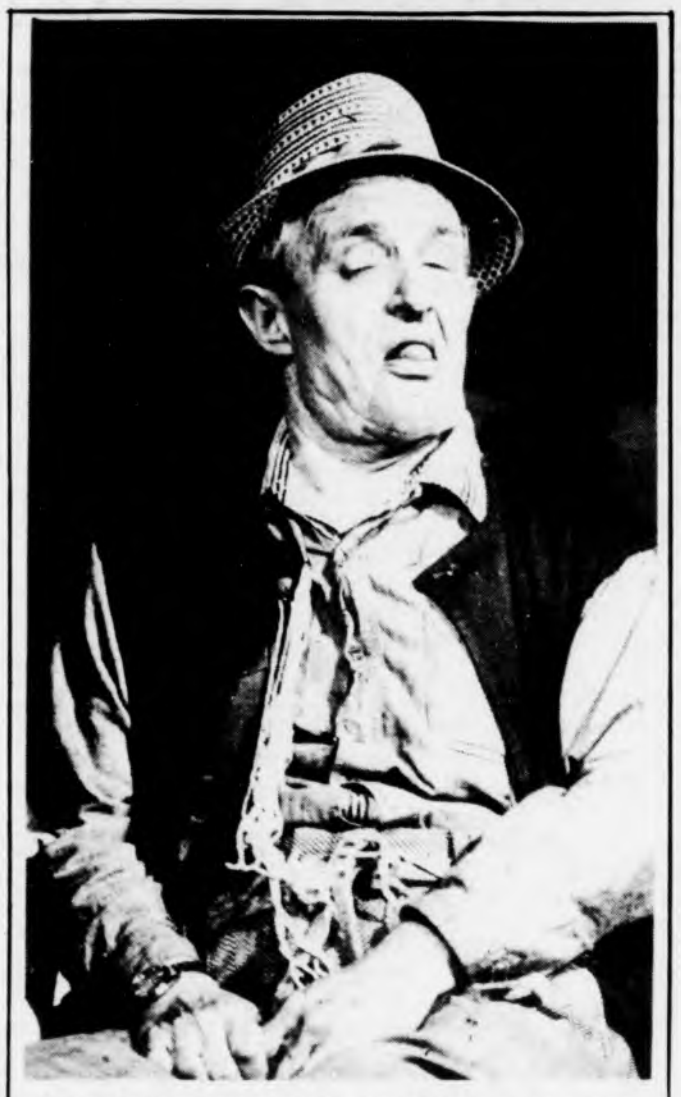
Last weekend's production of "Scapino," performed by the Cohasset Dramatic Club at the Cohasset Town Hall, did not reach its full potential as a madcap comedy, but it did have many amusing moments.

"Scapino," written by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale, is meant to be a fast-paced, pie-in-the-face look at life outside a small Italian restaurant in Naples.

The plot revolves around two noble families, the Gerontes and the Argantes. The elder Argante, played by William J. Devany, dreams of marrying his son Ottavio, played by Edward Lappen, to the daughter of the elder Geronte, played by John W. Rice.

The problem is Ottavio has already lost his heart to and married a young village girl, Giacinta, played by Amy Nordahl.

With a similar problem is Leandro, the son of Geronte, played by Kenneth M. Agress, a senior at Scituate High School. Leandro has fallen in love with a young gypsy girl, Zerbinetta, played by Beth Colburn, much to the elder Geronte's consternation.



Got that? Okay, enter Scapino! Played by Robert Julian, a Cohasset stage favorite, Scapino is a lovable rogue. He is also quick-witted, resourceful, and not above a little trickery.

Informed that Ottavio needs 200,000 lira for the nurse of his true love and that Leandro needs 500,000 lira to ransom his lover from the gypsies, Scapino devises twin plans to bilk the money out of the boys' own fathers.

Suffice it to say, the ending is a happy one. Giacinta turns out to be the daughter of Geronte, the girl Ottavio's father wanted him to marry all along. And Zerbinetta turns out to be the long-lost daughter of Argante, stolen by the gypsies as a baby, making her worthy of Leandro's hand in marriage.

So much for the raw plot. The humour is in the telling of the story.

On the downside, Friday night's performance never reached the quick pace it should have. Some of the mock Italian accents made comprehension difficult at times. And my heart ached for the performers in the first act when one of the characters lost his lines and had to go backstage to retreive them, while the on-stage characters tried to carry on valiantly.

"Carlo," played by Carter Hill, made some amusing faces during a 'Scapino' performance.

But despite these shortcomings, the Cohasset production was not without charm and clever characterizations.

As Sylvestro, friend of Ottavio, Donald P. Massa spent much of his on-stage time comicly pantomiming the speeches of the other characters. In his big scene, he pretended to be a tough Italian hood, shirt open to the navel and a chain in his hand. He was funny and convincing.

As Zerbinetta, Beth Colburn was a funky gypsy, dressed in blue pedalpushers, black fishnet over a red tank top, and high-topped tennis shoes. To that, she added a whiny Brooklyn accent.

As Giacinta, Amy Nordahl, a student at Weymouth South High School, was properly wide-eyed and innocent. Her charm was in stating the obvious. When she discovered the truth about herself and Zerbinetta, she said in a wonder-struck voice. "What an incredible accident!"

In the leading role as Scapino, Robert Julian gave a primo performance in a clever second act scene between himself and the growly Geronte. Convincing Geronte that a contract has been placed on his life, Scapino stuffs the elder man in a sack. Blind as he is in the sack, this leaves Scapino free to "attack the sack" as a variety of characters.

First, Julian is a fearless peg-legged pirate with a black kerchief around his head. Then he is an oriental karate expert, the kerchief doubling as a black belt. Finally, he is a British soldier, leading a platoon of soldiers.

As each character, he intoned the right accent and gestures, simulating mock conversations with himself. The audience loved it.

Also appearing in "Scapino" was W. Carter Hill, Winnie Kuhn, David Barrett, Catja de Haas, Laura Doherty, Patrick Healy, Matthew Kuhn, Brian McDermot, Susannah Carr and Caroline Struzik.

As various gypsies were Joanne Cannon, Judy Gutry, Kathy Haase, Rita Heidemann, Ellen Lavallee, Mary McElroy and Kristy Munro.

The director was Ellen Kelly; production manager was Arthur Paquette; stage manager was Tamsyn Elliott.

Cohasset Recreation schedule

MUSEUM TOUR

The Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Recreation Department will hold a special pre-summer season guided tour of the society's two museums located at Cohasset Center at 11 a.m. Friday, May 24.

Cohasset and area residents and visitors are invited. Please pre-register for the tour by calling the Recreation Department's Town Hall office, at 383-6791.

This marks the fourth year of Recreation Department sponsored museum tours held at the Historical Society's facilities. The Capt. Wilson Historical House is an 1810 home holding a representative collection of antique furnishings, furniture, kitchenware, children's toys and artworks donated from a number of Cohasset's oldest houses. The Maritime Museum, a late-1700s ship chandelery, contains numerous artifacts, documents, prints and paintings relating to the town's seafaring past during America's great "Age of Sail."

Included are relics from some of the numerous shipwrecks which occurred locally, equipment and gear from the town's 19th century mackerel fishing fleets, and the story of the famous Minot's lighthouse located off Cohasset shores. The Maritime Museum houses a general collection of historical artifacts from the town's earliest days and an exhibit of stone tools of the Quonahasset Indians. Each of Society's two museums are unique and each portrays the historical heritage of a small New England seacoast town. Please register early for this special pre-season tour.

The fee for this event is a $1 donation at the door. Mr. David H. Wadsworth, curator, will conduct the tour.

WALKING CLINIC

Thursday evening, May 16, at 7:30 p.m., Town Hall Auditorium there will be a meeting of those individuals that have registered for the Cohasset Recreation Department "Walking Clinic."

Any others who are interested in learning more about walking for health, and participating in a walking group on a regular basis, should call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for registration and details.

Home inspection course

Paul Kristenson of Cohasset has successfully completed an intensive three-week training course conducted by The Home Inspector of North America, Inc., the nation's largest home and building inspection company.

Kristenson was one of 29 applicants selected from a field of more than 600 to participate in the program. He now joins the Randolph-based firm as a certified home inspector. The training program included 50 hours of classroom study and on the job training.

Kristenson attended Colby College and has been a mason contractor for the past 20 years. He has been a Cohasset resident for six years.

Cohasset senior center progress

Senior Center Project Developer Karin Bartow said there are currently two sites under consideration for a Cohasset senior center. The plans currently call for at least a temporary site to be developed by the fall.

Bartow, has worked extensively for the past six months with an advisory group consisting of members of the Social Service League and Council on Aging members, along with some residents. Conclusions reached from a recent survey demonstrated "why Cohasset should test the waters" and formulate plans for developing a senior activity center, she said.

The ultimate, Bartow added, would be to house all activities under one roof. Additional programs could be provided by current town organizations, including the community center, the art center and the recreation department.

Bartow noted that, according to the survey results, about 25 percent of Cohasset senior citizens would utilize a center, with an equal number stating they would use services such as the Shuttle Bus, Meals on Wheels, and the Tuesday lunch program, in the future.

Cohasset's senior citizen population is increasing, she told selectmen. Almost 20 percent of the population is elderly, with a total of about 1400 senior citizens in 1985.

The advisory group, Bartow said, is hoping that a "small site" could possibly be donated for the project. Currently there are two possibilities, one of which is the Bates Building. Selectmen are hoping that building will become surplus if an addition to Town Hall is constructed and additional office space is constructed within the Highland Street building.

Currently, the Rotary Club, which holds its weekly meetings at the Bates Building, have expressed interest in obtaining the Elm Street site, they told Bartow. The Independence Building, which has already been declared surplus, is too small for the needs of a senior center.

Selectmen noted that there is currently no intention to sell the building, and the structure would be put on auction if declared surplus. "The Rotary Club is way ahead of itself," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Bartow said that hopefully, a center could begin "at a small, or no cost" by the fall.

In an attempt to garner further attention to the senior center project, the Social Service League and the Council on Aging will be sponsoring a Senior Center Day Saturday, June 5. The event will "create a one-day atmosphere of a senior center" and will include many diverse activities such as glaucoma testing, book club reviews, and lunch and entertainment. Most of the activities will take place at the Congregational Church, with perhaps one lecture at the Town Hall auditorium. Selectmen agreed the hall could be used during the one-day event.

Whoever heard of a cozy landmark?

New Art Center Development Manager

Director of the South Shore Art Center, Margaret Dillon, announces the appointment of Joni Jensen as development manager for the center.

As the center embarks a renewed campaign to relocate to more spacious quarters, Jensen was hired to coordinate the efforts of fundraising and development. At its present location at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, the center serves a wide audience of adults, children, teenagers and senior citizens as well as artists from all over the South Shore, by providing them with workshops, classes, trips, seminars, gallery exhibits or as just a place to come and meet fellow artists or students.

As development manager for the center, Jensen will be in charge of the fund-raising and development for the expansion of the center's business-membership and coordinating grant-research efforts.

She brings to the center a diverse background combining art, music, business, acting and some foreign language translating. Currently, she may be seen singing the role of Bess in the Unicorn Singers production of "The Best of Porgy and Bess."

Jensen also serves as the assistant director of the Artists Foundation in Boston. She is responsible for coordinating such programs as "Taking Care of Business," and "Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts."

Educated at Lesley College in Cambridge, Jensen holds several degrees including an MSM in Arts Administration. She has also attended the Paier School of Art in Connecticut, and the New England Conservatory. Her undergraduate degree is from Syracuse University.

She also does freelance graphic arts and freelance soft sculptured props and costumes for theatre and dance. As a professional artist, her work has been shown in galleries in New England, Florida, and Boston. She belongs to the Boston Visual Artists Union, the Cape Cod Art Association, Artists Equity and the Copley Society.

Her vast experience as a business person and an artist will help contribute to the on-going success of the South Shore Art Center and effective art association on the South Shore.

SS Art Center offers Montreal art trip

The South Shore Art Center offers a unique opportunity to travel to Montreal to view works by Pablo Picasso from the private collection of his widow, Jacqueline Picasso.

In cooperation with Cerel Travel in Natick, the center is offering three different opportunities to take travelers to Montreal for this exhibit and for the Ramses II exhibit of 76 pieces from the Egyptian Museum in Cairo.

The travel dates are June 28 - June 30 via motorcoach and August 31 through September 2 via either motorcoach or airplane.

The center, located at 103 Ripley Road, offers these trips as part of its ongoing travel opportunities with the cost of the trips including a tax deductible contribution to the center. The motorcoach trips cost $219 per person, based on double occupancy, and the airline tour costs $299 per person based on double occupancy. Reservations for the first trip should be made as soon as possible to Cerel Travel in Natick, 237-6190.

The Picasso exhibit has not been shown in North America and will be exclusively at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. It only includes work from the private collection of Mme. Picasso.

The Ramses II exhibit include gold jewelry and cult objects from the reign of Pharoah who built the two Rock temples in Abu Simbel.

In addition, travel fares and admission into the exhibits, the trip costs include overnight at the Meridien Hotel, half-day sightseeing of old and new Montreal and dinner at a French/Quebec restaurant in Old Town.

Both bus tours will have convenient pick up at the center and other locations on the South Shore. Tour price adjustments are available for triple occupancy or a single. For complete information, contact Cerel Travel.

Neighbors protest Jerusalem Road construction certain privacy and is clearly not a living room, dining room, kitchen or bathroom. If a room has three walls, and is not a private room, we could not consider it a bedroom."

He continues, "this particular house had one room with a sliding, folding door on one wall. It clearly afforded privacy, but Mr. Roy said it doesn't constitute a bedroom. But it is."

The room was part of the original structure of the building, not something recently added to the home, according to Dr. Godzik. And the septic system, which was functional for the previous owner, is acceptable for the addition. "It was functioning for a three bedroom house before. Since, with the second story, it will not become a four-bedroom home, the current septic system is considered acceptable," the Health Agent states.

Another interesting direction Atty. Roy is pursuing is a title search of the home. Because the structure, built sometime in the 1950's or 60's, contained only one story, there might be a restriction placed in the property's deed. Roy expects to hear this week whether the property title limits the structure on that land to a height of one-story.

Another concern of the abutters, Roy says, is that the new height of the home will exceed the town bylaw limitations. Since it is standing on concrete pier pilings, not a solid foundation, height restrictions from the tip of the chimney to the foundation "are subject to interpretation," he says.

Inspector Poskus says the proposed height of the new addition meets the town's newly-adopted, more stringent height codes. He's satisfied that the new owners are attempting in earnest to meet all codes and bylaws.

"First, they had a registered structural engineer inspect the foundation and he certified that it was adequate to hold a second floor. Then they had a land surveyor engineer shoot the grades, and the top of the addition will be within the new height restrictions," he says.

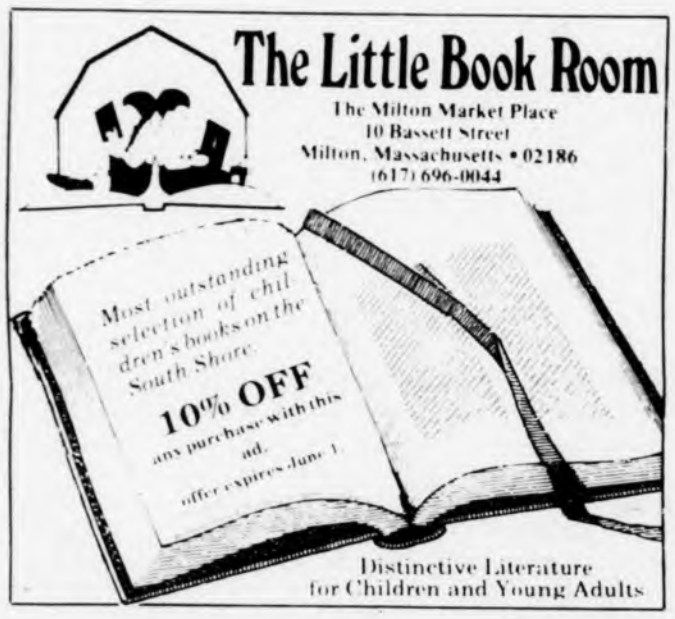
Poskus continues, "there's no question, the owners didn't go in there to do a little remodeling. They hired an architect and engineers. They are doing this right."

The bottom line, the inspector adds, is that because all local and state codes have been met "these owners are entitled to a building permit. I'm satisfied that everything is going according to regulation. If someone is entitled to a building permit, I'll issue it. I've cooperated on all sides of this issue because I feel everyone has a right to be heard."

An advocate of the public hearing process, Poskus said it is advantageous for everyone if all opinions are heard. But this construction, he adds, did not warrant a special hearing, nor any input from abutters.

That's where he parts company from Atty. Roy and his clients.

"The O'Neils and several of their neighbors feel a grave injustice has been done here," Roy says, "to the concerns of abutters. It appears this permit has been issued illegally.



"This new structure will cut off all view of the water from my clients' home. And what protection do they have here?" the 20-year Cohasset resident questions.

The attorney has appealed the issuance of the permit to the Zoning Board of Appeals. "What we're also very concerned about," he continues, "is that while we await a hearing in about 30 days, there are crews working furiously to get as much done as possible."

It is Roy's contention that the more work completed, the more convincing the owner's argument that if the work is ordered stopped, it will result in a significant financial hardship.

In search of that 'summer good body'

By Charlotte Carney

It's about that time of the year when we yearn to open the windows, feel the warm air, stroll the sandy beaches, and bask in the summer sun.

But then: to beach or not to beach. That is the question! Whether it be nobler in the minds of men to hide under the blanket than to expose ourselves to sand and sea, with a little more of us than we'd like there to be?

I have spent, as countless others have, most of my life striving to be "Beverly Good Body." You know the type. The beautiful, tall, thin model the magazines would have us believe we should all look like. Anyway, I was your classic, "I'll try anything" enthusiast to obtain this goal. And I did; I tried just about everything.

I even started exercising before it was fashionable. I started with 'Gloria' for those of us who can remember that far back; moved onto Jack LaLaine, and later to Jane Fonda. I worked right into women's weight training, which by the way is great if you can keep it up. And I've read all those "how to" books, and the "you can be fit and trim" literary marvels that were on the news stands between here and the West Coast.

I've danced along with the Jackie Sorenson aerobic crowd; worked out at the ever so trendy exercise clubs; ridden my bike alongside the Buffy and Brad types on Main Street; and when I see a fellow jogger, I have been known to do a block or two. I always give him or her the thumbs up sign, because of their valiant efforts to achieve that all over "look good, feel good," I'm-in-shape appearance.

My, my, my, what we go through In Search of Mr./Ms. Goodbody.

Referring to Mr. Goodbody, always brings to mind the fellow who has one of those wonderful 'spare tires.' He is usually eating or drinking something loaded with calories, as he eyes the beautiful body on the beach and turns to his wife or girlfriend and complains,"whycan'tyou look like that?" Come on guys. This is 1985, the double standard days are over. Let's take care of that mid section before we start nagging the little woman! It is a scientific fact that women have more fat cells in their bodies than men.

To get right to the 'bulk' of this problem. When you're thinking beach, boating and sun bathing, you're more than likely going to be wearing shorts or a bathing suit. Let's face it. We are talking legs here, and to be more specific, thighs.

Yes, I went and said it. You know what I mean. Those nasty, hard to shape up areas that we try to hide with large, loose shorts or long cover-ups. I've even resorted to tying a shirt around my hips while strolling along the beach to keep my children from singing the Jello commercial "watch it wiggle, see it jiggle."

Despair no more! After all these years, I, who have more books on nutrition and exercise than your average health food store, have found the most efficient, effective amd fun way to take care of it all.

Are you ready for this - jazz-ercise.

All this time spent in search of something that has so painlessly, quietly, and to my great surprise, quickly, taken care of those "wiggles and jiggles," that had plagued me for years. I was amazed at how the ol' body took on a new shape, not to mention that I was still able to keep up my aerobic fitness while thoroughly enjoying myself. It's an experience, to be finally winning the battle of the bulge.

The whole idea behind fitness is lifestyle. We are ultimately responsible for our own good health. The secret is establishing a program of diet and exercise that you can realistically maintain and enjoy.

Hope to see you on the beach!

A Rare Offering!

Sports-The thread that ties two nations

By Jane Lane

He devours sports. He lives, eats , watches and plays as many variations of athletics as any typical American teen.

Argentina A.F.S. student Mauricio Golfiero is easily more comfortable discussing hometown volleyball teams than the political climate of his country.

He stands about six feet, three inches. "And eats as if he's at least that big," according to Nancy Sandell, his American "Mom" during his year's visit. Along with a healthy appetite, Mauricio has become fluent in the English language, a talent acquired, according to to Nancy, through his many hours of watching television sports.

Mauricio complains good-naturedly that he doesn't really watch too much t.v., but it was through his intense concentration over dictionaries that his knowledge of English intensified. Nancy interjected, "he works very hard learning the language. Television is our big conflict."

American television receives high praise from this critic. Mauricio watches as many sports as possible, at least when he not playing them.

This 19 year-old senior, who will complete high school when he returns to San Juan, Argentina this summer, is homesick not so much for his family, nor for the sunny and warm climate of the mountainous city. It is his year-round involvement with various sports teams that remains his constant thought.

Given an opportunity, this darkly handsome teenager will talk to anyone, at anytime, about sports. But it's not idle chatter, as Nancy explained. Mauricio is such a well-respected volleyball player in San Juan, there is a very good chance he will be part of the Argentinian team at the next Olympic games.

"Could be," he says modestly, but convincingly.

His team, the Sanitarias Obras, is considered the best in the province, and two older friends were members of the 1984 games. He expects to be named to the Argentinian national team when he returns to play.

As for American sports, Mauricio likes baseball, football, and hockey. But his large stature makes him a natural for the fierce competition of volleyball, he said, and that is the interest he will continue to pursue.

Although sports is usually on his mind, Mauricio does seek other activities. In fact, his schedule back home was usually so filled, there was little time for his three brothers and sisters. "I was so busy in Argentina," he explained, "I was away from the house all day, and would get home about 11 p.m. With all my activities, and learning English at the university, I was never home."

"I think," Nancy noted, "that Mauricio finds the pace here a lot slower. It's been a huge adjustment for him, that his days aren't filled."

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 12 roll calls from the debate on the education bill during the week of April 22-26.

FINAL PASSAGE (H 5900)

House 115-29, approved and sent to the Senate the bill making major changes in the state's public education system.

Key provisions include a state-funded local option $18,000 minimum teacher salary; $72 million in state grants to be spent by local councils for innovations in each school building; $111 million over three years in professional development grants for teachers; statewide testing of students; regular teacher evaluations; and competency testing for new teachers.

Supporters said the package was a fiscally responsible one that would make major improvements in education. Opponents said the unfunded package is too costly and will not do enough for education.

Approving the package were Reps. Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, Frank Hynes and Charles Mann. Reps. William Flynn and Mary Murray voted "Nay" and Rep. Robert Ambler did not vote.

SALARY HIKE (H 5900)

House 90-57, approved an amendment eliminating a $72 million professional development program for teachers and replacing it with a provision giving each public school teacher an additional salary of $600 in 1986, $1200 in 1987, and $1800 in 1988 and subsequent years.

Amendment supporters, noting the $72 million development program grants go to school committees for use in collective bargaining, said the new hikes would go directly to each teacher and go a long way toward improving education.

Opponents said the state cannot afford the $205 million in hikes which total $133 million more than the $72 million program it replaces. They claimed the bill already offers teachers additional money and incentives.

(Reps. Flynn, Mann and Murray voted for the bill. Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes voted "Nay". Rep. Ambler did not vote.

OVERTURN (H 5900)

House 91-65, approved an amendment eliminating the just passed $3600 over three years direct salary increases for teachers and replacing it with a provision providing an amount equal to $1800 per teacher over three years, in professional development grants to each school district.

The money, $300 in 1986, $600 in 1987, and $900 in 1988 and subsequent years, would be made available to communities for use in collective bargaining with teachers.

Amendment supporters said this compromise provides teachers with an additional $29 million above the $72 million originally provided for in the bill.

Opponents said $205 million in direct salary increases is better for teachers and accused the leadership of twisting arms to change votes on this matter.

(Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes voted for the bill. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Flynn, Mann and Murray.)

CLASS SIZE (H 5900)

House 122-32, rejected an amendment establishing minimum class sizes including 20 for pre-first grade, 23 for grades 1 through 3, and 25 for grades 4 through 6. Supporters said reducing class sizes is an important ingredient in improving education.

Opponents, noting this is a mandate that would cost millions, said the teacher-pupil ratio has dropped recently and argued the matter is best left up to the local communities.

(Voting "Yea" were Reps. Flynn and Hynes. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Ceresoli, Mann and Murray.)

ARTS (H 5900)

House 100-48, approved an amendment requiring the Board of Education to maintain a job position to develop and implement a curriculum plan for the arts in education and allowing school committees to adopt the plan.

Amendment supporters said this is not a mandated program but one that will simply encourage committees to further develop their arts programs.

Opponents said the amendment would create a new position and claimed the program should be developed at the local level.

(Voting "Yea" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli. "Nay" were Reps. Flynn, Mann and Murray.)

TEACHER TESTS (H 5900)

House 119-35, defeated an amendment requiring all teachers to take a competency test by September 1988 and allowing school committees to use the results as part of the overall evaluation process.

The amendment gives teachers who fail the exam four years to pass another one and then allows the Board of Education to revoke that teacher's certificate unless the local school committee says the overall evaluation does not warrant revocation.

Amendment supporters said an exam would simply be part of the overall evaluation and pointed to the safeguards to protect teachers who don't test well.

Opponents said a test is too restrictive and noted stricter and more frequent evaluations would help weed out incompetent teachers.

(Voting "Yea" was Rep. Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes and Mann.)

$29 PER PUPIL (H 5900)

House 109-41, rejected an amendment eliminating the proposed Equal Educational Opportunity Grant Program and instead giving each community an additional $29 per pupil in additional local aid.

Amendment supporters said the unfair EEO program gives 80 percent of the grants to nine communities and gives nothing to 111 communities.

Opponents, noting the $29 per pupil would not be earmarked for education, said the EEO program is designed to help poorer communities and is a real step toward equalizing education.

(Voting "Yea" were Reps. Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump and Cerasoli.)

NEW BILL (H 5900)

House 107-32, rejected an amendment to scrap the current proposed education bill and replace it with a Republican-sponsored version.

Amendment supporters said the new version costs $150 million less but will have a far more comprehensive and dramatic effect on education.

Opponents said this was a last ditch effort to ruin weeks of hard work and scuttle final passage of an important bill.

(Voting for the bill were Reps. Mann and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes. Rep. Ambler did not vote.)

MORE TENURE (H 5900)

House 140-1, approved an amendment allowing a school committee to grant immediate tenure to an entering teacher from another school system if that teacher has had tenure for at least three consecutive years in the other system.

Amendment supporters said this will give more flexibility and give teachers incentives to move from one community to another. Opponents, noting current law allows committees to give tenure after one year to these teachers, said the amendment could create problems because committees have different standards.

(Voting for the bill were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray. Rep. Ambler did not vote.)

RULES (S 2170)

Senate 31-6, suspended rules to allow consideration of the House-Senate conference committee report of the proposed joint rules for the legislature. Supporters said it is important to consider the package and noted the report was issued almost three weeks ago. Opponents said rules should not be routinely suspended and argued there was no emergency to pass these rules immediately.

(Voting "Yea" were Sens. Anna Buckley, William Golden and Paul Harold. Voting "Nay" was Sen. Ned Kirby.)

SMALL CLAIMS (S 1751)

Senate 27-8, refused to table and later approved and sent to the House a bill increasing from $1200 to $1500 the amount of money a person can sue for in small claims court.

Supporters of the bill said the $300 increase will allow more people to go to small claims court and argue their own case without having to pay a lawyer.

Opponents said the hike will help collection agencies which will be able to bring more cases to small claims court and noted the poor defendants are no match for the agencies' high powered lawyers. (A "Yea" vote is for tabling the bill. A "Nay" vote is against tabling it.)

(Voting "Yea" was Sen. Kirby. Voting "Nay" were Sens. Buckley, Golden and Harold.)

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

In "Merrie Olde England" everyone went slightly wild on the first of May, dancing around the Maypole, lighting bonfires on the village green and taking off through the fields "a-Maying." They had real bacchanalia in Quincy in 1628 around the Maypole. Dressed in gaudy costumes, colorful beads and garlands of flowers, they drank and danced to music played on crude instruments. Since the Communists took to parading their might each May 1, the whole meaning of the date has been lost, but we can still greet the arrival of the merry month of May with a rather special meal that ends with any dessert as long as it has strawberries in or on it. The recipe below first appeared in the column quite some time ago and is so good it bears repeating. That was when Carole Larson served it at her Marshfield home and we all begged for the recipe which goes like this:

STRAWBERRY DESSERT

1 c. flour
1/4 c. brown sugar
1/2 c. each chopped nuts and melted butter
Stir the above and spread in 9x13" pan, keeping 1/3 for topping. Bake 20 min. in 350 oven. Combine:
2 egg whites and
1 c. sugar, beating till stiff. Add:
2 c. sliced strawberries
2T lemon juice, folded into
1 c. whipped cream

When bottom layer is cooled, spread strawberry mixture on top and sprinkle with remaining crumbs. Freeze at least six hours. Serves 12.

When Governor John Endicott hacked down the Maypole in Quincy with his sword, the merrymakers scurried off into the woods. The Puritans saw to it that the custom was no longer observed. Many years later, May baskets grew to be a charming custom, with children making them of crepe paper, filling them with candy. The baskets were then hung on a friend's door, with a few hurried knocks and giggles, then a quick get-away to escape a kiss from the recipient. Harmless, innocent fun, but a thing of the past, so why not welcome the merry month of May with the first of many salads to come, this one called

MIRACLE POTATO SALAD

1 pkg. (32 oz.) Ore-Ida Southern Style Hash Browns
1T salt
1 c. mayonnaise
1/2 c. each celery slices, chopped green pepper and Ore-Ida frozen chopped onions
1/4 c. chopped pimiento
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
Lettuce, parsley, radish roses

Add potatoes and salt to 1 qt. boiling water; return to boil, cover and cook 2 min., or until tender. Drain well. Combine remaining ingredients. Add potatoes. Mix and chill. Serve in a lettuce-lined bowl. Garnish with parsley and radish roses. Serves 4 to 6.

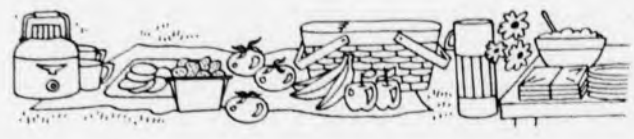
While we're at it, we might as well celebrate in style with friends who would surely enjoy a glass of May wine with this pate from Joanne Cure who writes: "This is very good - makes a nice firm spread or pate. Makes 1 1/2 c. Serve with crax."



MUSHROOM AND ALMOND PATE

2/3 c. blanched almonds
2T margarine, divided
8 oz. mushrooms, cut in small pieces
2 green onions, cut in pieces
1 clove garlic, cut in pieces
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/8 tsp. tarragon
1/4 c. cottage cheese

In medium skillet saute almonds in 1T margarine until lightly toasted. Remove and set aside. In same skillet over high heat in remaining 1T margarine, cook remaining ingredients except for cottage cheese. With slotted spoon remove to blender or food processor. If necessary, cook down pan liquid to 1T; add to mushroom mixture with almonds and cottage cheese. Whirl until smooth. Cover and chill at least 3 hours to blend flavors.

Never one to let an inch of space go unused, I again remind our readers that we all look forward to reading your favorite recipe next. Do send it along for all to share!

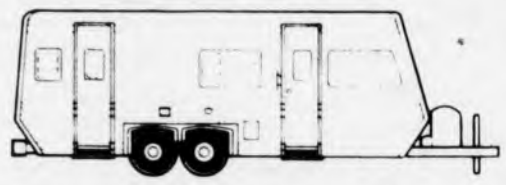
Hot spots, hot lures, hot times for 'The Big Bass'

Largemouth bass are bedding on most shallow areas of ponds this month with the west side of the lakes being the "hot spots." Rubber worms fished slow and deep and spinner baits bounced along the bottom will take the big bass — 61 lbs and over — and will be the "hot lures." The afternoons between 1 and 3 p.m. will be the "hot times" as the warm sun will make fish active in these 3' to 6' deep bays where spawn beds will be made by big female bass. Cast your lure over and thru the beds from different direction. The good ponds for April and May will be the following ponds and lakes: Stetson Pond, Monponsett Pond, Pembroke Reservoir, Hobomock Pond, Furnace and Oldham Ponds, Indian Head in Hanson, and Muddy Pond in Kingston.



Cloudy days will be quieter in the nesting area so work the deeper water just outside the spawn beds, big bass will be holding in these areas when not working the beds.

Use your imagination when selecting colors of lures this time of year. Bass will strike at lures with brilliant colors when on spawn beds. At no other time of year will bright lures such as flourescents, red, yellow, orange colors be this effective as bass are in the protective aggressive period of the cycle. Big bass will strike without hesitation at a color they do not like. A small boat or canoe is a must for this type of fishing as the remote side of the lake is the most popular part for the spawn area and casting from the deep into the shallow water is the best way to take these large fish.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Wanted : flower purchase power

She wouldn't let me buy them.

I had the money in my purse and everything. Better, I had an excuse to go to the nursery. Someone was sick. That constituted a trip to the flower store. And I had promised myself I could have a couple of brilliantly blooming plants for my new nook of an office.

Beyond that I had developed an urgent need for flowers. There are places in town that sport luminous red tulips, countered by Holland's yellow ones, with delicate purple bushes and robust jonquils. Forsythia is flowering for all its worth and I just longed to be around some of the goods. It's that time. I was simply surging with spring.

The plants would have been all mine, too, if I hadn't told the truth. I spotted this Florabunda (a whale of a lot of blossoms on it) fuschia, dripping with buds that longed to burst beside me. I plucked it from its hanging spot in greenhouse where it dribbled its color on the young geraniums.

Mine, I thought, this baby's mine, gonna hang in my office, overlook the parking lot, bloom merrily at everyone who gets near the Mariner.

That, said the owner who is in fact mother to all those plants, "needs to go outside."

Oh. Couldn't it make it near the outside, I asked, like only separated from it by a window pane? No, it needs to go outside and when it does, it must be brought in every chilly evening. I've got all I can do to remember the dog's outdoor obligations.

I left the subject of the fuschia as a diplomatic move, having established myself as an unfit foster home for the fushia.

Over in another niche was a litter of absolutely charming plants. Hanging ones, they had a healthy green vine with dabbles of adorable yellow blooms centered in brown.

Good, I said, I'll take a couple of those then. "Those need to go outside," I was told. Hey, I can play on the balls of my feet. My house came with an outside. You didn't need to pay extra for that option. Surely, I rallied, I had hooks out there or if I didn't I'll bet the hardware stores sells hooks to anybody. The hammer's somewhere.

But then there'd be that list I'd have to make about what needed to come inside. Beyond that I honest-to-gosh want plants in the house with me, in the office splashing color around the room.

She had small impatiens (flowers). They meant well but they lacked growth and experience. There was a massive hydrangea that would have taken up most of the office. And everything else was growing as fast as it could. She saw me eyeing the fushia again and the yellow-dotted plant.

"I could sell those to you but I won't," she said, "They need to go outside."

I acquiesced to something I didn't have, the right to those plants.

I got a gloxinia with fat blooms on it for the hospital patient. And I got nothin'.

Leaving, I considered the possiblity of a disguise. Dressed up in a toney Talbot's print with a large staw hat and a cutting basket under my arm, I would look like a person with a large patio. Or the president of a garden club. Or in khaki work clothes, perhaps a man who had the job of landscaping a pool area.

It wouldn't work. That flower keeper is vigilant. She can spot a killer-plant kidnapper within three feet of a begonia.

So here I am in my little office, big bay window, not a flower to its name, cause it's not outside.

I have but to bide my time. Within a month or so they won't be so fussy about who's getting their plants. They'll be letting almost anybody buy them. With my luck I'll come away with a unique massive rose bush, climbing its way across the window. But it'll be blooming.

The baseball game for all ages

Commentary

By Darrell Berger

The building on the lot next to mine used to be an elementary school. South Shore demographics being what they are, it was recently transformed into senior housing. But the softball fields across the street were left alone.

On the field nearest the old school Rick Young and I began to throw each other batting practice. Though both of us have fairly recently moved into the second half of our allotted three score and 10 and neither of us were ever a threat to Eddie Jurak, let alone Jim Rice, we have managed to develop a form of two-man baseball we vastly prefer to golf, tennis, yachting or gardening.

After hitting a few grounders and popups, I lined one toward right. Then I saw the old gentleman, wearing a visor and carrying a golf club. The ball flew past him about three feet over his head.

Just as I began to resent his unknowing trespass on our outfield, he walked back to the apartments. Then I felt sorry that we had chased him away. Surely we could have worked out a way to share the field.

Shortly he returned, wearing a Red Sox cap and a fielder's glove. He stood in right and expertly, if slowly, gathered in my hits and returned them to Rick.

We found that his name was Jim Glynn and he had just moved into the new apartments. He hadn't played in years, but he had the hat lying around and the glove he bought at a yard sale last year, just in case.

After Rick took his swings we offered Jim a turn at bat. I moved in 10 feet and made a gentle underhand toss. A choke-hitting lefty, he swung and hit a hard grounder just out of my reach. I threw the next pitch overhand.

He hit everything. What the heck, I thought, and threw him a little curve. He hit that, too. I only briefly considered a brushback and instead appreciated his enthusiasm for the awakening of a long-dormant skill. After a while he exchanged the bat for his glove and headed toward the outfield again.

"Great hitting, Jim," Rick said. "But you better take it easy. You don't want to be sore tomorrow."

"I am taking it easy," Jim replied. "You guys come here often?"

"Every chance we get."

The next day we returned. Soon Jim reappeared, too.

"How do you feel?" we asked.

"Great."

"We're going to play a game calling balls and strikes and stuff," I said. "But you're welcome to hit and field again if you want."

"Great."

The first two innings were scoreless with Jim taking his raps in between. In the third I turned to pick up my glove and saw a boy of 10 or 11.

"Would that last hit have been over the Wall in Fenway?" he asked.

"No. That was only about 250 feet. The Wall's about 320 feet. See the edge of the other diamond over there? We measured it once and that's about how far the Wall is."

"Oh."

The questions continued while Rick tried to hit, and then to me again. "Look, son, I'm trying to concentrate. Could you give it a rest for a minute?" He looked genuinely hurt. "Hey, you want to use our extra glove and play some?" Immediately we had a second fielder, Keith Winfield, whose parents were visiting his grandparents at the apartments where Jim lived.

When it was Keith's turn at bat he took mine and swung from the heels, missing repeatedly. I yelled the inevitable "Choke up!" but it didn't help.

I asked him to wait two minutes while I ran back to my house for the Little League bat I'd been saving for just such an occasion.

He took a few practice swings and handed it back. "Too small," he said.

"Just take 10 swings with it. Then use whichever you want."

He swung and missed three times. On the fourth he dribbled one back to Rick. The fifth he lined up the middle. The sixth was a double over third.

"Wanna keep using that bat?"

"Yeah."

Rick and I lost track of our two-man game and became absorved in our expanded roster. Everybody won. Finally we were ready to quit, though Jim and Keith looked like they could play a doubleheader.

"You guys come here often?" Keith asked.

"Every chance we get."

By John H. Cutler

☐ I wasn't on her social level, but I could see what she was doing when I looked down.

☐ Hilaire Belloc could write an essay on almost any subject. He titled one series On Something, another On Everything, another On Anything, and still another On Nothing. Then he wrote one series titled On.

☐ Motivation translates yearning into learning.

☐ If you don't have time to do it right, when will you have time to do it over?

☐ I never answer anonymous letters.

☐ What's the difference between a verbal statement and an oral statement? Give up? A verbal statement may be written or spoken; an oral statement is spoken only.

☐ I don't like smarmy people.

☐ If you start reminiscing about your future you better see a psychiatrist.

☐ Will the real stand-up comic please sit down.

☐ You'd have a hard time trying to lean on a podium while giving a speech. A podium is the platform you stand on; what you deliver the speech from is the lectern.

☐ I didn't say she was a typochondriac. I merely said she was confident of her typing ability.

☐ According to Harper's Index, 29% of women executives say they prefer a male boss, while 4% say they prefer a female boss.

☐ I read this quatrian somewhere:

Beneath this stone lies Murphy.
They buried him today.
He lived the life of Riley
While Riley was away.

Sports-The thread that ties two nations

Mauricio was his duties as a Boy Scout. In Argentina, he is a Rover, the equivalent of an Eagle Scout. As he said, "I'm at the end of my career. The name Rover is supposed to be symbolic of your departure. You are supposed to go into society as a good citizen."

Mauricio, who has only been with the Sandell's since March, will depart from the United States in July. That has not given him much time to initiate friendships, nor to become involved in many Cohasset activities, such as the Boy Scouts. Nonetheless, he is pleased with the time he has shared with his American family.

Along with an 'instant best friend" with the Sandell's eldest son, Mason, Mauricio has thoroughly enjoyed being with a similar-sized family. Although Nancy was worried about where to lodge such a large person, Mauricio answered, "I'm a good Scout. I told her I could sleep on the floor."

The family instead opted to bunk Mason and Mauricio in the same room, a selection Nancy said had excellent results. "It's truly amazing. I thought we wouldn't have room for another person in this house. But everything has worked out really well," she added.

Mauricio explains the city of San Juan is similar in size to Boston, and as cosmopolitan. His parents, both Italian, currently operate separate clothing boutiques in the city. His mother's is located in the 'salon' or livingroom-entrance to the family's townhouse.

A maid is employed to help with the tedious schedule of cleaning the large home and preparing two large meals per day. The afternoon tradition in Argentina is for the entire family to come home about 1 p.m. for a big lunch. The dishes are taken away, the table cleaned, and preparations are made for the evening supper.

Mauricio's favorite meals include all pasta, junk food, and steak. Argentinian beef, he said without hestitation, is superior to that in America. "It's the best in the world," according to Nancy.

The Sandell's, who resided in Italy for six years before moving to Cohasset, are somewhat familiar with the customs and habits of their new Argentinian friend. "And it's especially nice, because when I get angry, I can yell at him in Italian," Nancy commented.

The future electrical engineer will begin college studies after he graduates from high school in December. But his longterm plans include a return to the United States. Like most impressionable teens, Mauricio is most anxious to view the sights of California. "The girls are pretty, right?" Nancy goaded. Mauricio answered, "and they play a lot of volleyball there."

The teens here are more mature than in his homeland. They also have more freedom. "They go out more here," he said. "And kids here are more experienced than in Argentina."

One large difference in the two cultures is our obsession with drinking. Back home, Mauricio explained, there is no legal drinking age. Children grow up, knowing the accessibility of alcohol, and there is less enticement. Drunk driving is an infrequent occurrence in Argentina, he added. "If people are going to drive, they do not drink."

Women, he stated, are becoming emancipated in this South American country. A woman was recently elected governor of one province, he explained, which was a huge step toward their liberation.

The government, he conceded, is working slowly toward stability. For many years, the so-called democratic leadership "did a good job of stopping terrorism, but they killed a lot of innocent people, too," Mauricio explained.

The current political climate in Argentina is immensely more stable than before. Citizens are allowed as much freedom as in this country, he said, with residents unafraid to criticize and comment about their government leaders.

Although he was a youngster during the turbulent years of military coups and violent overthrows, Mauricio said he has "no memories of murders or bombings. I knew what I read in the newspaper, although then they did not always print the truth. Even now, I know there is a big problem with many missing people . . ."

Returning to more pleasant conversation, the young athlete said he will miss the shores of Cohasset , the friends and his American family when he returns home this summer.

Nancy added, "he's been a perfect fit for our family. We knew he'd be terrific."

Nancy Sandell, vice president of the Cohasset Chapter of the American Field Service student exchange program, urges local families to participate in the program.

One host family is needed for the coming school year, which begins the end of July and concludes the following June.

As Nancy explained, there are many more A.F.S. applications from foreign students than there are American host families.

An older couple, a childless couple, a couple with young children, or a single-parent family. Anyone who would lovingly accept a foreign student into their home and into their family for one year, would be a great host family.

If anyone is interested, or would like to talk about the experience, call Nancy Sandell at 383-0486.

Student loan information

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has pamphlets for college bound students in her district of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull. They explain the student loan eligibility in providing assistance to those who need it.

One folder explains the HELP low interest loan for higher education, college and graduate studies. Repayments on the money borrowed starts six months after one finishes his/her schooling. The PLUS loans folder describes how you apply for a higher interest program at your local bank or credit union and the eligibiltiy qualifications.

Cohasset water ready to sell, who will buy ?

By Jane Lane

Cohasset wants to sell surplus water to area towns. But the question is, at what price?

There are lot of variables to be decided before any plans are finalized. Will there be drought conditions as predicted? How do we work out the logistics of selling the commodity? Do Hingham and Scituate really want our water? And do we actually have a surplus to sell?

Water Commissioner Peter Pratt explained the reason behind the plan to initiate a regional cooperative effort. Revenue. Any money generated from the sale of Cohasset water this summer to our neighbors will help to subsidize the costs of the water treatment plant, and to keep the Cohasset water rate down for Cohasset residents.

At this stage, Pratt emphasized, the regional plan is only in its initial informational stages. Letters of intent are being composed to the neighboring communities, to test their interest in such a cooperative venture. If an affirmative answer is forwarded, the Cohasset Water Department will begin formulating methods in which our plant will pump excess water to the two towns.

"The lines are there, with the connecting valves in place. Essentially we have to put together our costs of overtime manpower to continually pump the plant, along with the increased costs of electricity, chemicals, wear and tear on equipment, and the portion of capital costs of the plant," he said. Once those estimations are finalized, more concrete costs of supplying the water will be formulated.

The entire plan generated out of the need for the Water Department to evolve into a self-sufficient arm of municipal government. Currently, that department owes the town about $300,000, according to Pratt, "and wholesaling our product is the most viable route to collect the debt we owe the town," Pratt added

One Scituate Water Department employee said that town will likely not need Cohasset's product. He said the town has never been in such a desperate situation, and doesn't foresee a drought severe enough to warrant the purchase of Cohasset water.

Scituate DPW Supt. Anthony Antoniello said no one from Cohasset had contacted him about such a plan. Although a couple of years ago, there were some discussions about a regionalized plan, Antoniello said "they never got back to us about what they would charge per month. I told them to make an offer, but they didn't. Maybe we can't afford it."

Antoniello said the Cohasset Water Commissioners must first contact Scituate selectmen about such a plan, before anything is seriously discussed.

Several logistics regarding the plan, including the fact the Scituate storage tanks are too low to handle the flow from Cohasset, must first be worked out.

Currently, however, Antoniello said Scituate's supply is good. Depending on the summer weather conditions and the maximum daily use in that period, Scituate may experience problems with its water treatment facility. "If we have to run the plant too much and too long to produce enough water during those maximum day demand periods, then we'll create a dangerous situation," he said this week.

But Scituate, he noted, has never experienced such critical water levels to warrant a shutoff of the supply. "What we discussed with Cohasset two year ago, was in the event of an emergency," Antoniello added.

The superintendent said that a regional emergency plan is basically a good idea between neighboring communities. "But as I understand the general laws of the state, if one town has a surplus of water, it's sort of a gentleman's agreement to assist another community," he added.

David Kanke, general manager of the Hingham Water Co., said that town has no immediate need to purchase water from Cohasset. But, like Pratt and

Beechwood Medical opens in former Raskin site

The former Raskin Medical Center on Route 3A, will open today, May 9, under new ownership as the Beechwood Medical Center.

Dr. Stanley Hoffman, who recently moved to Hingham, is the new owner of the emergency medical facility at the Cushing Plaza. His wife Joyce joins the staff as business manager.

The Raskin Medical Center closed abruptly without notice last week when litigation between Dr. William Raskin and his former partners stalled the impending sale of the clinic.

An appeals court judge ruled Tuesday that despite the litigation, the property sale should not be stopped and patient care should continue.She ordered the center to be reopened under the Hoffman's management.

Joyce Hoffman explained Wednesday that the medical center would be open for business Thursday morning. "I expect there'll be an expanded number of services. My husband has had extensive surgical training and research experience. He is a trained paramedic. I would call the Beechwood Medical Center an extended family pratice with services for minor emergencies and surgeries," she said.

Dr. Hoffman initiated the first Emergency Medical Residency program in New England at the Worcester City Hospital. Dr. Raskin was a former student in that program. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Tulane Medical School, Dr. Hoffman participated in the Harvard Services at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital and Boston City Hospital. He finished his education at the University of Pennsylvania at the Graduate Hospital and then became director of the Emergency Room at Philadelphia General Hospital. He then began the residency program in Worcester.

About a year ago, the Hoffman's began to look for a private practice, and in March made an offer to buy the Raskin Medical Center.

All staff members from the former facility will remain at Beechwood Medical Center, according to Mrs. Hoffman.

All patient files and records have been returned to the facility and are in order, she added. Patient appointments will be accepted, along with emergency medical services.

Cohasset's week . . .

Cat dam pollution

Selectmen will await a biologist's report on the pollution source of Cat Dam, before deciding what preventative action should be followed.

The Board of Health submitted a letter to the board, stating that the matter had been turned over to the state reclamation board for further study.

Selectmen Mary Jane McArthur noted several weeks ago, that she received many complaints about the stench from the dam on Nichols Road. When she later took a canoe trip along the stream, the pollution was visible, and the smell was overwhelming, she told the board.

At this week's meeting, Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "face it, that comes directly from the septic systems in that area." He said the homes there were built on ledge, and the systems drain right into Cat Dam. "The problem will continue for another 100 years unless we tell the Board of Health it's their problem," he said.

McArthur suggested that the board wait until tests results from the state are completed, before they meet with the Board of Health on the matter.

Members needed

Selectmen are hoping enough residents will volunteer for the Fire Chief search committee, so that appointments can be made next week.

The firefighters' union has submitted four names of active duty firefighters willing to serve on the committee. Two are scheduled to be named to the seven-member committee.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England said this week he has received names of two residents who have indicated a willingness to be on the search committee. And selectman Rocco Laugelle said a retired assistant Boston Fire Chief, a Cohasset resident, told him recently he will submit a resume to the board, notifying the members of his intention to serve.

Four community residents are needed to fill out the committee, along with the two active and one retired firefighter.

Selectman England urged the board members to contact residents who would be willing to serve on the committee. "Come in next week with the names of at least two candidates," he said. The seven-person group should be selected at next Monday's meeting, he said.

The search committee will assist selectmen in the selection of a new Cohasset Fire Chief. Selectmen said this week the committee will be served the same charge as the previous committee formed after the retirement of Chief Pipenbrink.

Selectmen decided in December not to renew Fire Chief Martin Dooley's contract when it expires in December, 1985. They decided this week that the same job description used to hire Chief Dooley will again be followed.

Selectmen vote raise

Selectmen voted this week to grant a $100 weekly raise to Acting Town Accountant Kathleen Conte, retroactive to April 22 when she took over the position.

Conte, who served as assistant town accountant, is working as acting accountant until a replacement for former Town Accountant William Signorelli is appointed. He retired April 22.

Selectmen noted that Signorelli was receiving almost $400 more per week than his assistant. The procedure they followed in a similar situation with the Acting Executive Secretary Janet Chalke, was to split the difference between her pay and the salary of the former Executive Secretary, Selectman Cliff Mitman noted.

But Selectman Frank England explained that in many circumstances, the person acting in the management position is "just filling the gap," and is not really qualified for the job. In that situation, the person shouldn't be compensated at such a high level.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle then suggested that Conte be given a $190 week raise, the difference between the two salaries. After a five minute recess called by Chairman England in which he privately conversed with Laugelle, the board voted to approve a $100 weekly raise to Conte, retroactive to April 22, and effective until a permanent selection is made. The raise is contingent on the advisory board's approval.

Deed restriction

Research into the property deed at 51 Jerusalem Road, revealed a restriction limiting the height of any structure upon that land.

Attorney John F. Roy, representing the Donald O'Neil family of Jerusalem Road, looked into the title for the property at 51 Jerusalem Road. The current owners of that property, Distinctive Homes Trust, have begun extensive renovations to the former one-story home, and plan to add a second level to the structure.

Roy, who said last week the O'Neil's would probably challenge the permits issued which allow the renovations at 51 Jerusalem Road, noted this week that perhaps that is not the most prudent course. Since there is little chance the Zoning Board of Appeals will oppose the permits previously issued by two town officials, the health agent and building inspector, the only future course may be a private lawsuit.

The attorney noted that if the deed restriction is ruled valid and enforceable, that may be the next step for the abutters to follow. The O'Neils and several other neighbors are opposed to the second story planned for the former single-level home overlooking the salt marshes of Little Harbor.

The restriction on the deed was included in the property title in 1925, long before the home was constructed in the late 1950's or early 1960's. According to the restriction, the height of any structure on that property may not exceed the crown of the adjacent road. A second story would exceed that peak, he noted.

But the attorney said he must now find whether the restriction remains valid and who is responsible for enforcing that restriction.

A realistic assessment of the abutter's appeal to the zoning board is not encouraging, according to the attorney. Because two town officials have given their approval to the plans for 51 Jerusalem Road, there is little chance another town agency would overrule their decision, Roy said this week.

Job appointment expected

Selectmen are meeting tonight, May 9, to formally announce the appointment of an executive secretary.

The appointment of a town accountant may also be made simultaneously.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen called an executive session to discuss contract negotiations. Selectman Chairman Frank England then met Tuesday night with the advisory committee in another executive session to discuss contract negotiations.

Selectmen discussed in open session last week the possibility of increasing the salary for an executive secretary. Advisory committee approval of a budget transfer would be necessary before a higher salary was offered.

Two weeks ago, they voted to offer the position of executive secretary to Bernard Cooper of Norwood. It was the contract price that had to be settled before an agreement was reached. Cooper is currently assistant general manager in the town of Norwood. He also has extensive financial experience, participating in several Norfolk County budget committees.

The advisory committee voted prior to their closed session Tuesday night to allow Acting Town Accountant Kathleen Conte a $600 stipend as compensation for her services from April 22 when assumed those duties, until June 3.

After Tuesday night's executive session, advisory committee members said no vote or decision had been made during their closed meeting.

A meeting notice has been posted for 7:30 tonight and is listed as a special meeting of ther Board of Selectmen.

Town's cash flow "isn't that bad"

Despite a continuing drain on the town's reserve fund, there should be enough money to last the remaining months of this fiscal year.

The advisory committee was brought more good news this week. The Treasurer-Collector explained that since November, $72,342 in overdue property title taxes have been collected. Movements are currently being made to collect several other back property taxes, including some sizeable commercial properties.

Advisory Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer agreed there was reason for optimism, noting that with the scheduled 38 Special Town Meeting articles, the town's free cash account was down to about $200,000. A good cash amount is $500,000, she noted, but with the expected additional tax revenue, that amount will rise to a safe level of about $400,000 or more.

Dormitzer explained Tuesday night, that if all the appropriations requests are approved at the June 17 Special Town Meeting, the free cash amount will be about $212,000. But if Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley, in conjunction with town counsel, continues to collect overdue real estate taxes, the free cash account could be replenished by about $200,000.

Ripley said there has been a delay this year in foreclosing on overdue properties by the town counsel's office. Atty. Richard Henderson was not aware of the delay, and has since been alerted to the situation. A foreclosure takes about three to four months to complete, she added.

There are two commercial properties in town that owe about $150,000 in back real estate taxes. Once they are foreclosed, it will result in a large portion of that total going toward town revenue.

Ripley had additional information for the advisors this week. Because the school roof project costs came in under project estimations, the town will have to borrow less money for a less period of time. There will be additional savings, Ripley noted.

Selectmen include about 38 articles for June meeting

Selectmen reviewed this week a warrant for the June 17 Special Town Meeting, which will probably include about 38 articles.

Many of the items to be reviewed at the meeting are carry-overs from the April annual meeting.

At their meeting this week, selectmen approved the inclusion of 36 articles into the warrant which closed Monday. Town Counsel Richard Henderson later advised the board that two additional articles may be included in the warrant.

Among the issues which will be voted upon is a request to appropriate $25,000 to retain a consultant to study and make recommendations for a personnel classification and compensation plan. Although $20,000 was the original figure included in the April warrant, the Massachusetts Municipal Association informed Selectman Cliff Mitman that for an addition $5000, an evaluation and performance appraisal system can be put into place, with a provision to train department heads in the new system. The classification study would pertain to non union town employees.

Although Selectman Diane Sullivan argued that "maybe I'm living in the Dark Ages, but that seems like a very high price for only 40 employees," the board members agreed to include the article in the warrant.

Selectmen have not yet voted whether to recommend any of the articles included in the Special Town Meeting warrant.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur noted that an evaluation and appraisal tool is needed , otherwise, merit raises are given automatically. The step raise increments, voted at last year's Town Meeting, were not to be given out automatically, she stated.

Board members agreed the classification, compensation and appraisal system must be reviewed by the personnel board before any recommendation is made.

Among the other articles to be reviewed at the June meeting is an appropriation request to fund deficiencies from the current fiscal year budget. The article will include requests for $5759 for selectmen's collective bargaining services; $15,000 for town counsel legal services; $13,200 for fire department overtime; $4200 for street lighting; and $13,500 for landfill cover costs.

A request by the Treasurer-Collector to change the title of the clerk in that office to the title of deputy collector was not included in the warrant. Selectmen said the request must first be reviewed by the personnel board.

There will be an article requesting a recording secretary to the Board of Selectmen for six hours per week. This request was approved by the personnel board a year ago, but because of budgetary reasons, it was not implemented this year.

Although no figure has been estimated, there will be a request to purchase individual air conditioning units for the third floor of Town Hall, and a large unit for the second floor.

There will be an article to appropriate $2300 to upgrade the telephone system between town offices. This would allow an intercom system between departments, and would eliminate the need to use costly message units between offices.

There will be an article to appropriate $2300 to This would allow an intercom system between departments, and would eliminate the need to use costly message units between offices.

The Board of Health members will meet with selectmen next week to discuss a request for $4959 to renovate the interior front section of the Bates Building.

Selectmen voted not to include two Water Department articles in the warrant until they have discussed them with the water department officials. The two articles deal with the construction and installation of a Newtonville water line and hydrant. These articles were included in the April warrant.

A third article from that department was rejected by selectmen for the warrant. The Water Department had asked that $1000 be appropriated for a study by the Massachusetts Municipal Association regarding the town's computer system.

Warrant closed for town meeting

Department personnel have stated the system still is not functioning properly. Selectmen denied the article, saying no letter had been forwarded to them about the problems or the study request. Acting Executive Secretary Janet Chalke said she received a phone call from the department this week, requesting that the article be included.

A Board of Health request to install 600 feet of fencing at the landfill, was approved for the warrant. The health board said the fence, used to enclose litter within the landfill area, would cost about $4500.

A citizens' petition article requesting $2500 for tuition for Cohasset residents attending the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens workshop, was temporarily included in the warrant. Although board members have been told this is a one-time expenditure, they said they would need town counsel to review the request before it is included in the warrant.

There is no article to appropriate money for an architect to plan major renovations to the police and fire department complex. There was also no citizens' petition submitted to pay $750 in legal fees incurred this past year by Cohasset Police Officer John Small. The officer told selectmen last week, he wanted an appropriation request included in the June meeting warrant. Selectmen said that article would have to be submitted as a citizens' petition, requiring 100 residents' signatures.

Cohasset Boy Scout news

Troop 28 Scoutmaster, Merle Brown, presented the Eagle Scout Award to John Pape. The Eagle Court of Honor Ceremony was held at the First Parish Church, with Rev. Atkinson speaking to the honored guests, and many friends and relatives who came to recognize John's achievements.

The Scouting District Executive, William Roberts, was the master of ceremonies. John received recognition from President Reagan, the Senate, the House of Representatives, The Cohasset Rotary Club (sponsor of Troop 28 and Pack 38), Town of Cohasset, and other letters of congratulations. The Eagle Award is the highest award that a scout can earn.

John transferred to Cohasset's Troop 28 from Scituate in 1980. He has held many leadership positions in Troop 28 including Senior Patrol Leader and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster. He has earned the prestigious Dr. Howard Reid Award. During his scouting career, he was a counsellor at Camp Hinds of the Pine Tree Council in Maine.

John's Eagle Scout project was to clean-up and restore the Cedar Street Cemetery in Cohasset. This project took many hours of work by John, who organized and assisted the other scouts of Troop 28 and friends. The small cemetery served an area originally called Turkey Meadow in 1700. After the completion of John's project the cemetery was a more respectable area. The Historical Society and the Town of Cohasset greatly appreciate the effort and restoration which John and the younger scouts provided.

Michael Lelecas was awarded the Dr. Howard Reid Award presented by John Pape. This award is for the outstanding member of Troop 28 for his camping, scout spirit and helpfulness to others. The award also provides a week tuition at Camp Child in Plymouth. Several advancement awards were also presented to several scout members of Troop 28.

May 3-5 Troop 28 joined 3,000 scouts at Stonehill College in Easton to celebrate "the 75th Anniversary of Scouting" with the Old Colony Council. The many attractions included Army demonstrations, M.D.C. demonstrations, police dog demonstrations, hot air balloons and helicopters. The scouts had a camping-out weekend.

New options; new results

By Charlotte Carney

What if you knew you could make any change in your life with ease and confidence?

What if you could learn to deal creatively with stress, balance your family and work, improve personal communications and accomplish your goals?

These "what ifs" are addressed, and made possible, according to a course "New Options: New Results," led by Richard Lanza, held at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

"New Options: New Results," teaches a wide range of techniques which can be applied to any aspect of a person's life. Its scope includes greater career success and goal setting, effective sales and communication techniques, interviewing skills, improved classroom effectiveness for teachers, stress management, harmonious personal relationships, parent-teenage communication, confidence building, public speaking, and increased health, and emotional well being.

Lanza, a professional in communication skills, received his B.A. in Psychology, specializing in behavior modification, from the University of Mass. at Amherst. He is a graduate of the Robbins Research Institute in Del Mar, Calif., and is associated with the Omni Alternative Education Facility and health clinic in Norwell.

According to Lanza, the process of "change" embodied in this course is based on, but not limited to, fundamental concepts of N.L.. (Neurolinguistic Programming). You learn to assess and utilize your own resources, view resistance as information and reframe your perception of a problem or behavior. Through use of these skills, in changing what you believe is possible for yourself, you change your experience, thus generating new choices and conditions for yourself and others.

Through his classes Lanza supports individuals in making positive changes, while achieving desired outcomes in a small group atmosphere which is empowering, open and fun.

Lanza's innovative use of music as part of his technique is exhilarating and uplifting.

In both his practice and his classes his aim is maintaining health and well being through intergrating the physical, emotional and spiritual aspects of the individual.

"New Options: New Results" begins May 9 with a free introductory meeting, and will run through June 13. Enrollment will be accepted through May 16. A fee of $90 is made convenient through payment plans.

For further information, contact Richard Lanza, 472-8741, or Margot Cheel, Program Co-ordinator, at 383-6845.

☐ Marine 2nd Lt. James M. Sullivan, son of William M. and Joan M. Sullivan of 11 Ledge Way, was graduated from the Basic School.

While attending the Basic School, located at Marine Corps Development and Education Command, Quantico, VA., Sullivan was prepared as a newly-commissioned officer for assignment to the Fleet Marine Force and given the responsibility of a rifle platoon commander.

Sullivan's 26-week course included instruction on land navigation, marksmanship, tactics, military law, personnel administration, Marine Corps history and traditions, communications and the techniques of military instruction.

He was also taught leadership by example which stressed teamwork, and he participated in a demanding physical conditioning program.

☐ Navy Ensign Brian P. Conlan, son of Patrick M. amd Marie G. Conlan of 237 Forest Ave., was designated a Naval Aviator. Presentation of the "Wings of Gold" marked culmination of 18 months of flight training.

A 1983 graduate of the College of Holy Cross, Worcester, Ma., with a Bachelor of Arts degree, he joined the Navy in May, 1983.

☐ Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Gordon N. Ricketts, son of Edwin C. and Frances E. Ricketts of 39 Hill St., Cohasset, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with Fighter Squadron 22, Naval Air Station Oceana, Virginia Beach, VA.

☐ Dana Doggett, a Mormon, had the pleasure of holding his infant daughter in his arms and giving her "a name and a blessing" while grandparents, Polly and Tom Doggett of Hugh Strain Road looked on

The christening event took place in Provo, Utah at an LDS chapel. As is customary in The hurch of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints fathers who are worthy and hold the priesthood are able to bless their own infants and later to baptize that child when he (or she) is eight years of age.

Doggett, a convert to the Church when twelve, graduated from Cohasset High in 1976. At 19 he served as a Mormon missionary for two years in Central America. After graduating from Brigham Young University and working for a year for Convair in San Diego, he has returned to B.Y.U. to work for his Master's degree in Computer Science. He and his wife, Chris, (formerly from Ohio) are the parents of a 2 1/2 year old son, as well as the new baby.

☐ Congratulations are certainly in order for Jeff O'Neill, son of Don and Sally O'Neill of Jerusalem Road. Jeff has been trying out for the Regional Midget Hockey Olympic Team of Massachusetts and has made it! There were over 200 boys that started tryouts a while back, and there were cuts made every two weeks. Jeff was notified that he is one of 32 chosen from Mass to go to Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center, which will take place later on this summer. Once in Colorado Springs, tryouts will begin again, and eight boys will be chosen . . . then it is on again, this time to Finland! Continued success to you Jeff, and we will keep in touch!

☐ Received a nice note from Alice Nisula last week. She sounded so excited, as she has decided to move back to the South Shore. Alice has been a resident of Florida for the last 15 years (still summered in Cohasset, though), and is now widowed. She is returning "to stay", and will be living in Norwell where she will live near her daughter, Mary Chesarone. And her year-old grandson of course! As she said "Good bye Hibiscus! Hello Lilacs!" Anyone wanting to get in touch with Alice can do so through her friend Isabelle Wilson, who lives on Spindrift Lane. Welcome home!

☐ We want to be sure to send happy housewarming wishes to the Richard Henderson family as they move into their new home this week . . . may they have every happiness that they deserve!

☐ Donna Harlow and Sandy Lorina of 130 King Street had a grand time recently. They were aboard the T.S.S. Mardi Gras, 27,000 ton fun ship of Carnival Cruise Lines. They sailed out of the Port of Miami on a seven day cruise to the Caribbean and Mexico. During the voyage the ship made stops at Cozumel, Mexico; Grand Cayman Island and Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Color us green with envy!!

The Friends of the Paul Pratt Library prepare for the upcoming book sale. Helping arrange things are: (l to r) Ann Bowdoin, Tom Williams, and June Hubbard.

☐ Seniors are reminded of Senior Olympic Day to be held May 15-19 in Quincy. Even if you didn't register, it sure is grand fun to watch.

☐ And, High Schol seniors are reminded to contact Mary Jeanette Murray for information about student loans. ☐ Congratulations to Brendan Mulcahy, who won the "first round" in his bid for the special olympic gold. Brendan goes to Boston University in a few weeks for his next step in the competition. Good luck to you Brendan.

☐ Saw Regina Shultz last week, on her bike, with the Cancer Crusade Kits in her arms . . . that's real dedication, she is to be commended!

☐ Lots of you remember Mike and Chris Lenahan, who used to live on Surrey Drive. They were in town this weekend, looking for a coffee table at Cohasset Colonials. They had been reminded of the Hagertys after reading about their award-winning catalogue in the papers. They both look fantastic and report the family is wonderful. Also want to give their love to all their friends.

☐ Ask Father Keohane what time it is, and you certainly will get a wonderful story . . . good things happen to nice people, and he is the best!

☐ Take time this week to check out all of the beautiful spring gardens that are in full bloom! Its worth it to take a stroll, that way you really get to see everything that is so pretty . . .

☐ C.H.S. Senior Class play will be held this weekend, starting today (Thursday) at 8 p.m. The name of their production is "A Blast from the Past," written by the class. Tickets may be purchased at the door or through cast members. Don't miss it!

☐ That's all from here for this week . . . please keep the news coming to me, either by phone or letter.

Arts funding approved

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council met last Monday to review applications for this funding period. The committee had six applications to review and three were approved and mailed to the state house for final approval under the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council.

The applications approved by the Cohasset Committee were: the South Shore Arts Center, $100 towards their special performances this summer's festival.

The Cohasset dramatic club $250. To aid in cost of scenic flats;

The Cohasset Historical Society, $420 was approved for their file and ongoing program of restoration of painting and prints for our historic houses and museums.

Our committee had a total of $918 to review and $30 of administrative funds were recommended with a small roll-over to our next funding period.

Those at the meeting included Joan Jensen, Helen Ketchum, Sigrid Carey, Linda Stevens Hapionan and Larry Fone.

The committee was disappointed that there were so few applications and none from individual artists.

The committee hopes interested Cohasset residents will get an application for the next funding review and hopefully there will be more dollars available. Don't keep Cohasset's Art Community a secret. Apply for funds.

Our Cohasset Committee is certainly well rounded. Theatre, crafts, education, fine arts and business. We welcome comments and ideas to help provide Cohasset with a stronger art community. All letters, votes, etc. will be made available to the Cohasset Mariner and Patriot Ledger for publication.

The entire committee would like to hear from you. Write Larry Fone, 17 Reservior Rd., Cohasset. Applications are available the Cohasset selectmen's office. From any member of the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council and the South Shore Arts Center.

Remember, our local committee forwards approved applications to the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council who ultimately awards the funds and makes them available to the town accountant. A simple form is then mailed to the awarded applicant and with verification of dollars spent will get a check.

Sounds a little overdone and it is. However that's the way it works!

Once again, get people to apply and lets not keep Cohassets Art Community a secret!

A good idea

The logistics have yet to be worked out, but if everything could be organized, selling water to neighboring towns sounds like a good way to generate revenue.

The Cohasset Water Department has been struggling for years to be the self-sufficient department it is chartered to be. Costly plant renovations, and obstinate bill payers have delayed this goal.

The Water Commission is in the midst of a determined campaign to get these stubborn residents to pay their share of the tax burden. Not paying taxes has a cumulative effect on the entire town, in increased, unncessary borrowing, and interest payments.

And it's not just water bills. The treasurer-collector's office is in the midst of tax season. While they are attempting to assimilate current tax accounts, they are also pursuing long overdue property taxes.

Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley explained this week that some of those overdue property taxes are a couple of years old, and some date back 15-20 years. The town is just starting to get tough, because we need the money.

Think how far $150,000 in taxes owed by two defunct commercial businesses could go in this town. That money only could have covered the costs of fixing the school roofs. Perhaps if we had such revenue on hand this past fall, taxpapyers wouldn't have had to borrow a bond note for that same amount - an amount that will cost us $23,000 in interest over four years.

Water bills are the type of notice many of us choose to ignore. But think what would happen if we all decided not to pay our rates. The Water Department is trying in earnest to produce a generous supply of good drinking water, but it can't be done without also producing revenue.

Think of all the money unnecessarily appropriated each year because of the lack of town resources - because too many residents, including you, decided not to pay their tax bill.

Some towns publish a list of the people who have not paid their water bills, or their tax rates. Some people think that's an effective way to shame others into paying their dues.

We tend to think these people can't be shamed.

The Senior Class of C.H.S. will be presenting a delightful original musical, "Blast from the Past," May 9,10, and 11. The production will take place at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Tickets are $3.

Directed by Kathleen Bowen, the production was written by senior class members and lead writer Mike DeSantis. Bill Duffy of Scituate is serving as music director.

A portion of the proceeds of this senior class musical will be sent to Ethiopia to help alleviate the famine situation there.

The play consists of members of this year's graduating class, including two A.F.S. exchange students, Alejandra Castro and Mauricio Golfiero. Each participant has an equal role in the musical.

A decision to attend Dartmouth

To the Editor:

I feel that in this last, very important week, when seniors are trying to make their final decisions about which college to attend, that this essay is appropriate.

When I was applying to Dartmouth a year ago, I heard these stereotypes about women, drinking and sports over and over again. I feel that it is time for an honest description of Dartmouth to be published so that students can work with the truth instead of stories to make their decision.

This essay is not only relevant for this year's seniors but for everyone to have an inside view of a fabulous college.

I hear the men run the campus. Tell me is it true?
They say the women have trouble up there,
I wouldn't go if I were you.
To make matters worse you don't even drink.
You will never fit in there,
At least that's what I think.
But you do play sports, so maybe you will...
After all that's what they do most,
At that college on the hill.

The time has come once again for seniors all over the country to choose which college they will attend, a decision that will not only affect the next four years but the rest of their lives. Other people's impressions can play an important role in this decision. Last year when I was a senior applying to Dartmouth, the stereotypes that I have depicted above about women, drinking and sports were very common from those people who did not know the school. I would like to present an honest description of the Dartmouth experience.

I hear the men run the campus. Tell me is it true?
They say the women have trouble up there,
I wouldn't go if I were you.

The stereotype that is the most difficult to believe is the idea that women are "dominated" at Dartmouth. In 1972, to adjust to the modern world, Dartmouth went coed. In the initial years of change, when women were greatly outnumbered by the men in what had always been a man's college, life might not have been easy. This situation was not unique to Dartmouth. Transitions such as this took place all over the country. I find it very disheartening that the stereotype of "oppressed" or "dominated" women still lingers on in the minds of many. With the ratio of men to women now at 58 to 42, Dartmouth is no longer a man's college but is the Dartmouth "family," in which a man's and woman's experience is equal.

To make matters worse you don't even drink.
You will never fit in there,
At least that's what I think.

The most popular stereotype of Dartmouth, which was not helped by the movie "Animal House," is that while they are not "dominating" the women, all the men do is drink. Fraternities at Dartmouth do play a large role in the social life. However, the image of "Animal House" is not an accurate description at all! On the weekend nights there are always about three or four fraternity or sorority parties to attend. Of course there is plenty to drink. Yet, unlike many other schoools, there are also mixed drinks, which enables those who want to drink just fruit juices to do so, and there are usually soft drinks as well. Like plenty of others, I go to the frats to dance and be with my friends; not to get drunk.

Going to fraternity and sorority parties is certainly not the only thing to do on the weekends. The Hopkins Arts Center presents movies, plays, dance, and concerts every weekend. There are many options and drinking does not have to be a part of it!

But you do play sports, so maybe you will...
After all that's what they do most,
At that college on the hill.

I would agree with the fact that you have to love the outdoors to come to school here, but you certainly do not, as this stereotype suggests, have to be a jock. Along with the intercollegiate teams, there are gym classes offered, intermural sports that range from water polo to rugby, and dorm teams that compete against each other all year round. Apart from sports, there are male and female singing groups, the glee club, the orchestra, and the Dartmouth Players (acting group). There are art studios, jewelry shops, woodworking shops and so on. Dartmouth is a place for everybody.

I know that my personal bias for this school dominates this essay, but I am not the only fanatic here. You will find this feeling for the college shared by men and women, drinkers and non-drinkers, athletes and singers alike.

I know what you are feeling now,
I went through it last year.
If you are considering Dartmouth
The women really like it here.
No, the men are not all jocks,
And they do not all chug beer.
So come on up and see us,
Because decision time is near.

Cohasset water ready to sell, any buyers ?

Antoniello, the idea of formulating a regional network is an idea he supports. Since Hingham is also interconnected to Cohasset and with Weymouth, if it's supply was ever reduced, a cooperative plan would be feasible.

According to Kanke, several South Shore towns, including Abington, Rockland and Marshfield have experienced water supply shortages in recent years. A cooperative network would alleviate much concern within these communities about locating additional water sources, he said.

Cohasset Commissioner Pratt noted that such a plan devised by the three towns "could evolve into a model of how town's can assist each other in drought situations."

While Pratt acknowledged the regional idea is still in the planning stages, the concept could produce needed revenue for Cohasset. Technically, supplying water to Hingham and Scituate is possible, and the necessary connections are already in place. It is the manpower and operating costs that would have to be formulated. "We could open the valves in 15 minutes," he explained. "It would take two or three weeks to have the emergency appropriations necessary to gear things up for such a situation."

Water Supt. Ben Curley said his major concern is that Cohasset must determine and certify a safe water level. "We'd have to make sure that we don't impact on Cohasset's supply. That's our first priority. Putting the department on better financial footing is important, but only if we have excess capacity," he explained.

Comissioner Pratt agreed that any regional sale plan would be formulated only after Cohasset is assured of maintaining enough water for its residents. 'This plan demands close research," he said. "Because ultimately we have to conserve enough water so that Cohasset residents will have all the water they want."

In the meantime, the Cohasset Water Commission is busying pursuing overdue water bills. "Tremendous progress," has been made in that direction, according to Pratt, who noted that $34,000 has been collected since an intesified campaign began in April.

The commission decided that because $84,000 is owed in overdue bills, the department should dedicate the months of April, May and June to pursuing the accounts. Since the first of April, $34,000 has been collected, with about half the total debtors making some arrangements with the department to pay their bills.

Results of Cohasset's Special Olympians

Sunny skies and perfect May weather greeted the Cohasset Special Olympics team as it joined the other Plymouth County teams in parading around Marciano Stadium at Brockton High School for the opening of the 1985 Spring Track and Field Meet last Wednesday.

Dressed in navy blue sweatsuits and white visors provided by their sponsores, the Rotary Club of Cohasset, the team and their coaches presented a handsome sight to the stands filled with well-wishers including the Cohasset Special Olympics Booster Club.

As part of the opening ceremony, a Booster Club member, Charlotte Carney of Hingham, sang an original song, a moving tribute to the special children who give their all at these competitions.

A lot of coaching helped make the county Olympics a great event.

Weeks of practice paid off as, one after another, our athletes showed their fortitude and scored impressive victories. Competing in small groups where each athlete wins a medal, Cohasset team members participated in the fifty and one hundred meter dashes, the long jump, and the softball toss.

A team picture of Cohasset's Special Olympians.

The results were:

Ryan Picton, first place, 50 meter dash, second place, softball toss; Peter Plante, first place, 50 meter dash, second place, softball toss; Tommy Coyne, second place, 50 meter dash; Michael Goodhue, second place, 50 meter dash, third place, long jump; Jay Nothnagle, first place, 100 meter dash, second place, long jump; Eric Sisson, second place, 50 meter dash, second place, softball toss; Matthew Grassey, sixth place, 50 meter dash, fourth place, softball toss; Shawn Cheverie, fourth place, 50 meter dash; Jennifer Porter, first place, 50 meter dash, third place, softball toss; Steven Skayne, first place, 50 meter dash, first place, softball toss; and Timmy Myers, third place, 50 meter dash, fourth place, 100 meter dash.

Based on their scores, several competitors from each team will be chosen to participate in the Massachusetts Summer Track and Field Meet at Boston University in June.

Our team members will be honored alongside Cohasset's other student athletes at the Cohasset High School Spring Sports Awards Night later this month.

It takes long hours of hard work to be a Special Olympian. Just ask Jay Nothnagle, who's getting some advice from Kathy Porter (r) and volunteer Nancy Kromp (c).

Money decisions

because of the low interest bid offered by the banks bidding on the bond note.

Although the town was originally prepared to borrow $200,000 over a five-year period, the final project costs came in under $150,000. Ripley said three area banks bid on a four or a three-year note at a 6.25 percent interest rate, and a six percent rate respectively.

The advisors voted to approve the four-year term, in which the town would pay $37,500 per year, including accumulated interest of $23,320. The rate of borrowing in fiscal year 1986 would be reduced under the terms of the bond, Ripley added.

Although advisors were pleased with the positive economic news, committee member Richard Horn said it would be a good pratice for the town to identify all capital expenditures out on bonds, and what the interest and payment schedules are on each project. A complete financial record of the town's expenditures is a ncessary part of fiscal planning for the future, he added.

The town's reserve fund, used to fund department budget deficits, is now about $11,000. Chairman Dormitzer noted that "isn't that bad," and said any departmental transfer requests until July 1 can be handled within that account.

Tuesday night, advisors approved several department transfer requests.

That account, which totaled $18,000 before this week's session, is now down to about $11,000. But Chairman Dormitzer said that should be enough to last the two remaining months of FY85.

The advisors approved a transfer of $171 to the landfill account to cover temporary employees' salaries; $1399 to the Town Clerk for elections and town meetings. This was the second transfer made in the past several weeks to that account. In April, advisors approved $1123 for the annual town meeting and election. The committee also approved $791 for temporary employees for the June 17 town meeting.

The committee reviewed a request for $127 to repair the Board of Health copy machine, but want to know if the machine is being leased and under a maintenance contract. An advertising bill for $1187 by that board was also questioned after advisors learned it did not have to be published in the daily newspaper, but could have been submitted for less money to the Cohasset weekly publication.

A total transfer request of $1950 by the Tree and Park Department was approved, for various repairs.

The Board of Health notified the advisors that there was a possible additional $6000 request at the special town meeting for clay materials to be used as cover at the landfill. There is currently an article requesting $13,200 for cover materials for the landfill. The health board said the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has regulated the amount of clay to be used. But after seeing a copy of the DEQE mandate, the committee did not agree such a large amount of material was ordered by the state agency.

Cohasset sports for the week

By Lisa Shumaker

BOYS' BASEBALL

The boys started off the week with a victory over Sandwich, 5 to 4. Led by pitcher Sean Corkery, Cohasset played very well defensively. Down by one run in the last inning, the Skippers came back and scored two runs off of Jeff Soltesz's hit to left field. Peter Corbett scored the tying run followed by Jay Contis who scored the winning run for Cohasset.

Wednesday, the boys lost a heart-breaker to Duxbury, 5 to 4. According to coach Joe Bouchard, "We played well enough defensively to win it." Unfortunately, the Skippers were unlucky offensively.

Both Glen Bernstein and Peter Corbett led the team offensively, while Bob Shultz did a fantastic job in center field.

Thursday, Cohasset was defeated by Hanover 13 to 2. According to Bouchard, his team did nothing wrong defensively. Hanover was just lucky and hitting balls between the Cohasset players instead of at them.

Bouchard did mention that Jay Contis had a strong game offensively, hitting a triple. Peter Sandbloom also got on base and played well.

Bouchard also pointed out that this was the first time his team had been in this type of losing situation this season. This shows great improvement over last year.

This week the boys play Scituate on Wednesday in Cohasset and travel to Rockland on Thursday.

BOYS' TENNIS

The boys have been having a rough season thus far. Cohasset has been plagued by illnesses and injuries, and therefore has not been at full strength the entire season. As a result, many of the younger players on the team have had to replace the older more experienced players.

Coach Toni Jillson, although a little disappointed with her team's record, has been very impressed with players Derik Lax, Dan Farwell, Fred Willshire, Jay Marsac, and Chris Ryan who have all showed much promise.

The Skippers are now 1 and 6 as they go into the latter part of their season. Hillson feels strongly, however, that this record will be turned around very soon, and she predicts her team will be at full strength this week.

GIRLS' TENNIS

The girls had an awesome week starting with a victory over Sandwich on Monday, 5-0. Coach Sue Dalrymple was very proud of her team and felt they all played great.

First singles player Ingrid Anderson, second singles player Kerri Kirkendall, and third singles player Kristen O'Brien all won their matches. the first doubles team of Lauren Haynes and Jessica Hamilton, and the second doubles team of Megan Kelly and Carolyn O'Brien defeated their opponents as well.

Wednesday, Cohasset had their biggest victory of the season as they defeated Duxbury 3-2. This win moved the Skippers in first place along with Duxbury. Duxbury was undefeated going into this match, but Cohasset overpowered them and handed them their first loss.

Kerri Kirkendall, KristenO'Brien and second doubles team Megan Kelly and Carolyn O'Brien all had outstanding matches and beat their opponents. Dalrymple also cited Ingrid Anderson as playing well against some tough competition.

Thursday, the girls kept their winning streak alive by beating Hanover 3-2. This match was much closer than the team had anticipated, but Cohasset hung tough and pulled it out.

Kerri Kirkendall continued to play well and won once again along with both doubles teams consisting of Lauren Haynes, Jessica Hamilton, Megan Kelly and Carolyn O'Brien.

Upcoming this week, the Skippers have a big match aginst Scituate Wednesday, away. Thursday, the girls are home when they meet Rockland.

BOYS' TRACK

The boys had a tough week, losing both of their meets. Monday, Cohasset traveled to Whitman/Hanson and were defeated, 98-47. Unfortunately, the Skippers as a team had trouble picking up first places. However this did not seem to be the case for Floyd Hardwick who had three firsts and one second place. Mike DeSantis also came in first in the pole vault.

Thursday, the Skippers lost to East Bridgewater 96 1/2 to 48 1/2. Mike DeSantis once again had a good day running a strong 880 and winning as well as coming in first in the pole fault. Both Floyd Hardwick and Stephen Fries picked up first places as well.

Coach Jon Anderson was also proud of Jeff Aaron who has improved tremendously this year in the javelin and came in second place in this meet.

Despite having a tough season, Anderson is pleased that his team has stuck together and done its best.

Tuesday, the boys travel to Duxbury which will undoubtedly be quite a challenge for the Skippers. Thursday, Cohasset takes on Hull away. Anderson predicts his team will do well in this meet.

GIRLS' TRACK

Monday, the girls lost to Whitman/Hanson. However, Coach Claire Brady pointed out that her team was missing a lot of kids and Cohasset probably would have won if they were at full strength. Jane DeLima led all with three firsts in the 100, 220, and high jump. Jane missed having four firsts by a mere 3/4 of an inch in the long jump.

Janet Bagley won the shot put and picked up a second. Sarah Seavey and Caitlin Staunton each had a first place as well.

Brady also commended the efforts of Heather St. Onge in the triple jump as she did surprisingly well.

Thursday, the girls were defeated by East Bridgewater. Brady was encouraged by this meet and noticed a marked improvement in her team's overall score. Caitlin Staunton was Cohasset's double winner Thursday as she came in first in both the 440 and 220. Janet Bagley and Jane DeLima each picked up a first as well.

Sarah Seavey came in second in the javelin, but more importantly shattered the school record (which she held before) and threw for a distance of 106 ft. 1/2 inch. Sara Hamilton and Liz O'Leary were both very impressive in their races and turned in very good times.

This week, the girls travel to Duxbury on Tuesday and are off again Thrusday as they face Hull.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

Monday, the girls clobbered Sandwich, 15 to 7. Offensively, Cohasset combined for a remarkable 20 hits, and on defense the Skippers had a pretty strong game.

Tara Stanford led the offense with four hits and scoring four runs as well. Janet DiGorolamo and Carla Lucas each had three hits a piece as well as having fantastic games defensively.

Kerry O'Brien started off on the mound and was complimented by coach Bill Fallon on her efforts.

Wednesday, Cohasset put together their best defensive effort this season and beat Duxbury 4 to 1. Pitcher Kerry O'Brien had an incredible game striking out six batters and pitching a no hitter.

Cohasset had a total of six hits, two came from Anne O'Leary who also had one R.B.I. and another came from Tara Stanford who had an R.B.I. as well.

Thursday, the Skippers fell short against Hanover, 8 to 3. The girls played a good game up until the fifth inning when Hanover went on a hitting streak.

Carla Lucas led all of Cohasset's hitters with three followed closely behind by Tara Stanford who had two.

Wednesday, Cohasset travels to Scituate and must win if they have any hopes of making the tournament. Thursday, the Skippers take on Rockland, which is predicted to be a close game. Friday the girls will face one of their toughest competitors, Whitman/Hanson.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

INVASION OF PRIVACY

There are times in life when one just wants to be left alone. Whether taking refuge in the seclusion of one's home or venturing out on a private errand, one does not want to be disturbed by other people intruding on your business. The law recognizes this need for privacy. It shields it through the "right of privacy". If someone intrudes on your privacy, he may be held liable for the distress and humiliation that you have suffered. When seeking in court to enforce your right to privacy, your attorney will have to prove that the intruder pried into your affairs. The area into which he intruded must be one that was entitled to remain private. The intrusion ordinarily would have to be offensive to a reasonable man. As a result of the intrusion, you must have suffered mental stress.

In striving to protect one's rights as well as establish one's responsibilities, the law has become a complex matter. However, just as in physical health, an annual checkup is important, so should one consider a periodic legal review to understand and determine the status of you "legal health". Through such a review, understanding and awareness will be created that will help you maximize your rights and be aware of your responsibilities. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justic Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

HINT

The clearest example of an intrusion on your privacy is a trespass in your home.

St. Stephen's

Important meeting - for all interested in church school. An informational and organizational meeting of all interested in church school will take place Sunday, May 19 after the 10 a.m. service in the "watermelon" room of the parish house.

A church school program will be available for every age child and adult at St. Stephen's beginning in September. A video of the program for grades one through six will be shown at this meeting on the 19th.

The church school for school-age children will be held at 9:15 a.m. on Sundays. A class for parents and any other interested adults will be held concurrently.

Prayer for healing - The Wednesday morning Eucharist at 9:30 a.m. includes a prayer for healing for all who wish. All are invited to participate in our weekly Eucharist and prayer for healing.

Adult class for Christian perspective - John Seavey and Gertrude Hooper will be teaching a four-week class on Christian perspective on wealth beginning Wednesday, May 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the choir room. In a relaxed and informal setting we will discover together what Jesus' words mean for us today. Don't miss this interesting class.

Stewardship - our managing the affairs of God on earth through our money, our time, and talent, though emphasized in the fall, is really a year-round activity.

Through our giving, we become instruments of God's love at St. Stephen's, in the Diocese, and for those whose needs are greater than our own. You may place your pledge card in an envelope for the collection plate or mail it in to the attention of Bill Broe, our treasurer.

Blue box - The Episcopal Church United Thanks Offering is a special way for families to give thanks for the many blessings God brings each day. A blue box is placed in the home where all in the family may drop their money in thanksgiving. The National Church then takes all these thank offerings which last year amounted to almost $2 1/2 million and makes grants to enable the mission of Christ in the poor areas of our country and world. Blue boxes will be available for us on Sunday, May 12.

The Village Fair - The fair is a unique tradition in Cohasset that involves the whole town in a gala event on the first Sunday in December. Five churches participate together to provide a variety of booths with handmade creations for people of all ages.

We are now recruiting workers with creative skills and just plain helpers - men, women and yung people - to join in the preparations.

For details, call Betty Madden, 383-0246 or Sue Mullett, 383-6306.

First Parish

Special offertory - on Flower Sunday, May 19, each family is invited to bring a bag of trash to the Meeting House. We ask that the trash be collected from any one of the public grounds within our community: Sandy Beach, the Town Common, Government Island, Black Rock Beach, Wheelwright Park, Whitney Woods, or any number of other public areas. Any returnable bottles found should be segregated in a separate container. Place the other trash in a plastic garbage bag and label it with your name and the location where it was collected. Make this a fun family project for an hour or two during the next three weeks. On Flower Sunday, the trash bags will be brought forward.

Religious education news - Sixth graders - have a special time in store. Some sixth graders will be visiting on Friday. We will be making dinner, swimming, playing games, as well as meeting new friends. Eighth graders - This is pizza party week. Your final class will be held at the Craft's house at 6-8 p.m. Sunday. Please bring $2. This is a great way to end your class. Youth group - special time and place for your meeting this week. Meet at the Parish House at 6:15 p.m. Sunday. Drivers are needed.

Plant sale - Geraniums for sale! The Youth Group is selling gorgeous local greenhouse-grown plants to raise money for a scholarship. We have 250 geraniums. They will be available Saturday, May 11 and Sunday, May 12. This is sponsored by the Youth Group.

Letters to fight hunger

Next Sunday, May 12, members of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will write letters to their representatives in Congress urging their support of the Food Assistance and Africa Agriculture Act.

This bill was recently introduced at the urging of Bread for the World to aid the starving millions in this drought stricken continent. BFW is a Christian citizens' movement which works to obtain government policies that give hungry people a chance. It is supported by many church denominations and has 48,000 members throughout the United States, including several residents of Cohasset.

The letter writing campaign in Cohasset is being spearheaded by Chester Smith of 62 Cedar Street who is a member of Bread for the World and also a member of the Hunger Task Force of the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ.

In commenting on this project, Mr. Smith said, "The bill sponsored by BFW would provide adequate emergency food aid next year and increase U.S. aid for agricultural development in Africa. Wide publicity last Fall dramatized the extreme famine in Africa which prompted a great outpouring of money to aid the situation. But money alone for emergency food aid is not enough. It is no long term solution. Here is where letters to our congressmen and senators are as important as our dollars."

Sunday, May 12 at 11 a.m., writing materials and guidance in writing letters on this subject will be available. May 12 is also Mothers' Day. It is an appropriate day to do something about the plight of the poor women of Africa because most of the farm work there is done by women.

Anyone in the community is welcome to join in this letter writing campaign. Fore more information, contact Chester Smith, whose phone is 383-1517.

Second Congregational Church

Special church committee meeting - The Church-Committee, together with all members of committees, will meet Saturday, May 11 for a gourmet breakfast (8 a.m.) followed by a planning meeting. This meeting will replace the regular May meeting. All officers and committee members are urged to attend.

Write more letters to fight hunger - On May 12, we will have another get together after the worship service to write more letters. The continuing drought in Africa which is forcing millions of starving people to crowd into refugee camps, has recently accented the world hunger problem. Bread for the World has sponsored the Food Assistance and Africa Agricultural Act now before Congress. Aid for projects to help the poor countries produce and distribute more of their own food needs is the only long term solution. Here is where your letter to our representatives in Congress is as important as our dollars.

On May 12, writing material and guidance in writing your letter will be available after church in Bates Hall. You will hear more about this in the worship service that day. May 12 is also Mothers' Day. It is an appropriate day to do something about the plight of poor women of Africa because most of the farm work there is done by women.

Cablesystems telethon

Plans are underway for an eight-hour telethon by American Cablesystems to be held June 15 from noon to 8 p.m. This telethon will benefit world and local hunger and disease, under the name of "Help Establish Love and Peace" (H.E.L.P.).

Nita Strode and Robert Feijoo are co-producers and they are promising celebrity guests, entertainment, sports and local color live from local cable channels 3 and 12.

Volunteers from American Cablesystems, including employees and viewers from Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Hingham, Norwell and Hanover, are all participating to make this first telethon a great success.

Cohasset represented at LWV meeting

Deborah Cook and Madeline Olney of the Cohasset League of Women Voters will be delegates at the biennial Convention of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts, to be held at Bentley College in Waltham, May 10, 11, and 12.

They will join delegates from approximately 100 local League chapters throughout Massachusetts. One of the main tasks before the delegates will be deciding upon the program of League work that will be adopted for state action in the next biennium. League members will also vote a budget for 1985-86, attend workshops and caucuses on a variety of issues, review the latest League publications and video publications, and give awards to certain Leagues for excellence in a number of areas.

The Board of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts has proposed two "Action Year" topics. These topics would be the focus for League education and action. For the first year, the Board proposes a review of existing League positions which apply to the impact of growth, regional planning and land use of public services and resources.

The proposal for year two is an examination of League positions relating to the assurance of quality educational personnel. Should the delegates vote the proposed program, emphasis will be on review and combining existing League positions for action in the two areas. Action on other areas of League concern will continue as usual.

Taoist empowerment workshops

Wah Lum King Fu Academy of Cohasset will present two special Taoist empowerment workshops May 18 and 19 at the academy on Rt. 3A.

Gunther Weil, a psychotherapist and teacher of body/mind integration, and Rylin Malone, a psychologist, will conduct the two day courses on Taoist Mediation: the Microcosmic Orbit and Iron Shirt Chi King Level I.

Dr. Weil works at the Turning Point Family Wellness Center in Watertown and Gloucester. Ms. Malone practices in Cambridge and Gloucester.

The mediation course will use a method that awakens and circulates life force (chi) through the primary acupuncture meridians. It is the foundation for healing and martial arts and is important in cultivating increased personal energy.

The Iron Shirt Chi King strengthens muscles, tendons and bones. It increases stamina and helps protect the body from unexpected injury.

For reservations or further information call (617) 383-6822.

Historical Society flea market

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual spring Flea Market Saturday, May 18 at the Society's headquarters house, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street.

Hours are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. A wide variety of items will be featured, from sporting goods to household wares, books, clothes, furniture, toys, and stereo equipment.

Among the other collectables to be featured will be the giant-sized posters from the South Shore Music Circus picturing artists who appeared there last summer. Games, toys, and artworks will be also be found among the large number of items donated to the Society for this occasion.

A table of home made baked foods and hot dogs will be available for refreshments.

The annual spring Flea Market is a fund raising venture by the Historical Society for the maintenance of its three museum buildings and for the support of its community programs.

Dealer's spaces are available for $10; please call Mrs. Parker at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Plan to arrive early for the best selection of pre-owned items.

Reading readiness tests

Parents of kindergarten students are invited to a discussion of the Reading Readiness tests administered recently. Christine Collins and Marie Price will meet with parents Monday, May 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the kindergarten area of the Osgood School.

Scoutmaster joins Eagle ceremony

Long time Scouter and Advancement Chairman of the Old Colony Council, BSA, Tom Turner of Forest Ave. witnessed the Court of Honor where David Behunin, 14, of Duxbury received Scouting's highest award for boys, that of Eagle.

Before a large group of members, family and friends the meeting was held at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Gardner Street in Hingham. Sponsored by the Church, Troop 110 meets regularly on Tuesday evening. The troop is made up of boys and leaders from surrounding towns on the South Shore. Alan Behunin, David's dad, is Scoutmaster.

For his Eagle project David planned and organized his troop in an extensive work project for the John Alden House and grounds, an historic building in Duxbury. David also has accumulated 26 merit badges.

Henry wins honors at competition

The New England Junior Olympic Synchronized Swimming Championships were held Sunday, May 5 at Clark University in Worcester, MA. The meet ran from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and had over 120 participants.

Annie Henry of Cohasset won the gold medal in the 11/12 solo event and also won a blue ribbon in the 11/12 figures. The meet was also the qualifying meet for the Bay State Games. Annie won a blue ribbon in the 12 and under figure portion of this event. Her high score also placed her ninth out of 56 swimmers in the 12 and up to college senior figures for the Games.

She will not have to repeat figures at the Bay State Games in July, but will perform her solo again and will also be in the team event.

The S. Shore. Y.M.C.A. team, which Annie swam with in Worcester, received a bronze medal in the 15-18 team event in the Junior Olympics.

Annual Y.M.C.A. Swim Show

The South Shore Y.M.C.A. in Quincy will present its annual swim show on the nights of May 14 and 15 (Tues. & Wed.) at 7:45 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the door and are $2.50.

The theme of the show is 'Women' and will include routines to the music of the "James Bond Theme", Overtures to "Gigi" and "Funny Girl", Michael Jackson's "Billie-Jean" and "The Girl Is Mine" and many more.

The show is directed by Carol Henry of Cohasset and has a cast of 50 synchronized swimmers ranging in age from 10 to 70. Annie Henry, a seventh grade student at Cohasset Jr. High School, will be swimming a solo and two team routines. Jennifer Martin of the eighth grade, Cohasset Jr. High will be in three team routines and Alison Crehan also of the eighth grade will be performing in a team routine.

Cohasset's spring prom campaign

Former All-Pro NFL lineman Walter Sweeney will be coming to Cohasset High School to speak to students in grades 10-12 about the dangers of alcohol and drug usage by teenagers. Walt, a former Cohasset High School student athlete, spent many years knocking heads for the San Diego Chargers and the Washington Redskins and now works in Public and Employee Relations for Telco Systems of Norwood.

Walter's presentation evolves around his own use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs. His story stresses to young people that alcohol and drug experimentation by young people can lead to devastating problems down the road, such as the ones he encountered.

In conjunction with the Walt Sweeney program, the Cohasset Social Service League and the Cohasset Committee for Drug Education have donated money to aid in the cause. Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset has donated four dozen "Drug Buster" t-shirts to be given out as prizes in an elementary and junior high school poster contest. Cohasset "Students Against Driving Drunk" bumper stickers, key rings and buttons, will be available for students. High school social studies classes will be sharing in the program discussing alcohol and drug abuse and its impact on the American family and society.

The Junior League of Boston recently presented to the fifth and sixth graders at the Deer Hill School a well-received three day puppet show entitled "Turning On - Turning Off". These programs are a part of Cohasset's ongoing health education program. The philosophy of the Health Education Department is one of prevention and mandates that all Cohasset Public School students receive competent health instruction from kindergarten through junior high school. Elective courses are available for high school students. Sequential and progressive alcohol and drug education are integral parts of the comprehensive health education curriculum and begin in the primary grades.

The Walt Sweeney presentation, which is taking place on Friday, May 10, from 11 a.m. to noon, is this year's kickoff to the annual prom campaign effort towards assuring fun and safe spring and summer teen activity.

The program was coordinated by a cooperative team which includes: Health Education Coordinator, Mike Gill; Town Health Agent, Joe Godzik; school administrators, teachers and student council members.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

MASSAGE THERAPY

Some people still have a popular misconception. They believe that chiropractic is a form of massage. Although sometimes used as an adjunct to chiropractic adjustments, massage is quite different. A person who is skilled in massage works with the soft tissues like muscles, fatty tissue and skin. A masseur or masseuse is trained in the art of kneading, slapping, rolling, pressing and stroking these soft tissues to enable the body's self-healing process to take place. It is possible that massage removes some nerve interference although it is not its major goal. Some chiropractors use massage in addition to adjustments. Others hire certified massage therapists to treat their patients.

Chiropractic offers a natural drugless approach to eliminating points of interference along the body's communication network, the spinal column. Thus, normal function resumes, Nature's natural healing instructions are transmitted and every point and organ of the body benefits from this natural approach to a total state of well-being. To learn more about how chiropractic can serve your needs, call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Our personal concern is your health. Tel. 383-1211, 383-1214.

Nostalgia

Memories of earlier May Party celebrations

A May Party featured the fashions and hats of the McDonald, McKay, Hunter, McLaughlin, James, Horan and Sullivan families.

The idea was hatched between my sister Ada and her best friend, Frannie Hughes. Ruthie (that's my best friend) and I were skating circles around them on the way home from school as they walked up Elm Street.

"Let's have a May party!"

"Great idea, Frannie, I'll ask my mother to help us. Who'll be the Queen and the King?"

My heart gave a leap.

"I think Myvanwy should be the Queen," Frannie said.

My heart sank. Myvanwy was my other best friend, the pretty girl from Wales, I knew better than to butt in and I was too hurt to speak, anyway.

Ada said, "Why don't we have two Queens and Kings? We'll ask Ruthie and her brothers Ray and Eddie."

Stung by their callousness, I skated home fast as my short legs would go. But by the time Ada got home I'd been mollified by Mama's comforting words. She was sure they'd ask me to lead the singing and the dancing because I knew all the words and the steps by heart.

The next few weeks were spent after our homework was done, in the absorbing pleasure of making bright colored tissue paper wreaths and crowns, hats and banners bedecked with flowers and streamers.

Each afternoon my sisters and I gathered around the square oak table in our kitchen; cut and curled paper petals with Mama's table knives. We stuck them together with paste she made from flour and water. It didn't taste or smell as good as the paste we had in school, but it worked. They boys' cocked hats we made by folding newspapers and covering them with tissue and rosettes.

The banners were made with barrel hoops which Papa nailed to the end of cut off broom-sticks. These we trimmed with long tissue streamers that wafted in the breeze. And the hours flew by.

At last the month of April was over and we were ready. Mama baked a big cake and let me help frost it so I wouldn't mind so much not being Queen.

"Here, dear, you may lick the bowl. Then go get dressed."

"Do I have to wear my long stockings?" I pleaded.

Mama sighed, "Yes, you do. It's not warm enough yet. Your clothes are laid out on your bed. Go now."

I mumbled something about what all the other kids would be wearing, but followed orders as usual. We knew just how far we could go with Mama.

As the children arrived Ada and Frannie lined us up on the brick sidewalk to march in twos. The boys at the end were entrusted with pulling the red wagon laden with sandwiches, jugs of lemonade and cookies and Mama's cake.

Our leaders gravely started the march up Main Street, walking backward, issuing orders and waving streamered batons that Papa had whittled.

Our hearts and lungs bursting with civic pride, we sang and chanted in unison. Passersby stopped to watch and listen. What starring roles we were playing! No one in our town was more important that day.

We shouted,

"Who are we? Who are we?

"We're the Yankees, don't you see?

"Are we in it, well I guess we are!

"May Party, May Party, rah, rah, rah!"

This was followed by piping high voices singing:

"My country tis of thee,

Sweet land on liberty,

Of thee I sing."

This was finished with a rousing "Let freedom ring!" and we were led deftly into:

"One, two, three, four.

Who are we for?

Charlie Shea! Hip, hip, hooray!"

Everybody knew Charlie Shea. He was in politics and gave out free ice cream at church lawn parties.

Then Lennie Flynn shocked everyone when he tried to give a solo and yelled,

"You out of town rats

Take off your hats

Before you come to

Our Town!"

Indignant Ada ran to his place in the line, rapped him sharply on the head with her baton and cried, "You just shut up, Lennie Flynn. I don't know why you ever came to this party!"

He stuck his face out at her, wrinkled his nose, and said, "Because my mother made me."

We had reached the Common where we saluted our flag and greeted the statues of Abraham Lincoln and a Civil War soldier.

At last we were allowed to break ranks and we raced to climb the cannons placed around the Memorial. We danced around our Maypole and played games until lunch time.

The paper trimmed red wagon was rapidly emptied and it was time to march home.

As we neared our street, Lenny sang lustily:

"Oh, say can you see Any bedbugs on me?"

Then he fled.

Ada walked down the line to me and handed over her baton.

"Doss, you lead us the rest of the way. Next year you'll be queen."

Puffed with importance, I stepped out in front of the column and cried,

"Forward, m-a-r-c-h!"

(Dorothy Squier writes about the way holidays were once celebrated on the South Shore. Ed.)

May science center programs

Blow the winter dust off your bicycles. The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell invites all ages from 10 up to join Jerry Flaherty, park naturalist, on a "bike hike" through Wompatuck Park on Saturday, May 18 from 1 to 3 p.m.

During this delightful excursion, Jerry will relate stories about the cultural and geological history of this area. He will identify the plant life and maybe you will flush some wild life. Be sure to dress in comfortable clothes and, if possible, bring binoculars. Meet at the Wompatuck Visitors Center at 1 p.m. Fee: $3 members; $4 non-membership. For further information, call 659-2559.

Exciting Programs

Space is still available in some of the exciting programs at the Science Center. Give the Center a call if you would like to: spend a day "Sketching" with the well-known artist and author, Clair Walker Leslie, on Wednesday, May 8 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.; take a "Whale Trip" from 8 am. to 2 on Saturday, May 19; learn the art of "Picture Making with Seaweed" on Tuesday, May 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; enroll in a "Super Special For Mothers" on Sunday, May 12 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. which includes a daisy corsage and wildflower walk; on Saturday, May 11, Chris Eaton from the N.E. Wildlife Center is bringing "All Kinds of Live Animals" to the Natural Science Center to introduce them to youngsters in Kindergarten through Grade 6. Call the Science Center at 659-2559 to register and for information.

Meet Summer Birds

Take some time to greet our spring and summer residents. "Bird Walk" with Beverly Litchfield, bird expert from the Science Center, on Thursday, May 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Bring a lunch and picnic on the beach. Be sure to bring binoculars and wear comfortable shoes and clothes. Fee: $3 members; $4 non-members. For further information, call 659-2559.

Chinese Gardens

Enjoy the color and excitement of Chinese gardens from the comfort of a chair, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Science Center. By the magic of a slide presentation, E. Dexter Davis, horticulturalist and teacher, will delight the eye with the beauty of these gardens. Discover the differences between Chinese and U.S. methods of planting and growing.

Are you aware of the ancient Chinese art of penjing which preceeded bonsai? Let Mr. Davis tell you about it. Homemade dessert and punch after show. Fee: $3 members; $4 non-members. For further information, call 659-2559. Pre-registration requested.

The Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Rte. 123, and is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Musicales headed by Cohasset woman

The annual Subscriber Luncheon of the Boston Morning Musicales was held Wednesday, May 1, at the Country Club, Brookline.

The guests were welcomed by Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr., Cohasset, Chairman of the Boston Morning Musicales and by members of her Executive Committee. After the luncheon, she introduced the guests of the head table, who were: Mr. Ron Brinn, Director of Alumni Relations at Tufts University, and Mrs. Maureen Hayes Fleming, Chairman of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy of Tufts University, for the benefit of which the Musicales have been held for 57 years.

Mrs. Neer spoke of the exciting plans for the 58th season and noted that next year the Musicales will be held on Thursday, instead of Wednesday, as in the past. The first program will be Thursday, November 14, 1985, and the artists will be the Rogeri Trio, consisting of piano, violin and cello. The Gleemen, an ensemble of early music, will perform December 12. This should be especially appropriate for the holiday season. Miss Lucy Shelton, noted soprano, will close the series on March 6, 1986.

Mrs. Neer, then congratulated the Advertising Committee for their outstanding work and especially Mrs. Frank J. Kenney of Weston, Chairman of the Advertising Committee for obtaining the most ads this past season. Mrs. John L. Armstrong of Lincoln was second and Mrs. Charles E. Wells of Belmont, third.

She then presented a check to Mr. Brinn for Tufts University, the proceeds of the Musicales for the 57th season. Since their inception well over $400,000 has been given to the school.

South Shore Hospital volunteers honored

Over 580 South Shore Hospital volunteers were honored for their service at a ceremony April 25 in observance of National Volunteer Week.

As a regional facility, South Shore Hospital is assisted by one of the largest volunteer programs of any hospital in Massachusetts.

The volunteers, representing South Shore area towns of Hanover, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke and Scituate, gave a total of 75,000 hours of service to the hospital last year, according to Claire O'Connor, director of volunteer services.

Ellen Wennberg of Weymouth, volunteer co-chairman of the hospital Gift Shop, was the top award recipient at a tea and awards ceremony held at the Old South Union Congregational Church in South Weymouth.

Hospital President William Clark, assisted by Barbara Hamer of Norwell, vice president of the Friends of South Shore Hospital and Terry Queenan of Braintree, volunteer statistician, presented Wennberg with a 15,000-hour pin, the highest award ever, for service donated over 27 years.

June Cowperthwait of Hingham was another volunteer honored for donating 7,000 hours of service to hospital patients over the past 16 years.

During this period, Mrs. Cowperthwait has generally donated two seven-hour days each week as coordinator of the admitting/patient information desk in the main lobby.

Volunteer Director O'Connor said the typical volunteer works five hours a day, once or twice a week. Volunteers help to transport flowers and mail, run errands for the staff, sit and talk with patients and manage the patient information desk, Gift Shop and Thrift Shop.

They also serve coffee and tea to patients' friends and relatives in surgical and intensive care waiting rooms, sing songs to perk up long term patients and install special "Lifeline" phone beepers in homes of certain patients.

Area town residents honored at the ceremony, with hours, included:

Cohasset: Mary Gleason, 100; Martha Douglas, 500.

Community Club presents 'Best of Friends'

Norwell's North River Community Club will present its spring production, "Best of Friends" on Friday and Saturday, May 17, 18, 24 and 25, and June 1, at 8 p.m.

A literate and witty comedy by James Elward, "Best of Friends" deals hilariously with the problems caused by the unexpected return of a long absent (and now famous) writer to his family — in the company of the pretty young thing he now wants to marry.

As Josie Connaught, Dorris Pizzotti of Norwell relishes the idea of being the widow of her famous author (and philanderer) husband, Archer Connaught, played by Bill Chouinard of Hanover.

Archer's daughter, Kate, played by Kathie Erickson of Quincy, is cool and bitter about his apparent death in a plane crash. In contrast, his son, Merrill, played by Sean Mahony of Norwell, jumps at the chance to write the official biography.

But then Archer turns up, alive after all, and squiring a sophisticated blonde, played by Gail Dunphy of Norwell, whom he hopes to marry.

But first a divorce is needed, and while his wife is seemingly willing, the only problem, she says, is that they were never legally married in the first place! After that, the complications multiply uproariously.

Also appearing in "Best of Friends" is Suzanne Tilden of Weymouth as Merrill's wife, Lib. Barry Cornwall of Marshfield plays Felix Hackaday, the MGM lawyer, sent to obtain the movie rights to Archer's story. Al Pizzotti of Norwell is Mr. Bedloe, a dapper gent, and a juggler when he's not "marrying" people.

"Best of Friends" is directed by Joe MacAlarney of Weymouth. The producer is Barry Cornwall.

The North River Community Club is at 513 River Street, Norwell. Widely-acclaimed for its fine theater, its seating is cabaret-style at intimate tables. Complimentary popcorn is served and a cash bar is available.

Tickets cost $6 and are available at "The Deli," Rte. 123, Norwell Center, next door to the Alewife Tavern.

Norwell Senior Citizens are invited to enjoy the dress rehearsal performance at no charge on Thursday, May 16 at 8 p.m.

Cohasset School briefs

Foreign language staffing

Superintendent Eugene Crowell recommended the Foreign Language Dept. staffing not be reduced as previously proposed. All agreed that the full program will continue with the same number of divisions. The budget will be $10,000 short, said Crowell, but good foreign language teachers are in short supply because of certification problems. A cutback could jeopardize the academic well-being of students.

In other committee business, member Barbara Bliss was appointed representative for the Curriculum Update Project;

—The committee accepted with deep regrets the resignations of June Simeone, instructional aide, and Diane Saleski, secretary, high school.

—The committee approved a one year maternity leave for Katherine Jarvis.

—The committee approved out-of-state travel for the High School Music Dept. to participate in the Heritage Days event. The jazz ensemble has not been included this year. Vice-chairman, Jack Langmaid objected, saying the jazz band is highly talented and has the greatest chance of being well-prepared. In response, Superintendent Eugene Crowell said that he will see Mr. Marks from the Music Dept. in an effort for a last minute change.

Nutrition grant approved

Superintendent Eugene Crowell announced the acceptance of a nutritional education grant for the amount of $3000 to be awarded to Cohasset High School over the following year.

The grant will fund an education and training program called "Spotlighting Nutrition" which will train 24 teachers and reach 725 students. Teachers will receive 36 hours of instruction in basic nutrition and relationship of proper nutrition to good health.

The three-credit college level course, requires participants to complete a classroom project, a mid-term, and a final. Implementation of projects into the various curriculum areas during Child Nutrition Week will enable teachers to transfer nutrition information to students. Personal knowledge gained will be reflected in better faculty well-being and attendance.

Basic skills above average

At Monday night's school committee meeting, superintendent Eugene Crowell shared a letter from Commissioner of Education John Lawson, acknowledging 1983/84 high level basic skills.

In the letter Comm. Lawson stated the following:

"An analysis of districts using the state tests at the secondary level has shown that your district's minimum standards and passing percentages in mathematics were both significantly above the state average. This combination of high standards and high achievement demonstrates your commitment to basic skills, and I am proud to commend you on an important job well done.

Committee member Diana Kornet added that Asst. Supt. Steve Hart did an excellent job coordinating the Basic Skills Program.

LWV against death penalty

"The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts has formally adopted a position opposing the death penalty," announced Susan Shaer, League President, at the conclusion of a year-long study of capital punishment. "The consensus from local Leagues was very clear," stated Ms. Shaer, "over two-thirds of the Leagues reporting came to the conclusion that the League of Women Voters should oppose the death penalty."

The League believes that while such a penalty allows us, as a society, to express our outrage, a history of the imposition of the death penalty in the United States does not offer any other supporting argument.

"Doran & Mason gave us $5.00 just to review our homeowner's policy with them," reported Linda Bertino of Hanson.

"We found we could increase the insurance and broaden the coverage on our house, get replacement cost coverage for contents — and save money, too," the Bertinos said.

Doran & Mason took time to understand Linda and Lance Bertino's needs and tailored a new homeowner's policy to meet them. There are no shortcomings to surprise them later.

"We bought exactly the coverages we wanted, we're saving a lot and we got $5.00 for doing it. How can you beat that?" Linda asked.

Doran & Mason recently checked out insurance policies for 100 homeowners. 64 discovered they didn't have the coverage they had thought they had. In 93 comparisons, Doran & Mason produced savings averaging $61.00 per year.

If you could use a crisp, new $5.00 bill, fill out our request form. It'll be worth at least five dollars to you — maybe ten. If your present coverage fully satisfies your objectives and Doran & Mason can't save you money on that coverage, we'll give you a crisp, new $10.00 bill.

But the best feature could be your getting the homeowner's coverage you want and a chance to save money on that.

You can't lose! You can only win! Send us your request now!

YES! I'd like to receive a crisp, new $5.00 bill and find out if my homeowner's insurance will do everything I think it will. I undersfand that it's Doran & Mason's way of thanking me for allowing them to compare my policy with policies offered by companies they represent and that I will not be further obligated in any way. I also understand that I may qualify to receive a $10.00 bill as described above, and that the comparison requires at least fifteen minutes, at my house or a mutually convenient location.

Area educators balk at state education aid plan

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

A group of about forty South Shore educators aired hefty complaints about the Commonwealth's proposed $550 million education reform bill, at a meeting with state officials last week.

Though opinions conflicted as to how small, suburban, middle class communities would be affected most by the pending legislation, the educators agreed it would probably act as more of a hindrance than as a help to them.

About 18 school superintendents, along with administrators and teachers, came from as far as Milton and Plymouth to discuss the latest draft of the bill, which passed a House vote last week and is now being reviewed by the Senate.

The meeting was requested and sponsored by the Hingham School Department, which scheduled the get-together as a prelude to a regular meeting of Lighthouse superintendents from more than a dozen South Shore Communities.

Gov. Michael Dukakis' education advisor, Gerard Indelicato and House Education Committee Chairman Rep. Nicholas Paleologos (D-Woburn) said several meetings of state and local officials are currently being held to explain the latest version of the bill.

They defended the legislation as being an overall sound package, but told the educators that before the draft reaches the Governor's desk, the educators' concerns will have been addressed.

The measures generating the most concern at the meeting dealt with the state providing $104 million for increasing teachers' salaries, giving extra educational aid to poorer communities and creating local councils in each school.

The councils would be made up of teachers, parents, students and administrators impowered with the ability to distribute state financial aid to their schools.

The bill also proposes an increase in minimum graduation standards and skills testing for both students and certifying teachers.

Superintendent Robert Fox of Hanover said he felt the bill put too much emphasis on improving basic academic skills, while doing very little to measure the progress of high achievers, many of whom are competing for placements in top-flight colleges.

"What would be done for the top five percent of our students? We need to know if the top kids are stretching," Fox said.

A handful of superintendents were concerned that if their community maintained the per-student expenditure required by the state, it would be cut off from even the most standard subsidies.

As the legislation now reads, communities with per-pupil expenditures of less than 85 percent of the state average would receive state grants to bring them one-sixth of the way to the 85 percent figure.

The superintendents complained that no protection exists in the legislation for communities, which are currently meeting the state's requirements by spending a disproportionate amount of their budgets on education.

Assistant superintendent Robert Novelli of Hingham said that his school district was in danger of losing more than $1 million by 1990, if the state intends to phase out general financial aid to schools under Chapter 70.

Paleologos said, "The thrust of the aid package is to give everyone something, but to give more to those districts that need it. What ever Chapter 70 money is siphoned away, have faith it will get back to you in another form."

Superintendent Richard Charlton of Hull said he was not comfortable with the rule that a school district must maintain a level of spending from year to year, in order to be elgible for state aid programs. He wanted to know what would happen if legitimate reasons for cutting a budget arose.

Paleologos said he was aware that Charlton's point needed to be addressed.

Superintendent John Monbouquette of Braintree was supported by many of his peers, when he charged that local school improvement councils will destroy the autonomy of school committees.

A council would usually consist of three teachers, three parents, the school's principal and a school committee member. At high schools, a male and female student would join the council.

They would control a special pool of state money within each school. The aid would be issued at the rate of $12 per student for the first year, $26 per student for the second year and $40 per student for the third year after the bill's enactment.

Even though a school committee can overrule a council decision with a 4/5ths majority vote, Monbouquette said he felt it was unlikey that a committee would want to conflict with a vote made by a local neighborhood group.

Paleologos said the legislature was putting it's trust in a grassroots organization being able to spend the aid wisely.

He added that the amount of money issued to the councils is only 3/10ths of one percent of the aid package, and the committees would still have control over the spending of their districts' town-approved budgets.

He said that the present draft was the result of two years of struggling to iron out conflicts without antagonizing teachers, school administrators or taxpayers.

Sen. William Golden (D-Norfolk-Plymouth) arrived near the end of the session. He quickly reviewed some of his reservations about the bill, many which were in agreement with the educators' concerns, and said he feels the Senate will work hard to make improvements.

Golden said, "This is a delicate balance people are trying to achieve. We're not going to like all of it. But we want to see if we like enough in it, to show this is the best we can do."

James Tringale appointed to Minot's Ledge

James Tringale

James J. Tringale, a South Shore Professional Photographer, has been appointed chairman of the Minot's Ledge Chapter, Ducks Unlimited, the world's largest waterfowl conservation organization.

In his volunteer position, James Tringale will act as a liaison with local conservation groups and governmental organizations and will help develop fund-raising events within the South Shore area.

"James Tringale represents the secret of Ducks Unlimited's success," says Dale Whitesell, executive vice president of DU. "Area chairmen serve as important links in the organization. Without them, Ducks Unlimited could not be successful."

For nearly 50 years, Ducks Unlimited has been helping to conserve wetlands in North America. The greatest majority of its funds come from membership dinners throughout the country.

Spring concert May 16

The Deer Hill School Spring Concert will be held Thursday evening, May 16, at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium.

There will be performances by two different bands and two different choruses. The bands are under the direction of Ruth Dalbeck. John MacInnis will be directing the choruses. Admission is free.
Boston.

Teacher invited to Tanglewood

John MacInnis, vocal music teacher at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, recently auditioned and was accepted to sing with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus is the official chorus of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The chorus performs at Symphony Hall during the winter season and out at Tanglewood in Lenox, MA, during the summer.

MacInnis sings tenor in the chorus. Among the works he will be performing this summer are Handel's 'Messiah' and the 'St. Matthew Passion' by J.S. Bach.

Author to visit Osgood

Noted children's author Marc Brown will visit the Joseph Osgood School Friday, May 17. In a special program co-sponsored by the Friends of the Library and the PSO, Brown will describe the process of making a book, using slides of his family, home, and studio in Hingham, to reveal how he develops his story ideas and characters.

The audience will be encouraged to participate in the creative process as Brown draws a creature from space using suggestions from the children.

Although his books are geared to children in grades one to three, his humor appeals to both younger and older readers. The favorite "Arthur" series includes several holiday themes, as well as "Arthur Goes to Camp," "Arthur's Eyes," and "Arthur's Nose." "Perfect Pigs," "One Two Three," "Wings on Things," "Dinosaurs, Beware," "The True Francine" (Arthur's friend who demanded her own book), and "Bionic Bunny Show," co-authored with his wife Laurene, are among the many books Brown has written and illustrated.

Childen's librarians JoAnne Mitchell and Marilyn Pope have arranged a display of these books at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for young readers to discover Arthur, Francine, and Friends.

Jazz dance workshop

The METCO program will be sponsoring an after school jazz dance workshop at the Deer Hill School Mondays and Thursdays, from 3 to 4 p.m. May 13 through June 13.

Eighteen fourth, fifth and sixth grade METCO and resident students have been chosen to participate. Instruction will be provided by Ms. Patty Rayburg from the Danny Sloan Dance Company of

PSO annual meeting

Remember those PTA meetings your mother attended every month at your school back in the fifties . . . ? When was the last time you went to a meeting to discuss your child's education . . . ? If your answer to the second question is a vague 'can't remember,' here's your opportunity to pay Mom back for all her care and concern and start looking after the next generation.

The Parent School Organization (PSO) will hold its annual meeting and election of officers on Thursday, May 23 at 7 p.m. in the new study hall at Cohasset High School.

After a brief business meeting, parents, teachers, and administrators are invited to sit back and relax and watch their hosts' "home movies," actually a tightly edited thirty minute video of all the exciting and innovative activities and events going on in our three schools, from the drama club to the state champion basketball teams, from Syma to the Byrd's Nest, from guest lectures to handicapped awareness--a lot of which the PSO has had a hand in and wants to make parents aware, interested, and, it is hoped, involved.

Plan to attend--it promises to be a fun and informative way to show your interest in the schools and your parent school organization (remember Mom . . .)!

There were problems but no transit solutions in 1977

(Believe it or not, area residents were reading about the same transportation problems in 1977. Here is a reprint of the story which appeared in the Feb. 3, 1977 edition of The Mirror*, entitled "No Pat Answers to Commuter Woes")*

Secretary of Transportation Frederick P. Salvucci told a Hingham meeting last week that, aside from a projected May, 1979, extension of Red Line rapid transit service to South Braintree, "bits and pieces is the best we can do" in combating the short-range transportation problem of the South Shore.

Despite the projection that 22,000 patrons may be served by the Red Line extension, Salvucci gloomily conceded that, "In terms of major relief to the transportation problems of the South Shore, the future is not lots better than the present."

He, however, added, "Nothing is going to solve all the problems, but we should be reasonably satisfied that we are doing all we can."

There were some bright "bits and pieces" in Salvucci's outline of transportation alternatives.

"The commuter boat is real," he said, "and has a chance of being funded. We have a new administration in Washington which should be more receptive to the plan. I'm fairly optimistic for another try for funding."

Salvucci cautioned, however, that "It will be a nice way for some people to travel, but it is not going to carry significant numbers of people."

Addressing long-range transportation alternatives, the state secretary of transportation said his office is exploring the possibility of reactivating the old Greenbush railroad line. Estimating that such an enterprise would cost between $65 and $70 million, he hinted that reactivation might be accomplished with less money. But, he added a cautionary note, "I don't want people to think that we can get commuter rail service on Greenbush soon. If it happens, it won't happen tomorrow morning. The Red Line extension project was begun 10-15 years ago," he said.

He added that the prospects for greater traffic congestion on the Southeast Expressway loom darkly on this summer's horizon.

"The bridge decks are badly in need of repair. We have deferred that repair work until the Red Line extension goes into effect, but one project will go into effect," he said.

That project, which will begin May 15, is the repair of the viaducts near Boston City Hospital and the city incinerator. Because of that construction, traffic will be re-routed to service roads in that area, but it will be five lanes of traffic being re-routed onto a four lane road.

The transportation department will try to minimize the inconvenience that situation will undoubtedly produce by utilizing the diamond lane for car pools in an effort to place more people in fewer cars.

In response to criticism of poor service on the "T" as well as few parking places for commuters, Salvucci agreed that "service is a problem." He added that, with the addition of the South Quincy and South Braintree stations, will come a total of 3,000 parking spaces. Capital grants have been secured to either replace or rebuild the entire fleet of rail cars.

Citing a line of figures, John O'Grady of Hingham challenged Salvucci. "I don't see where three or four more miles of track will help a system which costs four times as much as any comparable rail system in America. That's a scandal and a disgrace."

He particularly blamed the salaries which MBTA employees receive as "exhorbitant."

Salvucci countered that the sslaries of "T" employees are the result of the collective bargaining process. He admitted that the MBTA management over the years has given away more than its share at the bargaining table. He pointed, however, to the strides "T" management has made over the past two years under the direction of Robert Kiley. "You won't see much given away at the bargaining table under Bob Kiley," he said.

O'Grady, at the request of State Senator Allan McKinnon (D-Weymouth), proposed a solution to the "T" personnel costs. O'Grady suggested that cutting back the number of guards on the rapid transit trains would result in a large savings.

Martha Reardon, transportation specialist for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, asked Salvucci what South Shore residents who could only approach the diamond lane at the Neponset bottleneck would do.

Prefacing his response with the observation that "I don't have any magic powers," Salvucci said, "There will be some increase in MBTA service, and private bus service about what we have now. We will try to add to that with the spring "T" schedule, but no matter what we try to do the perception will be that things are worse."

He added that the search for fringe parking areas is on-going. He admitted to some difficulty working out arrangements with some shopping center operators for lot space.

Reacting to criticism that his office was not sufficiently concerned with the transportation problems of the South Shore, Salvucci said, "There is a high degree of consciousness in state government about the problems."

He supported that contention.

"A fair amount of money has been spent in this area to improve transportation. The Red Line, which is fashionable down here to knock, is the best and most modern line in the system. It is our hope, but it is no panacea."

"We are facing lots of limits, limits to physical space, and more housing demands more transportation. There really is a limit to how much more we can expand. Look at Rte. 228. There is not an area along there where people would tolerate expanding that road because it would cut through the very environment that people moved down here to enjoy. The realistic thing for the communities here to do is to adopt growth policies in each town."

Eric Swider, executive vice president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, facetiously twitted Salvucci, saying, "The poor transportation system has been a boon to the South Shore. We get calls daily from people who are fed up with the rush hour and want to move their businesses to the South Shore.

After repeated references to the unfair test given to the commuter boat concept by the state transportation department, including a statement which opened the meeting by Sen. McKinnon, Salvucci said, "As I have said throughout this meeting, the water is real; it's nice; it's a great way to get to work. It will not significantly help the problem on the Southeast Expressway. I feel confident we will get money for a multi-purpose proposal, tying environmental programs into our grant request. That really attracts the attention of the Feds."

Plans made for art festival

Come celebrate with the South Shore Art Center the 30th anniversary of its summer arts festival, a three-day celebration bringing together the visual arts with the performing arts.

During the last weekend in June, the Cohasset Common will come alive with all the activities of the festival. The raising of the brightly striped tents will mark the beginning of the festival on June 28 and will continue through June 30.

This summer's festival will include juried art shows, a jazz concert, a mime performance, artist demonstrations, a dance troupe, children's activities, and a champagne preview of festival winners.

Artists wishing to enter their works in the juried shows are ask to bring the work to the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset on Friday, June 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Saturday, June 8 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Juried shows will be selected in painting (oil and acrylic), watercolor, graphics, photography (black and white and color) and sculpture 3D. Awards of $200 will be given for the best in each category.

Jurors for the festival are George Nick, professor of art at Massachusetts College of Art, who exhibits at the Tibor DeNagy Gallery in New York and the Harkus Gallery in Boston; John Arthur, art consultant, freelance curator and author of seleveral books on realism; and Catherine Mayes, abstract painter and printmaker whose studio is in Fort Point Channel.

Jurors for the photography are Jean Caslin, assistant director of the Photographic Resource Center in Boston who teaches History of Photography at Boston University and the University of Massachusetts, Boston; and Steve Nelson, award winning photographer whose most recent exhibit was at the South Shore Art Center and a commercial advertising photographer in Boston.

All works must be original and not previously exhibited in the festival, and must be framed securely and wired for hanging. Scuplture must have a stand.

Works not accepted by the jury must be picked up from the South Shore Art Center on Friday, June 14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, June 15 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Festival winners will be announced at champagne preview at the Oaks, corporate offices of Yankee Oil and Gas, on Thursday, June 27, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The preview is for all patrons, sponsors and benefactors of the festival.

For a detailed brochure on entries for the juried arts exhibits, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Habitat plans for low income housing

By Charlotte Carney

Monday, May 6, a group of concerned people met at the United Church of Christ, 460 Main Street in Norwell to organize a South Shore area affiliate of Habitat for Humanity, Inc.

Habitat for Humanity, Inc., is an ecumenical, non profit organization, dedicated to building or renovating decent low cost homes for people who could not otherwise afford to build them. The homes, built primarily with volunteer labor and contributions are then sold at cost and financed via a non-interest mortgage.

This new affiliation, and all other affiliations of Habitat for Humanity, are self-governed and independently financed, but continue to maintain the criteria set by the group's original concepts.

Although Habitat for Humanity is only nine years-old, its dramatic success has caused it to expand to 89 affiliates in the United States, and has sponsored projects in 11 countries overseas. Over a thousand homes have been built through the efforts of many involved with the organization.

Ron Yates, president of Habitat for Humanity Northeast, was the featured speaker. His significant experience working with other Habitat's was solicitated to help focus and inform the group.

Yates explained that the primary objective in starting an affiliate Habitat, "is to spread the word," "getting yourselves known" and touching all available bases.

Yates went on to outline specifics, that the group should follow standard procedures when formulating the project.

It was suggested by Mrs. Barbara Yates of the Habitat for Humanity Northeast, that a steering committee be formed to help organize and publicize the group's intent before the nominations of a Board of Directors was made.

The Steering Committee would be a catalyst to "spread the word," and present the Habitat's story, so that a broad scope of people and talents would be attracted to this worthy cause.

According to Dave Clarke of Norwell and George Swick of Scituate, the idea to start a Habitat was initiated when the Director of the Main Spring temporary shelter in Brockton contacted Rev. David Norling of the United Church of Christ. During the Lenten Season he made a plea from the pulpit about the shelter.

As always, the socially conscious congregation of the U.C.C. Church responded with a study group about the homeless and housing needs in our communities. The group felt that they could make the most impact with the Habitat for Humanity program, and began to take positive steps to start a local affiliate of the program in the South Shore area.

The perspective sites for the program are Brockton and Plymouth, but the area's interest needs will have to be evaluated before a definite decision can be made.

Once a site has been designated a family selection will be made, a building committee will be formed, and the fundraising will begin.

Other Habitat programs in the state include those in Melrose, Lawrence, Lynn, Worcester and Boston.

It was suggested by Yates, that a visit to Worcester, a model project, and a day of work on the program would be an invaluable experience.

A Habitat for Humanity project is a way in which local residents regardless of race or religion can work together and create a united effort and improve their community, he noted.

A broad scope of talents and abilities will be needed to help in the success of this endeavor.

Help is needed in all areas: fundraising, publicity, finance, legal matters, municipal relations, community organization contacts, construction and electrical skills, etc.

Anyone who is interested in becoming involved should call the United Church of Christ, 659-2887, to find out where their particular talents can be utilized.

Tour of two Cohasset historical sites

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Cohasset Historical Society, will sponsor a special pre-season guided tour of the Society's two historical museums on Elm Street, Cohasset Center, on Friday morning, May 24 at 11 a.m.

Residents of Cohasset and the South Shore may register with the Recreation Department to see the following Society museum buildings:

1. The Maritime Museum constructed in the 1700's. Formerly a ship chandlery for Cohasset fishing schooner fleets, this museum portrays the town's "Age of Sail" which lasted two centuries. Here can be found relics of mackerel fishing days and "deep sea" foreign trade once the mainstay of Cohasset's economy.

Models, shipwreck relics, paintings and prints, and items brought home by the town's seafarers can be seen. The story of the first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is told in artifacts and pictures. Beautifully crafted models of square riggers such as the clippers "Great Republic" and "James Baines" (the original built at Donald McKay's East Boston shipyard) are on display, as well as a sailor's model of the ship "Tecumseh" upon which he sailed. The Maritime Museum's second floor contains a general collection of artifacts from old Cohasset, ranging from stone tools of the Quonahassit Indians to cordwainer's equipment of the 19th century.

2. The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of one of Cohasset's seafaring families for more than a century. Exhibited here are home furnishings and art-work of 19th century Cohasset, collected from many of the old homes of the town. An early Cohasset home is recreated in this unspoiled early house.

Both of these buildings will be open for the May 24 museum tour. Call the Recreation Dept. at 383-6791 for reservations.

Beautiful, functional stylings to brighten your home and spirits.

There's the soft look of elegant draperies with intricate swags or padded cornices. The popular layered look combining fabric pleated shades with overdraperies. The new 1/2" wide micro blind or verticals with woven fabric louvers or gorgeous Austrian or Roman shades. And much more

Which way will you vote?

BALLOT	YES	NO
Do you want to beat our inflation with a quality investment?
Shouldn't your shelter money be building up equity rather than just leaving your pocket as rent?
Could you use the big, big tax advantages of homeownership?
Would your family spend more time together if you owned your own home?
Are your cramped now, looking for bigger quarters?
Are you looking for new, low-cost ways to finance a home?
Would you want to participate in community affairs through homeownership?

A son's inspiration creates a lyrical message

By Jane Lane

Watching a son struggle against a learning disability is a constant battle in the heart of his mother. She hopes for him, cries for him, and encourages him.

For Charlotte Carney of Hingham, these deep feelings of desperation, courage and love are best phrased in the most intimate expression of her music.

Her son Aaron suffered brain damage after birth when he stopped breathing while battling a chronic lung disease. Now 13, Aaron is learning past all expectations, and is currently enrolled at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset.

Feelings of pride for Aaron, and gratitude toward the teachers of Hingham's South School and Cohasset's Deer Hill, convinced Charlotte to begin a new work. This song, she decided, would inspire those who work with mentally disabled kids, and those who are unfamiliar with their work.

"We Are Winners," is a composition by Carney which rejoices in the accomplishments of children once considered unreachable, and serves to remind others that these kids are capable of helping themselves.

"It's an 'up' song," she says. "I wanted to tell people, especially in Massachusetts, that they have done outstanding things for handicapped people. Since we moved to Hingham a couple of years ago, I'm amazed at Aaron's progress."

Blessed are those who gave the time to set us free when the world was blind.

That it took about six weeks to compose, has led Carney on an exciting, but hectic journey. She began to write the lyrics, but was stumped by its direction. It was about that time, when she literally stumbled across a poem written last year for the Special Olympics by Maria Plante of Cohasset. One line within that poem, "but we proved them wrong when our time came," provided the lyricist with the motivation she needed to complete her song.

Charlotte Carney

In fact, that line was included in the final draft of her song, and Carney credits Plante with co-authoring the tune.

"I just needed to write to express how I felt about these kids, where they are today, and the opportunities they have for the future," she adds. These kids are the learning disabled and handicapped students who have just participated in the county Special Olympics competition, and perhaps may be headed to the state games this June.

That is the journey Carney is about to undertake. Last week, after performing the song to about 200 Special Olympians and their families in Brockton, Carney received a formal invitation to open the ceremonies at the state competition this summer.

Plante, who is an active member of the state board overseeing the Special Olympic games, brought a tape of the song with her to a meeting last week. Friday she reported back with the news that Carney would be asked to perform it as the opening song to the official state games.

This is not a typical verse written by a typical housewife and mother. Carney, who is a professional musician, strives toward perfection in all her work. Once the song was composed, it was time to gather some competent musicians together and produce a tape within a recording studio.

Somewhat new to this area, Carney is neverthe-

ANGLER'S CORNER by GEORGE DOUCETTE

The Dept. of Marine Fisheries has completed its annual stocking of the North River with Coho Salmon. As of this writing, 100,000 coho in the four to six inch class have been put in the river above the Indian Head Dam at Elm Street. These 15-month-old fish will begin to feed heavy in the ponds and streams heading to ocean. The fish will move down stream within the next three months and hopefully will be in the Atlantic and on their way before the Bluefish show up in July.

According to Ken Reback, biologist for the Marine Fisheries Dept., the biologist team that he headed last fall netted adult coho that had returned to spawn in the river, and he found 63 percent of the adult fish had scars caused by the Bluefish that they received when they left the river two years earlier. If this statistic is accurate, then several thousand fish or more are lost each year to schools of blues that attack the small coho as they enter the Atlantic. This figure, combined with low water conditions in the last three or four years, have made it difficult to get a good healthy run of 8 to 15 lb. fish from September to December each year.

Ken is optimistic when he says that this year's fry (small coho) look good and by putting them in now, the 100,000 plus stand a better chance of missing the Bluefish on the northerly migration.

Once the schools of coho begin to feed at sea, they quickly become the hunter rather than the hunted. A favorite food of the colo is the sand eel and a good place to find these is at the mouth of the North River. We all hope that next fall will see a strong return of the adult fish. For those who have caught these fighting game fish can attest to their excellent eating when caught in August and September in the North River.

For more information on the Coho Salmon, call or drop by at Adams Sports & Tackle, Rte. 139, Pembroke, MA 02359, 826-8341.

The Job Corps displaces poverty and fulfills promise

By Lois Martin

A program that gives its graduates bootstraps for a Commencement gift is on President Reagan's chopping block.

It's called the Job Corps. And I know something about it. Not because I've been part of the program as an enrollee or as a staff member, but because I was an adjunct to it, a supporter of it, and a first hand witness to what it did.

The Job Corps started as part of Lyndon Johnson's War on Poverty, the mid-60's. It continues in this state and others and young people from this area are in the Corps today.

Its goal was both immediate and visionary. The idea was to take young men and women with specific problems and possibilities, train them, educate them, employ them.

These young people were not to arrive at a Job Corps Camp with a criminal resume. It was understood there could be brushes with the law but not a first name relationship with the Police Department.

The enrollees come from homes where money is scarce and times may be tough in family relationships. They can't be drug abusers, though it's known the situation may have cropped up and might again. That's the way it is now. But the premise was these young people were worth salvaging, rather than surrendering to the streets. And the economic thesis behind its inception was that it was cheaper to train them now then to support them later, on welfare or in prison.

Poverty does not breed promise. The Job Corps took on the responsibility for providing bootstraps where there were none.

Flatwoods Job Corps is in Coeburn, Virginia. That's where I came to understand the program. Indeed I was supported by the Job Corps for about 17 years, though that is no longer the case.

I still, however, support the Job Corps.

When those boys arrived at that camp in 1965, they had a lot in common with the staff and their families. We were all new to the area, out of familiar territory, some of us having switched cultures as well as environs. And a few of us even talked funny to the Appalachian ear.

We were homesick and grateful for a community that evolved through a new job.

So it was routine to go there Sundays for dinner. The wives would meet the young men, who were as responsive to a courteous and interested 'hello' as we were. Further they deeply missed their homes, no matter what condition those had been. And most they missed their little brothers and sisters.

So while we visited among ourselves and them, they played ball with the many tiny kids who accepted them as children are wont to do.

I got to know many of the boys. We'd invite newcomers to the house for dinner knowing they needed family and natural caring.

And there was "Jim." He had told me on his first day at the camp about his mother, how she looked like Elizabeth Taylor, loved him dearly and was heartbroken to have him leave. I can't bring myself even now to use his real name, just in case he could somehow be embarrassed.

Jim was from a northeastern state. And the truth, which evolved after his routine discussion and medical examination was far different from what the 17-year old had told me.

He did have a mother, a sister, and a stepfather. He also had scars from wire coat hangers on his back. Many of them. He had been abused consistently. He was of average intelligence. He had no criminal record, and no one giving a damn till then.

Jim with others was invited to my house for Sunday dinner. I fried three large chickens in an effort to meet the appetites of the guests.

Jim came in a fresh white oxford shirt in relatively new conditon. He had traded his singular possession to look nice when he came to my house. Gone was his small transistor radio. But in exchange Jim had a handsome reflection in the camp mirror and a new beginning of respectability.

The fried chicken never stood a chance but Jim did.

We of course developed friends in the community as well as at the camp. Among them were Sally and Paul from Pennsylvania. Paul was in management at a local plant that manufactured coal mining equipment. We'd joked about his Republican background and ours, and this Democratic 'give away.' . . . Until, until the night Paul was asked to speak to the young men at a dinner at the Job Corps camp.

It was graduation night. It was special. It was turnaround time for Paul.

As they had trained, they had academic education. It was not unusual for them at 16 to have third grade reading skills. Those were corrected, skills were taught, and inherent in the program were other basic necessities, dealing with money, dealing with others, dealing with themselves.

On graduation, the graduate spoke. One young man rose to speak, something he had not done to a formal gathering before. He was black, from Chicago, dressed in sport jacket and tie, he could have been a Marvin Hagler or a Martin Luther King or a kid in the New York subway incident.

Instead he was himself, with poise and pride.

He told about how during his first weeks of camp, they had posted the picture of the man responsible for discipline, guidance and training on the wall. They'd thrown darts at that man's photo with vengeful glee.

That, he said, changed. Because the same man who had imposed self-respecting authority on those young men, had given them what had been imposed, self respect.

"For the first time in my life," said the 200 pound, six footer, "someone cared enough about me to make me care about myself. He proved to me that I had some value and some responsibility and that I could handle it."

He was moved, we were moved. And Paul was moved nearly to tears and clearly from his 'you're-born-with-your-bootstraps philosophy.

The thing is, the Job Corps is worth it. Over and over again I saw it develop people into the best of themselves that they had never known existed.

The New York Times in an editorial to preserve the Job Corps said it is "human salvage . . . a hallmark of a humane society."

I didn't know the Times knew that. I'm grateful they did. They proved themselves apprised.

And for young men like Jim I'm always on the side of the Job Corps, because that puts me beside young men and women who desrve to have bootstraps.

Politicus

by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A critical look at 'Salvucci's Subway'

You kick around the State House awhile and you begin to get a sense of who is in whose tank, that is to say which politicians permit themselves to be the mouthpiece of which other politicians and special interests. Here's one example . . . with others to follow as a regular feature of this column . . .

How do you tell if your legislator is an apparatchik in the Dukakis political organization? Simple. He will say a speech along the following lines: "I'm Rep. Blowhard from Alford, pop. 300, on the New York border, and the first step in solving my constituents' transportation emergency is to depress the Central Artery in Boston!" That's a speech your reporter has heard all over Massachusetts.

You see, depressing the Central Artery is a pet project of Transportation Secretary Frederick Salvucci, and legislators who are slugs in the Dukakis organization are dutifully slugging away for "Salvucci's subway." "Dutifully," that is, to the Administration, not to their constituents. And sad to say, among our South Shore legislators are found some of those slugs . . . ye shall know them by their press releases.

I say this because the question of the depression of the Central Artery, which is the real subject of this column, needs nothing so much as an objective appraisal, and as long as suburban legislators are taking a fall for "Salvucci's subway," it will never get an objective appraisal.

The story of "Salvucci's subway" begins with the construction of an elevated Central Artery through the heart of Boston in the 1950's. This project, typical of the time, was bad for Boston from day one. It cut off historic Boston from its historic waterfront. Furthermore, like the contemporaneous Rtes. 128 and 3, it was obsolete the day it opened. Removing it, nearly everyone agrees, would be a good thing for Boston.

That is what Sec. Salvucci believes, and in his two terms in office he has had no fonder wish than to be the bureaucrat who gets the thing torn down. The problem is that for Salvucci the wish has become father to the thought. He has commissioned a number of putatively objective studies on the subject, the real objective of which has not been to be objective, but rather to find a way — any way —to justify that which in his heart Sec. Salvucci has wanted to do for as long as he can remember.

Naturally, the studies he has commissioned found the "justification" they were looking for. The argument they make is this: Since all roads lead to Boston (there's of course enormous egomania in that assumption), if the Artery is not rebuilt, the roads that feed into it will cause it to become an 18-hour-per-day traffic jam by 1995. Therefore, suburban legislators cannot be concerned with such petty parochial matters as Rtes. 3, 53, 18, 139, or commuter rail. None of those projects, so the argument goes, will mean a thing unless first the Central Artery is rebuilt. Thus, suburban legislators are gulled into going along with "Salvucci's subway" as the only way to really represent their districts.

The pathetic thing is the number of legislators who should know better who fall for this line. It would be as though Frank Hynes, Marshfield's extremely able legislator, tried to get his colleagues to back improvements in the Marshfield/Pembroke exit on Rte. 3 on the ground that it was vital for Boston . . . and the Boston delegation actually bought it.

So the first thing we need to get straight is whose pig would be greased and whose ox gored by depressing the Central Artery. "Salvucci's subway" would indeed be good for Boston, but it would not particularly benefit the rest of us. In fact it would be bad for most of the rest of the state, because the $4 billion it would probably cost would eat up our transportation construction dollars till the year 2000. There, then, would go commuter rail, a better Rte. 3, 44, 25, 2, and so forth.

In short, if the Central Artery gets depressed as Sec. Salvucci proposes, the worthy transportaion projects of all the rest of Massachustts will be sacrificed to the power and egomania of Boston. Sec. Salvucci will never see that, which is why it is so important for our legislators not to rubber stamp his ideas just because politics makes them bedfellows of the same popular governor.

There is probably quite a bit of merit to the traffic projections with which Salvucci tries to justify "Salvucci's subway." Already the Central Artery is jammed a good portion of the working day. But because of his nearsightedness on the subject, Salvucci has never seriously considered an alternative. If he had applied his capable and uncongested brain to the subject, he might have come up with ideas such as these:

(1) The $2 billion construction of a third harbor tunnel with direct access to Rte. 3 south and the Massachusetts Turnpike west would ease Central Artery traffic considerably, and it would answer the crucial economic imperative of providing easy airport access to the southern and western suburbs.

(2) The widening of Rte. 128 between Rte. 95-south in Canton and Rte. 95-north in Beverly would help divert through north-south traffic from Boston altogether, and would answer a second important economic imperative: widening Rte. 128. Another "help," which would cost a couple of thousand dollars in road signs, would be to reroute Interstate 95 between the Connecticut Turnpike and Amesbury, Massachusetts along what are now Rtes. 395, 290 and 495. There is no reason whatever for Maine-Florida truck traffic to be using the Central Artery in Boston.

(3) Once everything possible has been done to remove both through and airport traffic from the Central Artery, tear it down and replace it with a street. I mean an old-fashioned street-level street. Make it six lanes wide in each direction in order to handle the rush hour. But give it traffic lights so pedestrians can cross on the way from Quincy Market to the waterfront. Synchronize the lights to keep traffic moving.

Sound incredible? Second and Third Avenue alone handle about 30 percent of the north-south traffic in Manhattan every rush hour. They stay pretty busy for a couple of hours a couple of times a day, but then they become streets again. I'll wager such a plan, which like "Salvucci's subway," would remove the eyesore elevated Central Artery from historic Boston, would move the traffic about as well. I'll wager not spending $4 billion on it!

If the rest of the state were not in a state of chronic political genuflection to the city of Boston, such a plan, or a better one, would long since have been considered by state officials. Unfortunately, state officials sometimes think this is a "Bostonwealth," not a Commonwealth. When our local legislators get gulled into going along, that's exactly what it becomes.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

What has six pair of hands, three pair of eyes, heals herself when she is sick and can feed a family of six on a pound of hamburger? For all the nursing, care, cooking and chauffering mothers do, Sunday the 12th, is that very special day set aside for her. Merchants have been telling us for weeks of their expensive gifts, but a gift "from the kitchen," lovingly made and festively wrapped is sometimes more meaningful. The origins of this fudge are misty, but Virginia Henrich got the recipe from her sister, Martha Devine and having tasted it, I am sure that any mother with a sweet tooth would want to hide her gift away from the rest of the family. Virginia says making it is "cinchy" and here is her way of making

PEANUT BUTTER FUDGE

1 jar marshmallow fluff and
1 full cup of peanut butter, chunky or plain, mixed together in a large mixing bowl,
2 c. sugar
2/3 c. milk (half and half cream is creamier)

Cook sugar and milk to a soft ball in pan, stirring constantly. Add to the peanut butter and marshmallow fluff in the bowl. Whip these four ingredients with hand beater, watching closely as it sets up very fast. When it starts to thicken, put in a 11x7" pan that has been sprayed with Pam. If you like thicker squares, use an 8x10" pan. Refrigerate until ready to cut into squares.

* * *

One of the most meaningful tributes to a mother which I have been privileged to read was a letter written by the daughter of my girlhood friend, bridesmaid and confidante in the years to follow. She died this past month, having known for two years that she was terminally ill. The last note she wrote me enclosed a five-page letter from her daughter who reminisced about their years together, recalling special times they shared. It must surely have been my friend's most treasured possession. Another way to offer a meaningful gift on Mother's Day is to spend a little of your time in preparing a very special meal for her in return for all she has given you "from the kitchen." Carolyn Foley shares with us this

9" pastry shell, unbaked
2 c. light cream
1/3 c. each grated Swiss & Parmesan cheese
4 eggs
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Partially bake the shell in 400 oven for approx. 8 min. Chop spinach into bite-sized pieces. Combine remaining ingredients thoroughly. Place spinach in shell. Pour egg mixture over spinach. Bake in 350 oven for 30 min., or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve hot.

Sometimes "From the Kitchen" generates phone calls that are not your ordinary, run-of-the-mill conversations. What does one say when an Air Force Major General calls to say his lemon grapenut pudding has just curdled? My apologies to Steve if I seemed a little disconcerted as we hurriedly agreed that as the dinner hour was fast approaching, his only hope was to consign the pudding to the blender and if all else failed, opt for crackers and cheese for dessert that night. Coming up with the right answer is not always easy and perhaps our readers can come to the rescue as so many did when I wondered in print what a salt spoon is, as referred to in an old recipe from a 50-year-old cookbook. Now Jerry is wondering where they can take a lesson or two in order to utilize their new micro-wave oven to the fullest. Natalie tells of having to get their favorite cranberries in Boston, as they have searched the South Shore in vain for fresh ones at this time of year and frozen cranberries seem to be among the missing in frozen food sections. Phyll has been looking for frozen baby carrots about an inch long to make gingered carrots. While I was reading about carrots in the hopes of finding the recipe, I read that carrots are members of the parsley family, were first grown in the Arab countries and it wasn't until mid-18th century that the present-day yellow carrot superseded the original purple kind. All of which leads me to again remind you that it is our readers who contribute so very much to this column and your thoughts, as well as recipes, are always welcome.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

□ Casanova, the reputed great lover, was extremely ugly. He spent the last 13 years of his life as a librarian. (No offense to librarians.)

□ Adolph Hitler speaking: "A violently active, dominating, intrepid brutal youth—that is what I am after."

□ The late Prof. Lewis Terman of Stanford University, a psychologist who helped divise IQ (intelligence quotient) tests, listed the classifications of IQs as: Genius (above 140); Very Superior (120-140); Superior (110-120); Average (90-110); Dull (80-90); Borderline (70-90); Moron (50-70); Imbecile (25-50); Idiot (below 25).

□ Tact is the ability to describe others as they see themselves.

□ With income tax time approaching, I am reminded of a witticism you may have heard: People who complain about their income taxes are divided into two classes—men and women.

□ TV helps you get acquainted with a lot of new folks. Mostly repairmen. I might add that TV isn't replacing radio as fast as it is replacing homework.

□ Some anonymous sage noted that a woman flees from temptation, "but a man just crawls away from it in the cheerful hope that it may overtake him.

A son's inspiration . . .

less aware of the astronomical costs of recording a master tape. "I wanted to get in and out of that studio in the least amount of time," she says.

Listening to the final version of the song, one is mystified by the words, and enchanted by the beautiful voice and verses. It is an inspiring, cheerful, emotional tribute to her son and his classmates, their teachers and friends.

Mark Fitzpatrick served as engineer, producer, while playing acoustical guitar, lead acoustical guitar and bass. Steve Trefethen was drummer, and helped with the background vocals. Carney played acoustical guitar, lead and backup vocals.

The song was produced at Rainbow Sound studios in Manomet. Now that the state has selected Carney to perform the song this June , she hopes to gather enough money to go back into the studio "and make a bigger production of it."

Last week's performance before the county athletes in Brockton was an "amazing" event for Carney, who admits to being extroverted, exuberant "and too spontaneous."

They are useful characteristics when one is asked to perform under such conditions. Gathering her nerve to strum a guitar and sing into a microphone in the midst of a football field, Carney said she leaned into the mike, hoping that at least a portion of her accompaniment could be heard. As she neared the completion of her song, she detected wide smiles on the athletes and their friends and families who filled the stadium. At the song's conclusion, she waved and blew kisses to her appreciative audience, much to the chagrin of her daughter Jessica, 11. The South School student grimaced and moaned typically, "oh, mother."

"She doesn't know what to make of me," Carney says, laughing. Jessica is Aaron's best friend and "champion," according to her mother, and wouldn't miss a Special Olympics event.

While in the midst of re-recording the song, Carney is also working to produce a music video. to be shown on American Cablesystems community channels.

Cohasset Community Manager John Ronan is working with Carney, along with the Cohasset school audio-visual director John Packard. Students from the high school have been busy photographing scenes of the Special Olympics practices, featuring students from Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell and Hanover. These shots will be shown in conjunction with the song performed by Carney. That video will be shown until the state Special Olympics.

This is not the first time Carney has performed for the Special Olympics cause. When Charles and Charlotte Carney and their three children resided in Texas, she became involved in a similar way.

When asked by members of the parents' committee to sell hot dogs at the 1981 state event, Carney declined, saying, "but I'll write a song." She did, and the completed product was a touching, emotional ballad called, "Andy's Song."

An acquaintance whose son Andy was autistic, was one of her inspirations for this song. The other, was son Aaron.

"I was watching Aaron throwing blocks against a wall one day, and asked myself how could I reach this kid. How can I tell him that we are winners," she recalls.

The result was a beautiful, haunting song . . .

If I could touch your world just once and see things through your eyes. I could see what keeps you locked inside. Come take my hand and show me the way."

When she performed that song in 1981, it was the "first time I realized I could reach people with what I say. It was an emotional experience, to sing this song for Aaron and see all those handicapped kids listening to me."

She admits, "I can't sing it anymore. It breaks me up. I can't sing and cry at the same time."

Cancer Crusade in Cohasset a success

An exultant Regina Schultz, chairperson of the 1985 Cancer Crusade in Cohasset said this year's goal of $2,775 will probably be attained as a result of the townwide crusade completed two weeks ago.

"With only 55 of the more than 100 Crusaders' kits returned May 1, we received nearly $2,100," Mrs. Schultz said, "and so it seems clear that we can reach or exceed our goal for this year."

Cohasset has always been generous in its giving and this is further proof," she added. "Contributors may be sure that their gifts will be used to benefit cancer patients and to help with research to effect a cure."

According to Schultz, "we tried to reach every home in town with our literature and a contribution envelope. But if we missed you there is still an opportunity for you to contribute at the Rockland Trust office at Cushing Plaza."

The Cohasset Crusade was part of a state-wide effort that enlisted some 100,000 Crusaders who called on neighbors to give them valuable preventative information about cancer and to ask for a contribution to the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Schultz cited the work of a number of teenagers who joined the Crusade. These included Staci Stobart and Martha Driscoll, working on the project for the second year; Peter Cook, Lisa Gallagher, and Debbie and Cindy Dormer, the latter doing it as a project for her Confirmation class at St. Anthony's Church.

"We're grateful for all the workers in the Crusade, for the house-to-house callers, and the area captains... everyone who pitched in to make it succeed," Schultz said.

Fate of combined position faces town meeting

By Jane Lane

In a decision that took less than five minutes last week, selectmen voted to combine the positions of executive secretary and town accountant. A second vote immediately followed, in which they approved without discussion the appointment of Donald Andrew of Brookline to fill that new position.

He accepted selectmen's offer last Thursday night and signed contract at that time.

A special meeting was held last Thursday to formally adopt the new position and appointment which selectmen had developed in two previous executive sessions. During a special meeting held May 4 in which the board went into closed session, and during a subsequent executive session Tuesday, May 6, selectmen discussed the possibility of combining the two positions. Town Counsel Richard Henderson helped to work out the intricate details necessary for town meeting to approve the change.

In a meeting following Thursday's announcement, the government structure committee vowed to review the proposed change, but reacted angrily to the manner in which selectmen had developed it.

"We're angry that we were not consulted by selectmen before any decision was reached," committee chairman John McNabb stated this week. "Especially since selectmen have routinely consulted us before making any decisions which effect changes in the structure of town government."

He noted the committee is continuing to research the proposal and will come to no consensus until the June 17 special town meeting.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England said last week that selectmen were submitting their proposal to that advisory committee, but their recommendation would carry no authority.

The process by which Andrew will be named to the combined position will be intricate and lengthy. He will come on board June 3 as executive secretary

His mind is set on flying the Navy blue skies

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Midshipman Steven Donofrio of Cohasset knew that he wanted to be a fighter pilot for the Navy.

His father Paul had been a naval officer and had flown attack aircraft. His brother Charles, 27, was an enlisted naval pilot and is now in the Reserves. And his two other older brothers (Richard, 26, and Paul, 24) had chosen to attend the United States Naval Academy and become aviation officers for the Navy.

Donofrio had been accepted into a score of fine institutions, such as Harvard University and the U.S. Air Force Academy. But his mind was set on pursuing a career as a naval officer. He said that his goals were clear to him. He wanted to graduate from the academy as a fighter pilot, become a test pilot and eventually join the NASA space program.

This 21-year-old, Second Class midshipman (Junior) graduated from Cohasset High School in 1982. He was first in his class of 156 students. He had been the president for his Junior and Senior classes. He had played varsity soccer, had run varsity track and had played junior varsity basketball.

He was nominated to the academy by Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.).

Donofrio said he chose the academy's major of general engineering, because he enjoys the broad scope of this course of studies. And he spoke warmly of his summer tours of duty.

Midshipmen receive their first assignments to surface ships or submarines after their Plebe (Freshman) year. Donofrio said he spent about six weeks on a cruiser that sailed Carribean waters.

A meeting place is remembered

With little commotion, but a lot of emotion, a small meeting room within Cushing Plaza was demolished last week.

For 18 years, this room served as a meeting place for as many groups and organizations that exist on the South Shore. The Cushing Room is gone now, but will remain in the memories of many people.

That cozy space nestled next door to the Rockland Trust Bank was actually a gift to the community from the bank. At no charge, and often with a supply of freshly-brewed coffee, milk and sugar, the room was offered to whomever made the request.

Mary Arcand, assistant treasurer of the branch office, recalled the number of groups which gathered in the small auditorium. There were four therapy groups meeting there weekly for the past several years, she said. As she tried to remember the names, Mary would recall another. There were the Democratic and the Republican town committees from various communities, art clubs, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Coast Guard boating safety courses, teacher organization meetings, women's clubs, even a church group whose own church didn't have enough space.

"It was a lovely place, and a lovely gesture on the Landfill litter fence

Selectmen approved the insertion of an additional Board of Health-sponsored article in the special town meeting warrant. The article will request money for about 600 feet of fence at the landfill.

The wire mesh fence, which will begin near the pond at the landfill and travel the parameter about 600 feet, will be constructed to contain litter within the property.

Abutting residents have complained that litter has been flying onto their property from the landfill. Such a fence would serve to contain the debris, according to Dr. Godzik. This was one of the requirements recently issued during an inspection of the site by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, he added.

There has been no price estimation completed yet, he said, but the fence will measure about ten feet in height. Selectman Rocco Laugelle also suggested that Godzik price the plastic slats that can be woven into the mesh fence, so neighbors will not complain about the esthetics of a wire fence.

Selectmen also voted to include an article requesting $4959 for interior renovations to the Bates Building. Dr. Godzik said although the floor and walls were originally slated for repair, the ceiling is currently in the worse condition. That article, which was included in the annual town meeting warrant, originally requested an $8000 appropriation.

At the conclusion of their meeting Tuesday night, selectmen voted to include another article in the warrant, requesting $5000 for support sills for the Bates Building. About $1500 remains from the Bates Building appropriation last year, but the foundation sills must be replaced, according to Selectman Mary Jane McArthur.

A proposal by Selectman Laugelle to request an $1000 appropriation to have the town hall windows washed, was defeated by the board.

Music Circus license

After meeting with producer Ron Rawson, selectmen voted to re-issue the four licenses required by the South Shore Music Circus.

Although Rawson inquired why he was asked to attend the meeting, selectmen replied he was not being singled out. It is their policy to meet with an establishment's owner to have any questions answered before a license was issued.

Rawson was issued four licenses by the board, for confectionary sales on Sunday, a Sunday entertainment license, a weekday entertainment license, and a common vitualler's license.

Rawson noted that the Fire Chief's recent request that fire alarm systems by installed in the box office and the dressing rooms was being followed.

The producer explained that this year there will be 20 less performances than in 1984, and the season will be reduced by two weeks.

Although there had been a letter from an abutter in October, complaining about the high noise level, Rawson said an out-of-court agreement bewteen his business and the neighbors prevented him from discussing the matter in detail. He said an attempt by his attorney to contact the abutter's liason, has not met with any reaction from the neighbors. The Music Circus representative tried to contact the liason five weeks ago, but has not heard any further communication.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the Music Circus has cooperated 100 percent in trying to keep the performance times in order, and the noise level low.

Rawson noted the comedian Bill Cosby will be peforming at the Music Circus two nights this summer, for four four performances at 6 and 9:30 p.m. Those were the most convenient starting times for the entertainer and the audience.

Cat dam odor problem

Health Agent Joseph Godzik told selectmen a college biological team may be willing to investigate the cause of the decaying algae and odor in Cat Dam at Little Harbor.

In the meantime, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield said his department will open the tidal gate into the dam once a month for three days, in an effort to keep the water moving.

Dr. Godzik said the alage vegetation is dying because of the stagnant water, causing an abundance of nitrogen phospherous. The nutrients are not washed out of the water and the algae dies. A comparable situation, he said, was with the pollution problems at Straits Pond.

The state Reclamation Board, Dr. Godzik added, is not really interested in looking into the problem even after selectmen requested their assistance. He suggested contacting a university biological team, which would be a less expensive way to detect the source of the problem and possible solutions.

In answer to Selectman Rocco Laugelle's question, the health agent said he doubted the septic systems along the rocky ledge in the neighborhood caused the problem. If there are failing systems, the Board of Health will check them, but the true source of the obnoxious odor is the failing nutrients, he said.

Fire chief search group

Selectmen have gathered several resumes from residents interested in serving on the seven-member Fire Chief Search Committee. They will be reviewing those resumes and intend to make appointments at next Monday's meeting.

Chamber leader dies

A noted Cohasset jeweler and business leader died early Saturday morning following a one-car crash on Gannett Road near the intersection of Hatherly Road.

Forrest King, 53, owner of King's Jewelers of Cushing Plaza, Cohasset and active in the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce , was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by Medical Examiner Dr. Clifford Ward.

Mr. King was the passenger in a car driven by Christopher Carroll, 22 of 93 Lawson Rd. Carroll was charged by police with vehicular homicide, speeding, driving under the influence of alcohol, operating to endanger and failure to travel in marked lanes.

Carroll was treated at South Shore Hospital and was released Monday to be arraigned in Hingham District Court Tuesday.

The accident occurred at 2:29 a.m. Police said the '83 grey Chevrolet Camaro, driven by Carroll, hit a tree in the vicinity of 88-89 Gannett Road. The accident is still under investigation by Scituate police.

Murray named to committees

House Speaker George Keverian (D-Everett) has appointed Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) to serve as a member of two special legislative committees, the Joint Special Committee on Comparable Worth and the House Special Committee on U-Mass Boston Interior Cleaning Procedures.

"The decision to go forward with a targeted legislative inquiry into these areas indicates the importance of their ranking on the public policy agenda," Speaker Keverain said.

"Your district Representative has been assigned multiple responsibilities," the Speaker said. "These are important mandates, and I look forward to receiving the findings and recommendations of these special studies."

Under terms of legislation authorizing the special study panels, they are required to complete their work and file their reports with the Clerk of the House by December 31, 1986.

Representative Murray, thanking the Speaker for her appointment as Chairman said, "I am very pleased to have been appointed to these two special committees. The Special Committee on Comparable Worth has been given the authority to investigate as to whether or not sex segregation still exists in state service. The committee is also delegated the authority to ascertain that women are receiving the same money as men for comparable jobs.

"An accident at UMASS Boston recently nearly caused the electrocution of one of my constituents. It appears that cleaning people on the floor above were throwing buckets of water on the floors prior to scrubbing them. Naturally, the water leaked down to the floor below, weakening the ceiling. Eventually, the ceiling collapsed, causing some damage. But the water also affected the light fixtures, which put the people in real danger.

"It is my intent to probe this matter, and to see that cleaning procedures are changed."

They are among the 38 special committees and commissions specifically authorized by the House last month to conduct studies and investigations during the 1985-86 session.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

CIVIL LITIGATION

Civil suits fall into two broad categories. Contract suits involve the enforcement of obligations and/or recovery of damages for failure to fulfill obligations. These obligations can be either explicit, involving a written document, or implied, meaning that the obligations arise from the conduct of the parties. Tort suits involve any violation of the duty of due care which members of a society owe to one another. If that violation results in harm, either by a physical injury or a monetary loss, then there is a basis for a tort suit. There are both intentional torts, such as assault and battery, and negligent torts, such as failure to exercise due care in the manufacture of a product.

The courts are the "ultimate arenas" for deciding and interpreting right and wrong as it relates to the law of the land. Whether in civil, criminal, personal injury or business related matters, if resolution cannot be reached otherwise, by choice or law, the courts will decide. It is to your advantage and oftentimes required to have legal representation in court actions. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available (daily for appt.)

HINT

The most common types of tort suits involve personal injury, medical malpractice and products liability.

Midshipman loves the Navy

Last summer he participated in a routine tour of duty. He spent a week with the Marines at Quantico, Va., a week at naval flight school in Pensacola, Fla. and a week in submarine school near New London, Conn.

This summer he said he will be on an amphibious assault ship doing refresher training and practicing maneuvers.

"After graduation, I'll hopefully be going to Navy flight training school at the base in Pensacola, Fla. for primary training. During secondary training, I would specialize," he said.

When Donofrio isn't studying or fulfilling professional duties, such as training underclassmen in military matters, he participates in the largest varsity team at the academy, the sailing team.

The team numbers about 225 midshipmen, who crew a fleet of more than 180 sailing crafts. First semester this year, Donofrio skippered a 68-foot-long, aluminum racing ketch.

He said he also plays intramural soccer, light-weight football and softball.

"Most people don't like it here, but I love it, even the discipline," Donofrio said. "In high school, I was a lot more involved with academics. Here, my lifestyle has changed a lot. I spend more time helping others, like with the Special Olympics the academy holds once a year in the spring.

"And this summer, I'll spend about six weeks on Plebe Detail as a squad leader. I will be directly responsible for teaching 12 plebes about dress, codes, getting rooms ready for inspections, everything."

Midshipman Second Class Stephen Donofrio, Fifth Company, First Battalion, First Regiment.

The creation of a Naval academy

President John Adams in 1800 suggested to Congress that a school for training naval officers be founded in the U.S.

Forty-five years later the then new Secretary of the Navy George Bancroft arranged through the War Department for the transfer of about 10 acres of land located at the mouth of the Severn River in Annapolis, Maryland.

Bancroft converted Fort Severn into the United States Naval Academy, which officially opened its doors Oct. 10, 1845 to a class of 50 midshipmen, who began training with a seven-member faculty.

In the last century and a half, the academy has grown tremendously in both physical and academic scope. The campus occupies 329 acres. About 540 faculty members, divided evenly between civilian professors and naval officers, teach the Brigade of about 4,500 midshipmen a year.

Women were first invited to attend the academy in 1976. Due to combat restrictions, women comprise only about 10 percent of each class admitted to the academy.

For instance, 113 women were included in the 1,352 people admitted to the class of 1988. These men and women were selected from 14,700 applicants.

Though computers have replaced slide rules and sextants have made way for sophisticated navigation equipment, the academy's original mission has been preserved: "To prepare midshipmen morally, mentally and physically to be professional officers in the naval service."

According to Rear Admiral Charles R. Larson, 51st superintendent of the academy, "We try to insure broad vision and the pursuit of a graduate education. We have the highest percentage of civilian educators of all the academies."

Larson said the academy's goals in the next five years are to increase the percentage of instructors holding doctorates from 88 to 100 percent, to make the humanities majors as rigorous as the engineering majors, and to institute an extensive computer literacy program.

More than 80 percent of the midshipmen elect engineering, science or mathematics majors. Larson said, "We are at the forefront of a modern world and a modern Navy."

Students who are selected for admission to the Plebe (Freshman) class come from every state in the Union and type of background. All of them receive a four-year scholarship that includes paid room, board and expenses. In return, they must accept a five-year commission in the U.S. Navy or U.S. Marine Corps if offered.

Graduates who have completed two years of commissioned service may apply to continue their studies toward a master's degree in accelerated programs at certain civilian universities or at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif.

Unlike civilian schools, applicants to the academy must seek out a nomination from a government or military official. Most nominations are made by U.S. senators and representatives, the President, Vice President and Secretary of the Navy.

During the first summer at Annapolis, midshipman learn the fundamentals of military life. Subsequent summers are spent at sea and at naval installations learning about the ships, submarines or aircraft they will someday command.

In order to satisfy the academic requirements for the Bachelor of Science degree, midshipman must complete their major and distribution requirements with at least a C grade point average. They must also meet required military-professional standards in those studies and in at-sea training, along with meeting required standards of military performance, conduct, honor and physical education.

Flea market set for May 18

This Saturday, May 18 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, is the time and place of the Cohasset Historical Society's annual spring flea market. This year, late additions to the flea market's inventory include a 10 foot long fiberglass Sears' "John Boat" with oars, ideal for shallow water boating, a working stereo system (several stereo component systems are now in stock), collections of quality books, artworks, home equipment and furniture.

There will be refreshments served and a table of special home-made baked goods will be presided over by Mrs. Ellery Hyland.

The Historical Society's annual spring Flea Market offers an opportunity to find those elusive items you've been looking for elsewhere but never could find, and this year's inventory is the largest yet. The Society's flea market barn, and even the venerable Lothrop House itself are literally bulging at the seams with useful pre-owned items needing new owners. Its all for a worthy cause, to maintain the Society's two unique historical museums at Cohasset Center and to complete the restoration of the Lothrop House itself, a ten-year project undertaken by the Society.

Plan to arrive early to find the best selection of flea market items. Dealer spaces are still available. Call Mrs. Parker at 383-6930 or 383-0773 to reserve a place. This year's version of the giant annual spring flea market promises to be a gala event; be sure to take it in this Saturday.

Selectmen deny water board's computer study

The lingering problems with the town's central computer system are kicking up again. But this week, after a heated exchange between the two sides, selectmen rejected a warrant article proposed by the water commission to study the ailing system.

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt urged selectmen Monday night to include an article requesting $1000 to study the town's two year-old computer system. Calling the system a "genuine disaster," Pratt said the water department has been unable to collect overdue water bills in a timely fashion because of the inefficiencies of the system.

The $1000 would allow the town to fund a study by the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) which would be finalized in written form. From there, each department could further study what software systems are necessary for each individual office function.

But Selectmen Chairman Frank England was adamant that another approach was currently being followed. England urged Pratt not to single out his department while he was working with the advisory committee on ways in which the entire town's problems could be resolved. "I am well aware of your problems with the computer," he told Pratt. "and we are trying to do it correctly for the whole town. It's foolish for one department to run off by itself in one direction. I've asked you to leave this alone."

"I am seeking to cooperate with you," Pratt responded, saying that his request came only after learning through the newspapers last week that the commission's proposed article had been rejected for the town meeting warrant "without consideration."

He explained that the water department is a self-sufficient entity in town. If water bills were efficiently and promptly collected, using a viable computer system, Pratt said the department would generate needed revenue. He also noted that several other town departments have issued complaints about the system and its continual processing problems.

"We demand a level of technology that other departments do not," he explained to selectmen. "I am asking we be given a resource to get us out of debt."

When England noted that the $1000 would come from the town's general revenue fund, he stated, "he's asking for financial independence with our money."

Once the written report was completed, the water department could make specific recommendations for the type of software necessary to perform departmental duties. Now, he added, with the malfunctioning system, the department has experienced delays in checking incorrect data submitted by the system.

Although selectmen Diane Sullivan and Mary Jane McArthur voted to accept the article within the June 17 warrant, the three other members defeated the proposal.

When Pratt asked England for a timeframe in which he would recommend specific changes to the computer system, England declined to answer. "We're working on it as fast as we can," he replied. "I can't give you any specific time."

In another matter, Pratt discussed the other three articles sponsored by the commission in the town meeting warrant.

One of the articles concerns a rate increase for last year's municipal insurance coverage. Although all town departments were affected, the water department must request additional monies from town, since it is a self-sufficient office.

The board voted to include the insurance budget transfer article within the June 17 warrant.

Pratt also discussed two articles which selectmen previously accepted for inclusion within the warrant.

The first article authorizes the formation of water improvement betterments against nine households on Atlantic Avenue in the Newtonville area. Residents there have formally complained to selectmen that the area is without adequate fire protection because of a lack of hydrants and fire accessibility in that area.

The second article requests approval to obtain a bond for construction and installation of a water pipeline and hydrant in that neighborhood.

Although there are cost variations to the proposal, Pratt explained that an informal polling of the neighbors suggested they are in favor of the private funding method. The betterments would be attached to each household for a period of not more than 10 years.

Depending on where the fire hydrant and pipe were constructed, a ten or five-year betterment would be attached to the property. The betterment would be the sole responsiblity of the property owner.

Pratt emphasized that the construction and betterment payments would not affect taxpayers.

Variations of plans to install the hydrant are significant, Pratt said, and will cost the neighbors affected by the increased protection anywhere from $1500 a year for ten years, to $488 per year for the same period of time.

It was up to the neighbors to decide which plan to follow, he added.

Currently, the water commissioners need a signed legal document, outlining their commitment and obligations under the terms of construction and betterments.

The contractual agreement must be authorized by town meeting, and the bond for construction and installation must also be approved by voters, according to Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

"It will cost the taxpayers nothing," Pratt explained. "The note comes from the betterment payments."

When Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked Fire Capt. Mark Trask if there are any other areas in such deperate need of improved fire protection, the department official said this was probably the worst. He said the extremely narrow width of Atlantic Avenue poses a severe accessibility problem for fire trucks.

Pratt further explained this situation is unique, and that developers planning new subdivisions are required by law to provide adequate pipeline and hydrants along that property for fire protection.

Advisors recommend warrant

The advisory committee this week reviewed several warrant articles for the June 17 special town meeting, and recommended a majority of them.

Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer noted that some of the 40 articles still do not have a firm price figure, and others will have to be studied further before any recommendation is made by the committee.

On a bright note, Dormitzer said the approximate amount to be expended from taxation from the June town meeting warrant is $280,594. Although there are a couple of articles that do not have figures, approximately $147,057 will be taken from the surplus account. Dormitzer said that was encouraging, especially in light of a tremendous amount of 1984 new construction which is being assimilated by the assessor's office.

Action taken Tuesday night by the advisors included postponing a decision to hire a consultant to study and recommend a personnel classification system for town employees. That study will cost $25,000 and will also include training department supervisors in the implementation of the evaluation and performance appraisal system.

Selectmen's Acting Executive Secretary Janet Chalke said the 47 town employees "are really counting on this." She said they expected the article to be approved at the April town meeting, adding, "there's been a lot of unrest since then" when it wasn't considered.

The following article was also not voted upon by the committee. This "deficit budget" article will not complete until another figure is included by Zoning Board of Appeals member Barbara Power, according to Dormitzer.

Included in this article is a request by the Board of Health to purchase 2000 cubic yards of impervious clay for landfill cover. Although Board of Health member Dr. John Burns explained that the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering recently cited the dump for the lack of this cover material, the advisors were not convinced the agency had issued a mandate. They questioned whether such a large amount was necessary, and wondered if the cover material purchase could wait until the following year's budget.

Committee member Fred Koed with Health Agent Joseph Godzik will tour the landfill facility to see if that amount of cover material is needed.

The committee voted to recommend article 10 which requests $2250 for a recording secretary for the Board of Selectmen to be employed six hours a week for meeting coverage.

A total of $5363 for the purchase of various town hall items was recommended by the advisory committee. Among the items which will be included in this article are ten folding tables, carpeting the front foyer, a ladder, sanding of the auditorium floor, and fiberglass window shades for the auditorium windows.

Member Jim Lagrotteria cast the single opposing vote, saying he will not approve of purchasing "frills" for any town department until renovations are completed at the North Cohasset Fire Station. This has been a project Lagrotteria has fought for many years, explaining that the building is deteriorating while awaiting repairs.

The board reviewed a proposal to install air conditioning and upgrading the wiring at town hall for a total price of $9697. That includes a unit in the accountant's office, one in the treasurer-collector's, one in the recreation office, one in the assessor's office, and a separate package in the second floor of the building.

Advisors recommended the proposal, although they intend to review the estimated costs of operating the units. Lagrotteria suggested that the cost be included in this warrant article so there will be enough budget money to use the air conditioners.

Member Denis Rossi will have the estimated rate costs at the committee's next meeting. At that time, they can decide whether to reconsider the article.

The board recommended appropriating $2300 to improve the intercom telephone system between town departments. Lagroterria said he will find out if the police and fire departments can have two intercom lines between the two offices at no additional cost, for public safety reasons.

Article 17, which requests $4959 for Bates Building interior renovations, was postponed until the committee receives a breakdown of the costs. Although they are aware the ceiling is in the most critical need of repair, they wanted to know the specific renovation costs.

They voted to recommend $8000 to construct the roadway and retaining wall near 121 Jerusalem Road. Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield explained the deteriorating wall allows water to seep onto the roadway, causing a public safety problem.

The advisors recommended appropriating $20,320 to grade a wooded area at the landfill to be used as the site for a new salt shed. Although the state will install and construct a 40-foot by 60-foot shed, the town must pay all site preparation costs. Litchfield estimated it would cost that amount to clear the wooded area between the access and the exit roads

around town

☐The George H. Mealy Post No. 118 held a grand party last weekend, to honor former commanders. It was run by Jack Burke, and those present dined on prime ribs and the works! The former commanders that were present were: Ron Beal ('46-'47), Erwin Golden ('49-'50), Ed McIver ('55-'56; '58-'59), Ernie "Hot" Sullivan ('62-'63), Charles Pat McCarthy ('53-'54; '63-'64), Ben Curley ('65-'66), John Mello ('68-'69), Jim Litchfield ('69-'70; '72-'73), Leo Kurtz ('66-'67; '73-'74), Jack Burke ('74-'77), Rocco Laugelle ('54-'55; '77-'78), Steve Wigmore ('78-'80), Fred Huntwork ('70-'72, '80-'81), Bob Duncan ('81-'82), Joe McLean ('82-'83), Bill Spier ('83-'85) and Herb Williams ('48-'49). another proud award recipient was Tom Wigmore, who received a plaque from the members to thank him for all the work that he has done in the past for the Memorial Day Parades.

☐Speaking of the Memorial Day parade, the call is out to all of you Veterans! Please march! There is no need to wear your uniform (its understood that some of them shrink as they get older)... show your pride, show that you served your country and march in the parade! Assemble at the Legion; for more details call the Legion at 383-9657.

☐Congratulations are in order for the Bonzagni family! May Day (May 1st) brought Timothy and Patricia (O'Malley) a son, born at Quincy City Hospital.

☐Airman First Class Thomas R. Young, son of Joseph and Carole Tierney, 36 Stockbridge Street, recently received a Certificate of Commendation from U.S. Readiness Command in recognition and appreciation for outstanding performance and support during Joint Readiness Exercise, Border Star 85. This military exercise involves all branches of the service and was held recently in El Paso, Texas.

☐Hope everyone went to see the Senior Class Play last weekend, what a lot of fun it was to watch! Looked as though the cast was having a great time performing too, which is what its all about. Another nice side-line to their efforts is that some of the profits of their show will be used to aid the people of Ethiopia. A super effort indeed!

☐The senior class is looking forward to the arrival of Mike Mahoney, who is taking leave to come home to see his class. As reported earlier, Mike is stationed in Germany, and everyone misses him! Anyway, look for him "Around Town," he'll be here for a while!

☐The State Champs sure had fun at the State House last week after receiving special citations from State Senator Bill Golden.

☐If you are wondering why Fred Willshire and Jason Marsac are all smiles lately (Jason is always smiling, I know, this is just a bigger smile than usual), there is a mighty good reason. They made headlines in the Quincy Patriot Ledger as the "Frosh Pair" that sealed Cohasset's tennis victory, an upset over Hanover. Yeah, boys, keep up your excellent winning ways.

☐Margaret Dillon, Director of the South Shore Art Center, announced the appointment of Joni Jensen as the development manager for the Center. She will coordinate the efforts of fund raising and development for the Centers relocation plans. She is experienced as a business person and an artist, and will surely help contribute to the success of the South Shore Art Center.

☐Congratulations to Paul Kristenson, who completed an intensive three week training course conducted by the Home Inpsector of North America, Inc., the nations largest home and building inspection company. He was one of 29 applicants selected from more than 600 to participate in this program, and now joins the firm in Randolph as a certified Home Inspector.

☐ Navy Seaman Recruit William D. Sargent, son of Richard J. and Patricia F. Sargent of Cohasset recently reported for duty aboard ammunition ship USS Mauma Kea, homeported in Concord, CA.

☐Walt Sweeney left them all thinking and certainly very impressed after his talk last Friday. Walt talked to students in grades 10-12 about his life "in the fast lane" with the alcohol and drugs that he did up until a few years ago. All of the students were shocked and impressed, and here's hoping that Walt made a lasting impression on them...sure that it did!!!

☐That is the news for this week, keep it coming!!

Cohasset school news

PSO annual meeting

School families have received a letter of invitation from the PSO requesting that parents attend the annual meeting, Thursday, May 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the New Study Hall, Cohasset High School.

The highlight of the evening will be a videotape of our children starring in "Home Movies," a wrap-up of the school year's events and achievements. Movie theater-type refreshments will complement the show.

MaryBeth Lean, Activities Chairman, guided by audio-visual chief Dr. John Packard, has edited an entertaining and magical 30 minutes of the students at work and play.

Also hard at work were the nominating committee, putting together the slate of officers for next year's PSO board. Judy Bronstein, Cindy Chase, JoAnne Chittick, Jill Crafts, Kyle Lubitz, Dick Mantz and Robin Suhrbier met several times recently to present the membership with a board committed to carry on the ideas and programs begun three years ago when the PSO was founded. The proposed officers and board members for 1985-86 are Nancy Sandell, President; Claudia Story, Vice President; Vernita Bryant, Corresponding Secretary; Merlyn Corcoran, Recording Secretary; MaryBeth Lean, Treasurer; Sue McNamara and Shelley Weier, Osgood School Representatives; Jean Reidy and Pat Ellinger, Deer Hill Representatives; Judy Volungis and Adrienne Thompson, Junior High Representatives; Linda Starmer and Cynthia Hurley, Senior High Representatives; Mary Lou Lawrence, Arts Enrichment; Rosie Dole, Fundraising; Sue Terry, METCO Host Families; Paul and Jerry Kakita, PSO Activities; Monica McKenney and Carol Riley, Publicity; Karen Coyne, Special Needs, and Dane and Sandra Hahn, Volunteers.

Another item on the agenda will be an amendment to the bylaw limiting a board member to two one-year terms. The proposed change will extend the limitation to three one-year terms.

Plan to attend this important meeting, talk with the old and new board members, and enjoy a Thursday night at the movies with a star-studded cast. See you there!

A real fish story!

Todd Harrington had quite a "fish-tale" to tell his fellow first graders!

Todd and his mother were walking along the rocks near their home on Gammons Road. They walked over the cliff next to the big, long rock. Todd's mother spotted a female, baby killer whale, but she thought it was a dolphin. Todd thought it was a killer-whale. They went down the steps on the cliff. They turned the whale over and could see the blow hole on its head! Then they turned it on its side; it had a big hole in it.

Todd's mother called the New England Aquarium in Boston. They came right away with their truck. Todd showed the man where the whale was, and he put on some yellow rubber gloves. Then the man took out two plastic bags and put the whale in them. He put the whale in the back of the truck and drove away.

Todd was right about the whale! He had seen one at Sea World and knew they were black with white bellies. He also knew from his zoo books that their mouths are flat.

When Todd told his "fish tale" at school, his teacher gave him a book to read at bedtime that night, "When the Whale Came to My Town!"

(It's not surprising that Todd's favorite place to visit is the New England Aquarium. He went on a field trip with his class and a family trip with visitors just before the little whale landed on his shore!)

Our Special Olympians

The Osgood and Deer Hill School Special Olympians have done it again... impressed us all with their athletic performances. Notes of congratulations hang everywhere in the school. The jingle of medals can be heard in the halls as a proud athlete receives a hurray from a friend. Everyone is very proud of their achievements.

Congratulations Peter Plante, Jay Nothnagle, Tom Coyne, Jen Porter, Ryan Picton, Michael Goodhue, Shawn Cheverie, Steve Skayne, Matt Grassey, Eric Sisson and Tim Myers (from Scituate Jr. High School)

Yet To Come — State-Mandated Competency Tests:

In either late May or early June, all students in Grade Two will be administered tests to determine competency in the areas of reading, writing, arithmetic and listening. The tests are part of the statewide program mandated last year in order to determine any students in need of remediation in the aforementioned areas.

Friday, May 17: Marc Brown, author and illustrator, will meet with the children.

Monday, May 20 through Friday, May 24: Annual Osgood Book Fair. A chance to satisfy summer reading needs and support further enrichment efforts.

Thursday, May 23: Snapper Sneaker Day. Come join in the "roar of the crowd" as the children test their running endurance and "keep on trying." 9 a.m.

Thursday, June 6: Deer Hill Concert at Osgood as delightful music fills the air. 10 a.m.

Friday, May 31: Arbor Day. Let's hope for a bright and sunny day for this very special occasion.

Ride-A-Bike: The CTA sponsored Ride-A-Bike will be held on Sunday, May 19 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Registration forms may be obtained from Irene Mello at Joseph Osgood School.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

THE NEW ZEALAND COMMISSION

That chiropractic can correct the cause of many musculoskeletal disorders was recently underscored in New Zealand by the prestigious Commission of Inquiry into Chiropractic. It undertook the most complete and objective study of the science to date. Authorized by the governor-general, the Commission heard testimony from hundreds of chiropractors and their patients, medical doctors, physiotherapists and independent researchers from around the world. In its report, presented to Parliament in 1979, the Commission states: "There can be no doubt that chiropractic treatment is effective for musculoskeletal spinal disorders. As well as back pain, which makes up the bulk of chiropractic practice, these must be taken to include migraine and pain radiating from the spine."

Today society does accept and appreciate the benefits to be gained from the science of chiropractic. As a method of dealing with existing difficulties as well as a preventive appraoch through a routine of periodic exams, chiropractic has gained its rightful position in one's considerations of overall health standards. For the chiropractic attention that will fit in with your lifestyle and health goals, we welcome your call at COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. Many insurance plans accepted as well as Workers Comp. cases.

SAVING MONEY

By reserving a flight anywhere from several days to several weeks in advance, one can sometimes qualify for several reduced air fare plans. Your travel agent will advise you of any conditions attached to these advance purchas fares. They may include staying a certain number of days at your destination and/or purchasng roundtrip tickets. Generally, there are only a limited number of seats on most flights that are sold at reduced rates. As a result, it pays to make and pay for your reservations as far in advance of the stated deadline as possible. This is the best way to get the particular flight you want. Another money-saving strategy is to fly "off-season," midweek, at night or any time the airline is having trouble filling seats. Find out about these bargains from your travel agent.

Closed door vote

Selectmen announced last week the formation of a new position, and a candidate to fill that position.

Our initial and immediate reaction is that this is an innovative and bold move, one that selectmen are confident suits the experience and qualifications of Donald Andrew.

We support the proposal, mindful that Andrew seems to be a capable professional, and that the combination position will save the town substantial money.

What we take issue with, with strong disapproval, is the way in which selectmen came to their decision. It was completed in closed session, without benefit of input from a variety of sources, the government structure committee, personnel board, and most importantly, the taxpayers.

We fully realize the machinations of government grind slowly in Cohasset. And bringing in opinions from all sides would have been time-consuming and likely would have cost us another contract while Andrew went searching elsewhere.

But although it isn't the fastest way to effect change, it is democratic. And that is the form of government we function under.

No one in this town has the final say - we all have an equal voice. But in this case, we were shut out and silenced.

It was obvious at last Thursday's open selectmen's meeting, that all the details had previously been discussed and worked out in detail. There was nothing left for selectmen to do but mouth their approval and have Andrew sign the contract.

We wonder how townspeople will react to the closed-door way in which this major change to our government was created. We wonder how the taxpayers will respond to selectmen's proposal at town meeting, knowing they were excluded from all discussions; our only obligation to fund his weekly paycheck.

Yes, it is a good, innovative way to go. We hope it finally does meet with the town's approval and the new position is given a chance to succeed. But we also hope selectmen learn that we deserve more consideration than just being let in on the end results of some major decisions.

Dumpster regulations

The Board of Health reminds owners and managers of commercial operations that it adopted Dumpster Regulations which became enforceable and effective on Feb. 1, 1985.

Although many persons have been cooperative in complying with the regulations, there are some who are in violation of the regulation which was passed in accordance with Chapter 111, Section 31A of the Massachusetts General Laws.

The procedure for application is simply to obtain an application form from the Board of Health office at 43 Elm Street, fill out same and render a payment of fifteen dollars for each dumpster on the premises of your business. The Board of Health conducts office hours identical to those of the Town Hall.

Compliance will prevent this office from taking further action.

The language of flowers

By Claire McDonough

Skip placed a bouquet of carnations on my lap.

"Happy Mothers Day," he sang, "to the most wonderful, beautiful mother in the entire world, who is going to let me use the car the day after the prom so I can take my friends surfing at Nausett Beach."

I looked up in surprise. "I thought Breida was letting you use her car."

"Well sure," he agreed, "but what if it rains? I mean, she's missing a front window."

"We'll overlook for the moment the inconsistency of people who are willing to brave the waves at Nausett Beach quailing at the thought of a little rain," I told him, "because it's a moot point.

"Breida picked up a window at Paul Young's that fits her car perfectly. She and Ralph put it in last Saturday."

"Uh, yeah, they did," he agreed, "but when I was driving some of the guys home the other night, someone slammed the door just a little bit, and the other window fell out and smashed all over the sidewalk."

He shook his head. "I don't think that car of hers is terribly stable.

"It took us about a half hour to clean up all the glass," he added virtuously. "So, um, how about the car?"

I looked at the carnations again. "You twisted my arm. I've always been a sucker for flowers."

I have, too. Some of my most poignant memories involve flowers. There was my first corsage. There were the three white orchids attached to the satin covered missal I carried for our wedding — one to throw, one to wear on my "going-away" suit, and one to leave at the altar.

Then there was the time my oldest child invited me to attend a reading recital at St. Mark's third grade.

"Sister says my story was the best, and I'm going to read it," she informed me. "It's about rabbits."

"How interesting," I lied.

Just how interesting it really was I discovered at the recital when Mary Claire read her story before parents, students, and nuns assembled.

It seems that one morning little Susie Rabbit woke at 5 a.m. and decided to surprise her mother by picking her some flowers.

"Please," I prayed vainly, "don't let Susie Rabbit thrust wet flowers in her sleeping mother's face and shout 'Surprise!' "

Susie Rabbit did just that, and Mary Claire read on. " 'Shut up!' yelled Mother Rabbit. 'Get those things out of here!' "

I don't know why everyone was so amused. Mary Claire had always had an intelligent interest in rabbits.

For some reason, however, the reading recalled lilies of the valley placed on my pillow at dawn by a daughter who now has two sons of her own. And a rabbit named Fou Fou.

There were other memorable bouquets, picked from neighbors' gardens, presented to me with love, and returned with apologies. The young criminals are now law-abiding adults.

There were the wild violets, placed symetrically and artistically in the center of a ring of shiny green leaves. We spent almost as much on calamine lotion for that one as we did for the tasteful arrangement of poison sumac. Or the bunch of daisies that harbored countless sand fleas.

There were the lady slippers - an endangered species, the picking of which involves fine, imprisonment, or both. I mention them only because I believe the statute of limitations has expired.

I arranged Skip's carnations in a milk glass vase and placed them on the mantlepiece. We both stood back to admire them.

"Those are the nicest flowers I ever gave you, right?" he asked.

I shook my head. "They're beautiful, and I love them, but you gave me other flowers I treasured even more.

"You were two years old, and you brought me some mangled dandelions and crab grass. And you told me I was pretty."

Letters

An amazing performance

To the Editor:

I went to the Cohasset High School Spring Choral Concert after watching the Celts lose two in a row to the Pistons (when did Detroit get so good?)

Brian Marks and his choral groups have always performed outstanding programs, and I expected and needed to be uplifted Wednesday night. . .but I never expected to be amazed.

I left the concert feeling I had just seen a live segment of Fame High School. The chorus sang, laughed and danced across the stage, doing complicated routines, and performing them well. They wore party dresses and were costumed for special numbers. . .and the community was talking about it way into the weekend. That usually doesn't happen after a concert; that happens only after something incredible like the state division basketball playoffs. But then these kids were incredible.

Also happened to attend Soap Bubbles last Friday, produced and directed and written by Judy Holmes. It was an all-female cast and really fun, a take-off on the soap operas. Because it was a workshop, the actresses did not publicize (any further than family and friends) this endeavor, but it had a good audience.

Thanks, kids, and hard-working teachers.

Transcript of May 4 closed session

(This is a transcript of the minutes of the closed executive meeting of the Board of Selectmen, May 4, in which they first discussed the appointment of a combined executive secretary/town accountant. Ed.)

The meeting was called to order at 10:05 a.m. by Chairman England.

Attendance: Chairman England, Selectman Mitman, Selectman McArthur and Selectman Sullivan.

Also present for the Advisory Committee: Jacqueline Dormitzer, Chairman; Dennis Rossi, Richard Horn and Fred Koed.

Richard Henderson, Town Counsel, was present at 10:30 a.m. and for the remainder of the meeting.

The purpose of the meeting was contract negotiations and litigation.

Motion by Selectman Mitman to go into executive session.

Second by Selectman McArthur.

Vote 4 - 0 in favor. Chairman England, Aye; Selectman Mitman, Aye; Selectman McArthur, Aye; and Selectman Sullivan, Aye.

The resignation of William Signorelli in his letter of Feb. 25, 1985 was discussed, last day of work being April 22, 1985, vacation days concluding May 31, 1985 and sick days concluding October 7, 1985.

Executive Secretary candidate Bernard Cooper, Assistant Town Manager of Norwood would be earning about $31,000 as of July 1. The board felt they could offer $33,000 with a 10% increase the second year. Mr. Cooper would like $34,500. The board could not seem to work out the salary.

Town Accountant candidate, Donald Andrew, presently Senior Accountant Town of Brookline, presented impressive credentials and the board felt they would have to offer him $34,000. Mr. Andrew has been highly recommended for the job as Brookline's Town Accountant, but Brookline has not yet made a selection.

After interviewing Mr. Andrew, Selectmen Mitman and Sullivan suggested we may be able to combine both jobs. Selectman McArthur had some reservations, since the Executive Secretary position may evolve into a more responsible job. However, we all agreed it was worth the attempt. After discussion of the budget-funds being used up by William Signorelli, temporary salary increase of Janet Chalke and a proposed temporary salary increase for Kathleen Conte it was agreed that combining the jobs of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant was financially beneficial. The board suggested that the twenty hour week of Selectmen's secretary would have to become full time in the not too distant future and that additional help may be needed in the Accountant's Office if the two offices were combined, but we should look to Mr. Andrew's recommendation after he is aboard.

Donald Andrew is also part time accountant for the Town of Holbrook. It would be necessary for him to wind down that job by Sept. 1, 1985, and he assured Chairman England he would not work for Holbrook on Cohasset's time.

Selectman Mitman checked Mr. Andrew's references listed for Oak Bluffs and a Holbrook Selectman, which proved to be very good references, also a further check will be made of Mr. Edward Kelly now of Brookline Savings Bank, but formerly Town Accountant in Brookline.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised the Town that it can combine the two jobs by: 1. Removing Town Accountant from civil service; 2. Amending the bylaw, combining both jobs; 3. Obtaining the Attorney General's approval; and 4. Review by the Town Government Structure Committee.

Chairman England will call John McNab immediately.

Mr. Henderson said Mr. Andrew could be named as "acting" until everything is accomplished. It would be October or November before we could have a permanent position, five to six months at a minimum. Mr. Signorelli would stay on the payroll until the end of his sick leave as Town Accountant.

For Fiscal 1986, the budget for both positions is approximately $60,800 of which approximately $9,600 will be used up for William Signorelli, leaving $51,200.

An additional $450 would be required for temporary salary increase for Kay Conte until Donald Andrew reports to work for Cohasset. A formal request will be made to the Advisory Board for a transfer.

It was agreed by all parties to offer Donald Andrew $38,000 to start, with an increase to $40,000 on October 15, 1985 when he assumes full position. On July 1, 1986, he will receive a four percent step increase plus the cost of living adjustment given to other town employees.

Selectman McArthur made a motion to come out of Executive Session at 11:30 a.m. and adjourn the meeting.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

"Elderly people are at great risk of accidents in their homes," said Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset.

According to a summary of the Federal Administration on Aging report, Accidents and Aging, floors, flooring materials and stairs and steps account for nearly half the accidents of our senior citizens. Rep. Murray said "that these numbers require emergency room treatment."

Another health problem for women as they become "Young at Heart" is osteoporosis, which is a crippling bone disease. This affects 25 percent of women over age 60.

Rep. Murray said, "A recent study has concluded that inadequate calcuim in the diet, inadequate exposure to sunlight, decreasing hormone levels and inactivity, are possible contributing factors to osteoporosis.

"Health costs have forced our Senior Citizens to spend a greater percentage of their annual incomes", Rep. Murray said. She suggested that these people ask their physicians to sign the interchange line at the bottom of the prescription blank so that generic drugs may be purchased. Generic drugs have been Federal Drug Administration approved and they are less costly. These drugs are available for approximately 50 percent of all drugs. A survey of prescription drug prices in Boston showed that, on average brand-name drugs, were 23.1% to 166.9% more expensive than their generic counterparts.

Cohasset Common fair

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Common Country Fair will be held May 18 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Cohasset Common.

Sponsored by the Friends Committee for Troop 28, B.S.A., there will be many items for sale throughout the day.

Along with a refreshment stand, the show will feature pottery, woodcarving, quilting and basketry handmade by eastern Massachusetts craftsmen.

Social Service programs

The Social Service League of Cohasset will distribute government surplus Cheese and Butter at the end of May. If you qualify, participate in any of the following: food stamps, A.F.D.C., Welfare, S.S.I., Disability, fuel assistance, W.I.C., Veterans' Aid, or unemployment please call the office 383-0771 or 383-0821 to request the food items and arrange for a pick up.

The Cohasset Board of Health nurse will sponsor Diabetes workshops in June, on four consecutive Wednesdays, if enough interest is expressed in them. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821 if you would like to attend the Diabetes instruction series.

The Cohasset Community Center will be starting an evening Aerobic Dance Class with the popular Joanne Lehr instructing. Class will meet Monday and Wednesday, 7:15 - 8:15 and run for six weeks. Cost will be $36. Please call the Center to register (383-0088) between 9 a.m. and Noon, Monday thru Friday.

Amateur gardeners meeting

The next meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be held at the home of Mrs. Isabel Wilson on Spindrift Lane, Tuesday, May 21 at 1 p.m.

Her co-hostess will be Mrs. Elinor Kennedy. The program will be the annual plant and food exchange.

Helping to plan the May 22 plant sale at the South Shore Natural Science Center is Marlene Winn (l) of Cohasset. The sale will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Art show winners

Dudley Brian, a seventh grade Metro student, won an "honorable mention" at the Second Parish Church Annual Art Show (Hingham) for his unusual 31 page comic book, "Crusher, the Defender of Justice."

An exhibit outside the Art Room of drawings done by the high school and junior high students depicts their own homes. Each student was asked to observe the style, details and materials used to build their homes and then to make drawings from memory of these houses.

Historical Society's upcoming events

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Spring Flea Market Saturday, May 18 at the society's headquarters house, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Hours are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A wide variety of items will be featured, from sporting goods to household wares, books, clothes, furniture, toys and hi-fi equipment.

Among other collectables to be featured will be the giant-sized posters from the South Shore Music Circus picturing artists who appeared there last summer.

Games, toys and artworks will also be found among the large number of items donated to the society.

A table of homemade baked foods and hot dogs will be available as refreshments.

The annual spring flea market is a fund raising venture by the Historical Society for the maintenance of its three museum buildings and for the support of its community programs.

Dealer's spaces are available for $10; please call Mrs. Parker at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Plan to arrive early for the best selection of pre-owned items. The society still is accepting donations for its flea market. If you are cleaning out attic, cellar, garage or barn and would like to donate to this worthwhile cause, please call the society.

Special Museum Tour

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conunction with the Cohasset Historical Society, will sponsor a special pre-season guided tour of the society's two historical museums on Elm Street, Cohasset Center, Friday, May 24 at 11 a.m. Residents of Cohasset and the South Shore may register with the Recreation Department to see the following society museum buildings:

The Maritime Museum, contructed in the 1700's. Formerly a ship chandlery for Cohasset fishing schooner fleets, this museum portrays the town's "Age of Sail" which lasted for two centuries. Here can be found relics of mackerel fishing days and "deep sea" foreign trade, once the mainstay of Cohasset's economy.

Models, shipwreck relics, paintings and prints, and items brought home by the town's seafarers can be seen. The story of the first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is told in artifacts and pictures.

Beautifully crafted models of square-riggers such as the clippers "Great Republic" and "James Baines" (the originals built at Donald McKay's East Boston shipyard) ae displayed, as well as a sailor's model of the ship "Tecumseh" upon which he sailed.

The Maritime Museum's second floor contains a general collection of artifacts from old Cohasset, ranging from stone tools of the Quonahassit Indians to cordwainer's equipment of the 19th century.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of one of Cohasset's seafaring families for over a century. Exhibited here are home furnishings and art-work of 19th century Cohasset, collected from many of the old homes of the town. An early Cohasset home is recreated in this unspoiled early house.

Both of these unique buildings will be open for the May 24 museum tour. Call the Recreation Dept for reservations, 383-6791.

Science center May programs

Join mountain climbers Rick Merrit and Dave Keenan at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell on Wednesday evening, May 22 from 7 to 9 p.m. Experience with them the excitement and thrill of ascending the Matterhorn in Switzerland. Enjoy their exceptional slides and their discussion of the Alps and Switzerland. Possibly discover the answer to the question: Why climb a mountain? Homemade dessert and Science Center punch to be served after the program. Fee: $5 members, $6 non-members. Pre-paid registration requested. For information, call 659-2559.

WILDLFOWERS

Search for wildflowers with Science Center expert Winnie Lou Rounds on Tuesday, May 21 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. The group will start at the Science Center, then carpool to various areas to locate the unusual and rare. End a delightful morning at Winnie Lou's own wildflower garden. Fee: $3 members, $4 non-members. Pre-paid registration requested. For information, call 659-2559.

BASKETMAKING

Baskets are fun to make, useful too. Join Susan Pithie and other basket enthusiasts at the Science Center on Saturday, May 25 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. to make a key basket. This oval, 8x12x¾" basket has a flat back so it can be hung against a wall or door. Its ribbed style is similar to that of an egg basket. Don't miss this chance to be creative. Bring: pail, utility or mat knife, wire cutters, awl, ice pick or knitting needle, 10 clip clothespins, ruler and tape measure, pencil, scissors, hand towel and lunch. Fee: $22 members, $25 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Call 659-2559 for information.

SALT MARSH WALK

Get your feet wet! On Sunday, May 26, from 1 to 3:30 p.m., join Bill Perkins of the Science Center for a walk to a 1,000 year-old salt marsh. Bill will discuss and explain the "whys and wherefores" of the slow changes taking place in this marsh. Why are fresh water plant species appearing? Dress comfortably including shoes or boots which will probably get wet. Fee: $5 members, $7 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Rte. 123, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Toastmasters

A Toastmasters "Open House" for aspiring public speakers is scheduled for 7 p.m., Tuesday, May 21, at the Scituate Public Library.

This is a regular weekly meeting of the South Shore Toastmasters Speaking Club which is inviting the public to observe and/or participate in their program of prepared and impromptu speeches.

State Senator Bill Golden will be a special guest speaker for the "Open House" meeting.

The South Shore Toastmasters Speaking is one of 80 Toastmasters Speaking Club is one of 80 Toastmasters clubs in the Boston-Providence-Worcester area and part of the international network of 5,000 Toastmasters International clubs in 50 countries.

TM Clubs each have 15 to 20 members, both men and women, who meet weekly to help each other improve their public speaking skills and learn leadership techniques as well.

For more information about Toastmasters call Joel Balmat, 545-1369, Ron Goodwin, 383-0381, or Jim Randall, 893-7652.

Obituaries

Forrest E. King

Forrest E. King, Jr., 53 of North Scituate, owner of a Cohasset jewelry store, died Saturday in a one-car accident on Gannett Road in Scituate.

Mr. King was born in Arlington and had lived with his family in Lexington until they moved to Scituate when he was 14 years old. He was a graduate of Scituate High School and the Waltham Horologial School.

In 1954, Mr. King took over his father's business, King Jewelers, which was founded in 1921. At the time, the shop was located on Front Street in Scituate Harbor. King Jewlers moved to Cushing Plaza in Cohasset in 1964.

He was a member of the board of directors of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce which was formed in late 1983 to promote business in Cohasset both in the village and on Route 3A.

Mr. King was an Air Force veteran of the Korean War. He held a private pilot's license and kept his Cessna airplane at Marshfield Airport.

He was a member of the Satuit Lodge Masonic Lodge of Scituate, the Hatherly Country Club and the National Retail Jewelers of America.

He leaves his wife, Joan E. (Rhodes) King; three daughters, Valarie J. Medici of Duxbury, Victoria J. King, a gemologist who worked with her father, and Vanessa J. King, both of North Scituate; a brother, Charles W. "Bud" King of Scituate, former owner of the Scituate Playhouse movie theatre; a sister Phyllis Warren of North Carolina, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Monday at St. Luke's Episcopal Church. Burial was in Fairview Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, Southeastern Massachusetts Division, 1105 W. Chestnut St., Brockton, 02401.

Constance P. Brown

Constance P. (Dexter) Brown, formerly of North Scituate and Cohasset died at her home in Orange, May 3. She was 72.

Born in Quincy, Mrs. Brown studied at Simmons College and the University of Vermont. She was an accomplished commercial artist.

She and her late husband, Richard L. Brown, were best known for their business, Bound Brook Press in North Scituate, the area in which they lived most of their lives.

She leaves several nieces and nephews, including F. Dexter Fulton of Pembroke; Mary Jane Dexter Green of Royalston and Richard E. Dexter of Elkhart, Indiana.

Private graveside services will be held by the family in the near future. The Rev. George Hodgkins will officiate. Burial will be at the Fairview Cemetery in Scituate.

What Items Are Important About A Headache?

Headache is probably one of the commonest symptoms that brings people to see their doctor. Certainly, an occasional headache may be due simply to tension or stress. Headaches that recur day after day, however, may be caused by other problems.

At the BEHAVIORAL MEDICINE INSTITUTE, we feel that all headaches need to be treated with respect. The first issue with any significant headache is to be certain that there is not an underlying medical problem that causes it. Once that matter is dealt with, there are many features that need to be taken into account to try to tailor the appropriate relief to the individual.

The classification of a headache may include what part of the head hurts, how long the headaches last, how old is the individual, and what role the patient's dietary habits might play in the headaches. What time of the day does it occur; all of these factors must be taken into account.

Probably more important, a thorough neurological examination, basic laboratory tests, and an evaluation of the person 's personal habits and personality make up, all must be taken into account. M.D.'s, psychologists, and technologists all may play roles.

At the Behavioral Medicine Institute we fit relief to discomfort, and we do it for the individual. If you have trouble with headaches, call us at the Behavioral Medicine Institute.

Memorial service

A memorial service will be held for Clarence R. Nowack Sunday, May 19, at 2 p.m. in the Cohasset Congregational Church on the Common in Cohasset.

He was formerly a resident of Cohasset for many years, also Plymouth and Hyannis, and died in Stuart, Florida at the age of 76 on February 12 after a long illness.

He is survived by his wife, the former Ruth Jacobson; three daughters, Mrs. Nancy J. Noble of Hingham, Ma., Mrs. Patricia A. Smith of Pasadena, Cal. and Mrs. Susan R. Cook of Duxbury, Ma., fourteen grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Mr. Nowack was born in Chicago on October 4, 1908 and educated in Chicago schools. He devoted his adult life to the shoe business, starting as a young manager of a Regal Shoe Co. store in Chicago, then spent several early years with Marshall Field & Co. as a buyer and merchandiser of men's shoes.

After a number of years in New York buying and merchandising men's shoes for the Associated Merchandising Co. he moved his family to New England in 1954 when he joined the George E. Keith Co. of Brockton as vice-president and retail sales manager of all Walk-Over stores.

In 1964 he became associated with the Stetson Shoe Co. of South Weymouth in executive sales and later retired to the Cape where he merchandised ladies' shoes for Puritan Co. of Cape Cod.

Mr. Nowack had been residing with his wife in Stuart, Florida for the past nine years, spending their summers in Hingham. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Stuart, Florida. He was a member of Konohassett Lodge A.F. & A.M.

Parfait takes Sunday's doubleheader

By Melissa Barcomb

Stawberry Parfait

The Strawberry Parfait softball team evened out their record at 3-3 by sweeping both ends of a double header last Sunday, against the Weymouth Police.

The Parfait team scored a total of 46 runs in the two games.

With scores of 28-8 in the first game, and 19-8 in the second, the Parfait sluggers showed little respect for law and order as they buried the Weymouth Police team under an avalanche of 53 hits for the day.

Thanks to the impressive pitching of David Patrolia, the Weymouth Police came away with few hits.

Coach David Pamerico cited Joe Dooley, Patrolia, Hans Bauer, Marty McGinn and Joe Pamerico, as all having a good day at bat. During the second game, Torin Sweeney, John Usher, Donny Cahill and Dooley all averaged about three solid hits, with Cahill scoring a home run.

In the fifth inning of game one, the Parfait team scored a total of 17 runs. Coach Pamerico attributed some of the high scoring to the many "good base runners." He said Usher and Kevin Dooley were particularly good.

Weymouth seemed to be making a comeback in the seventh inning of game one by scoring three runs and displaying some aggressive outfield play. Nevertheless, David Rourke caught the third out and thus the game ended with a final score of 28-8.

Joe Dooley began the second game with a triple hit to the rightfield corner. Marcioli, a strong hitter for Weymouth, tied the score with a home run, making it 3-3.

The third inning commenced with a new umpire. After some heated disagreements, the umpire who was obligated to officiate over both games, walked off the field.

Instead of discontinuing the game, Coach Pamerico assumed position behind the plate and proceeded to call the remainder of game two. The Parfait finished the double header with a score of 19-8 in the second game.

Coach Pamerico commented on the team's slow start this season with one win and three losses. After Sunday's team effort and hard work, the Strawberry Parfait is no longer at a disadvantage with a record of three for three.

Next Sunday's game will be held at the Marshfield softball field at 9:30 a.m. All of the games played this summer will be doubleheaders.

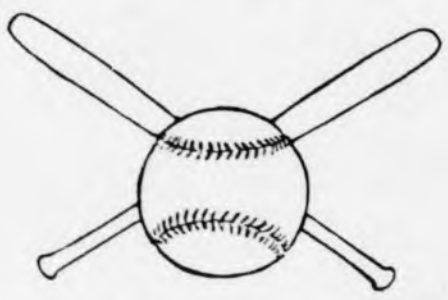
Cohasset sports scene for the week

By Lisa Shumaker

Boys' Baseball



The boys started off their week with an exciting victory over Scituate, 7-6. At the end of the fourth inning Cohasset was leading, 7-1. Scituate made a run at them in the fifth and sixth innings scoring five runs, but the skippers hung tough and pulled out the win.

Pitcher Peter Sandbloom played well defensively and picked up the win, while Todd Fitzpatrick got the save, Bobby Shultz also turned in a good effort for Cohasset.

Thursday, the boys traveled to Rockland and were beaten, 3-0. Lack of offense caused the defeat, according to coach Joe Bouchard. Altogether, Cohasset had a total of four hits. Overall, Bouchard was pleased with his team's play and was proud of the fact that the game stayed so close. Sean Corkery pitched well, but as Bouchard points out there were no hits to back him up.

Friday, the Skippers clinched a victory over Whitman/Hanson 1-0. Bobby Shultz's base hit brought Todd Fitzpatrick home with the only run in the contest.

Pitcher Mike Gentile allowed only three base hits the entire game. Bouchard also mentioned third baseman Peter Sandbloom as having an outstanding game.

The boys are now 6-8 which is thought to be the best Cohasset baseball record in 11 years. The Skippers hope to keep the streak going this week as they face Middleboro Monday, East Bridgewater Wednesday, and travel to Hull Thursday. Bouchard is connfident, and feels his team will be competitive in all 3 contests.

Boys' Tennis

The boys are back on the winning trail again as they turned their 1-6 record around to 4-6, with three wins last week. Monday they squeezed past Hanover, 3-2. The entire match came down to the second doubles team of Jason Marsac and Fred Willshire who after losing their first set 1-6, came back to win the second set and the tie breaker 6-3 and 8-6. Coach Toni Jillson was very impressed with the efforts of these two boys, and she feels the key to the victory was the fact that her team was back to full strength.

Other winners Tuesday were second singles player Chris Ryan and third singles player Chris Neelon.

Wednesday, the boys defeated second place Scituate, 3-2. Before this match, Scituate had lost only to Duxbury. Jillson thought it was quite an achievement to hand Scituate its second defeat of the season.

Rich Redick, Cohasset's first singles player, clobbered his oppenent 6-0, 6-1, while Chris Ryan and Chris Neelon also won.

Thursday, the Skippers shut out Rockland, 5-0. In this match Cohasset won 48 sets out of a possible 50. Jillson feels her team is picking up their spirits and playing much more aggressively and with more confidence.

This week the boys meet Rockland Monday, Scituate Wednesday, and Hull Thursday, Jillson hopes to sweep all three matches and keep Cohasset's winning streak going.

Girls' Tennis

Wednesday, the girls were handed their second defeat of the season in Scituate, 4-1. Scituate had gotten much stronger, according to coach Sue Dalrymple, and were just too tough to beat that day.

The second doubles team consisting of Lauren Haynes and Jessica Hamilton were Cohasset's only winners Wednesday. These two played exceptionally well. Ingrid Anderson also played well, according to Dalrymple, but unfortunately could not pull out a victory.

Thursday, the girls bounced back and defeated Rockland, 5-0. Dalrymple was pleased with her team's performance and felt it showed a lot of courage to come back and play so well after such a tough loss the day before.

Singles players Ingrid Anderson, Kerri Kirkendall, and Jennifer Chapman dominated their matches and won. Doubles teams Lauren Haynes and Jessica Hamilton and Megan Kelly and Lisa Peachell won decisively as well.

The girls are now 9-2 and tied with Scituate for second place. The Skippers travel to Middleboro on Monday and East Bridgewater on Wednesday. Thursday, Cohasset faces Hanover which is expected to be a tough match.

Boys' Track

Tuesday, the boys lost to the power-house Duxbury 89½ to 55½ Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with this meet and felt that any time a team holds Duxbury under 100 points, it should be proud. Overall, Anderson said that it was a relatively close meet.

Mark McManus picked up a first in the mile and Rob Holland won the two-mile. Floyd Hardwick had a great day, winning three events and picking up a second in another.

Thursday, the boys decisively won their first meet, 106-39 against Hull. Anderson calls this one of his team's strongest meets. Incredibly the Skippers swept four events.

Floyd Hardwick won all four of the events he entered and continues to amaze everyone with his performance. Mike DeSantis and John Rattenbury each picked up two firsts, while Jeff Aaron, Rob Holland, Mark McManus, and Stephen Brown each placed first one time.

Girls' Softball

The girls started off the week defeating Scituate Wednesday 10-8. Even though Cohasset had a rough day defensively, their offense took over and won the game for them.

Janet DiGirolamo and Carla Lucas led Cohasset on both offense and defense. Each had two hits and Janet came home four times while Carla batted four runners home. Lisa Shumaker and Debbie Hartley each had two hits.

Thursday, the Skippers saw their 6-4 lead in the seventh inning vanish as they lost 11-7 in extra innings. According to coach Bill Fallon, Cohasset left too many people on base and made too many defensive mistakes at crucial points in the game.

Tara Stanford and Jill Nedrau each had two hits and turned in good all-around efforts.

Friday, the girls lost a heart-breaker to Whitman/Hanson, 3-2. Fallon thought his team played excellent defense, but they could not produce any offense.

Tara Stanford and Janet DiGirolamo each had one hit. Anne O'Leary, Janet DiGirolamo, and Margie Murphy all had outstanding games defensively.

This week Cohasset travels to East Bridgewater on Wednesday. The Skippers have already beaten this club and will hopefully win again Wednesday. Thursday, the girls face Hull which should prove to be an exciting game. The girls only have to win two more games in order to qualify for the state tournament and hopefully they will do it this week.

Golf

The boys had a relatively good week last week, beating Rockland and losing to a very strong Scituate team. Cohasset only needs a few more wins to make the state tournament May 28. The Skippers' record now stands at six wins and four losses.

The top six players are as follows: number one Troy Chatterton; number two Chris Powers; number three Paul Froio; number four Glen Froio; number five Jeff Hartwell; and number six John Froio.

Troy's record now stands at eight wins and a mere two losses. Chris Powers' record is six wins and four loses.

This week, the boys play Duxbury Monday, and on Tuesday travel to Sandwich.

Girls' Track

Duxbury defeated the girls Tuesday, However, Cohasset did surprisingly well, according to coach Claire Brady, and placed in many events. Brady was very proud of her team's achievements.

Both Jane Delima and Caitlin Staunton picked up two firsts in this meet. Janet Bagley, Liz O'Leary, and Sara Seavey each placed first in one event. Brady also mentioned Julie Bowdoin and Sara Hamilton who also did very well and came in third in their events.

Thursday, the girls just barely missed beating Hull. Brady felt that her team should have won, but bad luck plagued Cohasset and caused the defeat.

Jane Delima, Liz O'Leary, Sara Hamilton, and Sara Seavey each picked up a first in this meet. Janet Bagley had two seconds and a third while Caitlin Staunton picked up two seconds. Brady also cited Kerri Anglin and Erin Chase as doing well on Thursday.

This week the girls have their last dual meet against Norwell on Monday.

South Shore Art Center news

Popular children's courses

Two very successful vacation drop in art programs for children are good indicators of the wide spread popularity of the South Shore Art Center's offerings.

The total attendance for the February and April vacation drop ins was 412 children, ages seven to 12; 217 at the Hingham location in the community center amd 195 in Cohasset at the Center's location, 103 Ripley Road.

The drop ins allow children to come to the Center on a daily basis during vacation weeks to work on art projects. Instructors this year were Gil Coyle for film and art, Syma for clay, Serena Brundige for painting and prints and Lisbeth Koopman Wyman for painting.

On an informal basis, the drop ins give children a chance to explore their imaginations by working with many different media. Having the two locations made the drop ins much more accessible to young artists. Next year, the Center hopes to offer similar programs in more South Shore communities.

Funding from the Brooks Foundation and the Hingham, Norwell, and Hull Arts Lottery Councils made the 1985 drop ins possible.

A summer arts festival

An elegant evening at the Oaks . . . strolling in the garden and taking in the panoramic view . . . will usher in the 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival.

The champagne preview of festival winners, Thursday, June 27 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Oaks, corporate offices for Yankee Gas and Oil, provides a perfect kickoff for three days of summer fun celebrating the visual and performing arts. In 30 years, the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, has made the last weekend in June synonymous with arts festival and green and white striped tents.

Combining the best of the last 30 years, this season's summer festival offers the juried art shows, member's shows, Ray Smith and his Paramount Jazz Band, Mirage Mime, storyteller Judith Black, a band concert on the Common, artist demonstrations, a President's Choice exhibit featuring works by Scott Ketchum, children's art, workshops and much more. Winners of the juried exhibit awards will be announced during the champagne preview and guests will have an opportunity to see these works of art.

Ray Smith's Paramount Jazz Band returns to Cohasset for a performance at Town Hall, Friday, June 28, 8:30 p.m. The jazz concert will follow the President's Choice opening at the South Shore Art Center which begins at 6:30 p.m. The band will lead a parade from the Art Center to the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets for the jazz concert are $12.50

A letter to become a sponsor, patron, or benefactor of this year's summer arts festival has been sent to friends of the South Shore Art Center. Traditionally, the arts festival has been an important source of revenue for the center and the 30th anniversary marks the beginning of a major fund development program geared toward expansion of programs and facilities.

All contributions will include admission to the gala champagne preview at the Oaks. Parking for this event will be at the Cohasset Common and free trolley rides will take guests to the Oaks.

For those wishing more information on festival, or to make a donation, contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Art center scholarships

Three high school seniors from the South Shore have been named recipients of the South Shore Art Center's scholarships.

The Center, 103 Ripley Road, awards three scholarships to graduating seniors who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited art school.

Recipient of the $1000 Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship goes to Caroline Perry of Scituate, who will be attending Massachusetts College of Art; recipient of the $500 Marion Huse Scholarship, Jennifer S. Johnson of Carver, going to to Rhode Island School of Design; and recipient of the $200 MacIvor Reddie Award, to Laurie Ann Turner of West Bridgewater, going to the Rhode Island School of Design.

The jurors selected the three recipients based on the contents of their portfolios. This year 38 portfolios were submitted from students representing Randolph, Carver, Hingham, Scituate, Weymouth, Pembroke, Norwell, Canton, Duxbury, Marshfield, Rockland, Milton, West Bridgewater and Brockton.

First honorable mention went to Paula Murphy of Marshfield and honorable mention were given to Marjorie Dickson of Rockland, Joseph Hicks of Rockland, Maria Madden of Marshfield, and Melissa O'Malley of Brockton.

Jurying the portfolios for the Bergfors scholarship were Mrs. Constance Bergfors Rice, one of the trustees of the Bergfors Fund, named for the lifelong Quincy resident, businessman, and civic leader, Fred E. Bergfors. Jurying for the other two scholarships was Don Lettis, academic dean, Massachusetts College of Art, and Virginia Allen, professor and program director of art history, Massachusetts College of Art.

In jurying this year's portfolios, the jurors were impressed with the high quality of work submitted. And the schools represented by the students indicates the geographical impact the South Shore Art Center has on the area.

This year's chairperson of the scholarship committee was Claudia Maciel of Cohasset. The winners of this year's awards will be announced at their graduation exercises.

Youth theater meeting

South Shore youths between 13 and 22 years old are reminded that the Young People's Summer Theatre will hold their annual registration meeting Monday, June 3 at 7 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

At the meeting details of this year's musical "Barnum," will be discussed. Youths will have the opportunity to get an idea of what auditions for the show will be like as well as be able to hear the music requirements for the show.

Auditions will be held on Sunday, June 9 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the church. Those auditioning should attend only one of those timeslots.

There is a $15 non-refundable registration fee for the program. Don Capen, Director of YPST, recently explained the fee.

The fee is payable at the registration meeting June 3. More information can be obtained by calling 871-5831, or requesting an annual letter.

A mother's decision to set her children free

By Mary Mahoney

If you love someone, set them free.

I heard those words a few times during the years when the kids were growing up, but I never really felt the pain and joy of their meaning until last summer. That's when Beth, our oldest, announced, after studying in Spain for the year, that she intended to return there to join a religious community.

At first I was angry; how could she do this to us. Her father and I had asked her to finish her last year of college out in Milwaukee before she made any other commitments for her future.

Later, when I realized the force of the new life calling her, I was fearful. How would she live with the discipline of the Spanish spirituality—this vivacious daughter who, one minute could proclaim she was in love and then without warning say she was thinking about joining a cloister or planning a career as a professional dancer.

I couldn't bear to think of her choosing a life of poverty but I knew that would be easy for her. During her year at the University of Madrid, I was with her in the spring when she saved fruit from breakfast to give to the poor mothers begging on the street with their babies. I saw her Spanish friends with her clothes and other material possessions she needed to give away.

I know how much she loved her family and especially her little brother—it was Beth who brought him to me when he was five months old to show me how he could sit up for the first time and how, a few months later he took his first steps by himself—and still she didn't change her mind about leaving.

Then as the day of her departure grew closer, I began to understand what she needed most from me was my love and support. As friends told me later, "You don't have to like it but you have to accept it."

I finally understood that Beth's decision was important to her growth. She needed to make the break—needed to acknowlege the call within herself. It occurred to me that to postpone it would only delay her maturity. And in the letting go, I could also see the process of my own growth.

I've done fairly well so far dealing with her absence. We call her once a month, we write and send packages and she really seems happy. I thought I had passed the rough times—until Easter came. The longing to be with Beth in Spain, as I was last year, overwhelmed me.

Then Lisa Messersmith, our staff reporter here at the Mariner, announced she had been accepted to the Peace Corps. As I listened to Lisa, (also 22, also the oldest in the family), talk about her plans to live and teach in Africa for the next two years, my sense of loss heightened as I thought of the parallel of the two young women reaching out across the world in search of fulfillment.

The risks that Beth and Lisa are taking to live in another culture, without really knowing what lies ahead, is both painful and joyful for me.

The pain lies in my undeniable role as mother and the fear of what will become of these two beautiful people living thousands of miles away from home. I worry—will they be safe, will they be lonely or frightened, will there be someone to care for them, to love them.

The joy is the inspiration they have given me for my own life.

I am reminded of a line from William Wordsworth's poem, "My Heart Leaps Up When I Behold," which I have recalled many times in my mothering career: "The Child is father of the Man." I have learned so much about life from these two kids. They have taught me that real living is risk-taking; it's responding to an inner voice in spite of fear of the unknown; it's being aware of our own values, what's important to us and it's a call to action in the face of all opposition or lack of understanding.

I asked Lisa how she came to make the commitment to the Peace Corps and she told me simply, it's a decision she made long ago—a response to her own life experiences. She sees it as the beginning of her life; the first real choice she had made for herself. "It's just something I have to do."

I am awed by that—the beauty astounds me.

To have that selfless sense of others, to be drawn to serve people of another culture and to be willing to accept them with their beliefs and values, is to me, the essence of world peace.

I wanted to hold Beth and tell her not to go last summer. I wanted to do the same now to Lisa. But the world needs these kids and to let them go is to really love them. And because of who they are, I've come to believe there are many others just like them with the lofty ideals and dreams.

Do what you have to do, Lisa, and come back home soon. I need to be reminded that life is an adventure.

But if you decide there are other places you must go—it will be okay. You and Beth have taught me that much.

Boaters beware of May's changing weather

By Warren Waitkus

During May, boaters and ocean fishermen go to sea in ever increasing numbers. Sailing and fishing the coastal waters has always been a risky business and every precaution should be taken to ensure a safe return to port.

A sunny morning with light breezes can give way to an afternoon lashed by powerful winds, often ending in disaster to small craft that put to sea without consulting a reliable weather forecast. Listening and leaving at daybreak for your favorite offshore fishing spot is not good enough.

The best source of up to date weather information, in my opinion, is the National Weather Service. NOAA weather radio is a service of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) of the U.S. Department of Commerce. It provides continuous broadcasts of the latest weather information directly from National Weather Service (NWS) offices. Taped weather messages are repeated every four to six minutes and are routinely revised every one to three hours, or more frequently if needed. The stations operate 24 hours daily.

The broadcasts are tailored to weather information needs of people within the receiving area. Stations along the coast provide specialized weather reports for boaters, fishermen, and others engaged in marine activities, as well as general weather information. Along the Massachusetts coast the forecasts can be received on 162.475 MHz at Boston and 162.55 MHz at Hyannis.

During severe weather, NWS forecasters can interrupt the routine broadcasts and substitute special warning messages. The forecasters can also activate specially designed warning receivers. Such receivers either sound an alarm indicating that an emergency exists, alerting the listener to turn the receiver up to an audible volume, or when operated in a muted mode, are automatically turned on so that the warning message is heard.

NOAA weather radio broadcasts are on one of seven high-band FM frequencies ranging from 162.40 MHz to 162.55 MHz. A number of radio manufacturers offer special weather radios to operate on these frequencies, at reasonable prices, with or without the emergency warning alarm. Also, there are now many radios on the market which offer standard AM/FM frequencies plus the "weather band" as an added feature.

The National Weather Service operates more than 350 stations. Approximately 90 percent of the nation's population is within listening range of a NOAA weather broadcast, so turn a weather ear to NOAA, and safe sailing.

If you have a question concerning "Weather Radio" write to National Weather Service (Attn: W112), National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Silver Spring, MD 20910.

APRIL SUMMARY

During April drought was the topic of weather conversation. In the simplest definition, a drought is a prolonged and abnormal lack of precipitation. Since last November we have had below normal precipitation, but within the normal range of fluctuation.

However, we are facing a possible water shortage. Not because of the vagaries of nature, but because of our misuse of this precious commodity. We have polluted wells, built vast shopping malls that divert rainfall from the ground water chain. A trip to the beach isn't good enough, we have to have backyard pools, and wash our cars while the hose runs into the gutter. If a major drought occurs we will only have ourselves to blame for the tremendous restrictions that will be placed upon us.

Total melted precipitation, at my station in Marshfield, was 1.88 inches, 1.72 inches below normal. There was one-half inch of measurable, 0.4 inches below normal. Maximum 24-hour was .74 inches on April 1. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on 13 days with a trace on two days. The maximum 24-hour snowfall which was .50 inches occurred on April 8. Total precipitation this year has been 9.24, 4.57 inches below normal.

The mean temperature was 45 degrees, 2.1 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 56.3 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 33.7 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 20 degrees on the 10th and 13th with a high reading of 85 degrees on the 30th.

There were three clear days, 23 partly cloudy days and four cloudy days. The average wind speed was 12.3 mph; normal is 13.5 mph. The peak gust was 50 mph on April 6.

The normal heating season ends on May 23.

WEATHER Q AND A

Q. Under what weather conditions would the blood in a human boil?

A. This would not be experienced on the surface of the earth. However, at an altitude of about 63,000 feet, in the atmosphere, the blood in the body would begin to boil at normal body temperature. If an aircraft pilot was suddenly exposed to the lower pressure of the rarefied air at that altitude, unconsciousness would be almost instant.

Have a good day and a nice forever.

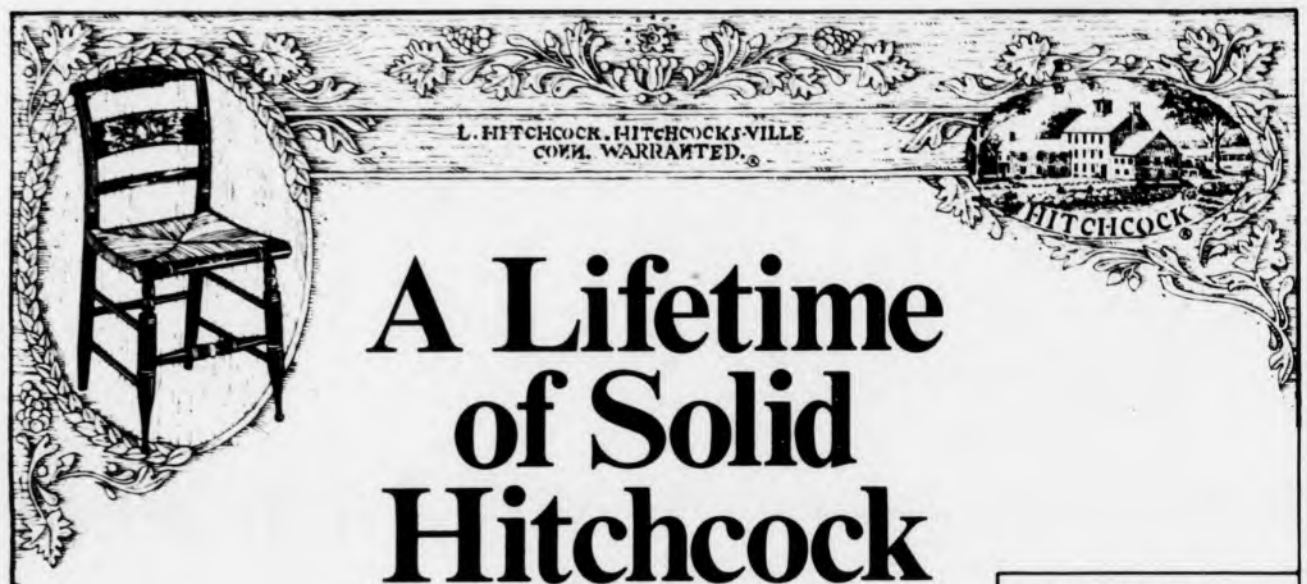
Thayer play features local students

Working, a subject that is close to everyone's life, is the theme of this year's Noble and Greenough School spring musical. Based on the 1972 book by Studs Terkel, "Working" has been set to music by Stephen Schwartz (who also wrote "Pippin" and "Godspell") and singer James Taylor. Its dialogue is the language of the waitresses, executives, millworkers, truckers, and hundreds of other working people interviewed by Terkel all over America during the early 1970's, and its music feels the pulse and heartbeat of the America that works.

Local students who are featured in "Working" are Lindsey Berents, Cyndy Bell, and Scott Dwyer, all of Cohasset.

Produced by members of the Nobles Performing Arts Department under the direction of Dr. Frank Bellizia, the show features a cast of 27 actors, singers, and dancers.



Performances of "Working" will take place Friday, May 17, at 8 p.m. and Saturday, May 18, at 2 and 8 p.m. in the Lawrence Auditorium on the school campus in Dedham. All seats are $5 and are reserved; they may be obtained by calling the school office at 326-3700.

The Saturday evening performance will also benefit the June tour to England of 32 students who will be performing a program of American music, including selections from "Working", at five British high schools.

Recreation program schedule

Museum Tour

The Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Recreation Department will hold a special pre-summer season guided tour of the society's two museums located at Cohasset Center at 11 a.m. Friday, May 24. Cohasset and area residents and visitors are invited.

Please pre-register for the tour by calling the Recreation Department's Town Hall office, at 383-6791.

This marks the fourth year of Recreation Department-sponsored museum tours held at the Historical Society's facilities. The Capt. Wilson Historical House is an 1810 home holding a representative collection of antique furnishings, furniture, kitchenware, children's toys and artworks donated from a number of Cohasset's oldest houses. The Maritime Museum, a late 1700's ship chandlery, contains numerous artifacts, documents, prints and paintings relating to the town's seafaring past during America's great "Age of Sail."

Included are relics from some of the numerous shipwrecks which occurred locally, equipment and gear from the town's 19th century mackerel fishing fleets, and the story of the famous Minot's lighthouse located off Cohasst shores. The Maritime Museum houses a general collection of historical artifacts from the town's earliest days and an exhibit of stone tools of the Quonahasset Indians. Each of the society's two museums is unique and each portrays the historical heritage of a small New England seacoast town.

Please register early for this special pre-season tour. The fee for this event is a $1 donation at the door.

New cable guide

American Cablesystems is now providing The Electronic Program Guide (EPG), an on-screen program guide for its cable television subscribers in Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover, Hingham and Hull.

This satellite-delivered programming service on Channel 2 provides updated programming information 24 hours a day for cable channels and now includes the network listings for Channels 4, 5, and 7.

Innovative technology allows the schedule for American Cablesystems to be transmitted by United Video, Inc. via satellite from Tulsa, Oklahoma. Network, local, independent, basic, and pay programming schedules are fed into United Video's computer system, along with the individual system's localized programming and advertising information.

Smiling for the camera is a rested Josh Stevenson, 12, who is taking a well-deserved rest from soccer on the Common. (Bill Quigley)

Combined job faces town meeting vote

and acting town accountant.

An article will be submitted into the June 17 special Town Meeting, requesting that selectmen file special legislation to remove the accountant's position from Civil Service. Once it is approved and removed, an article will be inserted in the next special or annual town meeting, proposing a single office of executive secretary and town accountant.

The office of town accountant will not become formally vacant until October, since retired accountant William Signorelli will not have expended his alloted sick leave and vacation time until that date.

When Andrew begins his employment June 3, he will receive a weekly salary of $730.77. Once all the procedural steps are followed, and Andrew is appointed to the combined position, he will sign a three-year contract at a starting annual salary of $40,000.

Although selectmen said they have yet to work out the details, the combined position will save the town money. The two separate positions included salaries of more than $30,000 each. Personnel staffing in each office has yet to be developed, but selectmen said that even with additional staff hours, there will be a substantial salary savings with the combined position.

When asked last week how the idea was formulated, Selectman Clifford Mitman responded that no such thoughts developed until they interviewed Andrew for the accountant's position two weeks ago. "We saw his qualifications, experience and abilities and we knew what we were looking for and what we needed. So that got us to thinking about combining."

The 35-year old Brookline resident is currently senior accountant for that town, and is a part-time accountant for the town of Holbrook. He has served as town accountant and clerk to the board of selectmen and board of health in the town of Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard.

Selectmen have been without a permanent executive secretary since September, 1984. Town Accountant Signorelli informed the board he was resigning in April because of health reasons, although there was some discussion that he would be returning to the position when it appeared his health had improved. When selectmen learned he would not be returning, they scheduled several interview two weeks ago.

It was during that time that selectmen interviewed Andrew, which culminated in the proposal to combine the two vacant positions.

Previously, selectmen had voted to offer a contract to Bernard Cooper for executive secretary. The two sides were not able to reach a compatible contract figure. Prior to negotiations with Cooper, selectmen had offered the position to two other candidates, both of whom rejected their contract offers.

Government structure chairman McNabb has requested copies of the executive session held by selectmen May 4 in which the combination position was proposed. Those meeting minutes will be available to the public by the end of this week.

McNabb said his committee reacted negatively to the way in which selectmen proposed the significant change.

"We have taken no formal vote, but the consensus of the committee is that there are serious doubts about whether one person can handle both jobs, and whether one person ought to be handling both jobs," he said Monday night. "It appears to be a hasty decision which was not well thought out."

He enumerated the committee concerns, adding, "we have expressed our strong disapproval of the manner in which this decision was reached. We are particularly disturbed that the decision to consolidate was made in executive session. It should have been reached in an open session before they voted."

The committee's other concern, he noted, that the position for which Andrew was hired was never advertised.

"We will reserve judgement on the vote until the special town meeting. Our primary role is to advise town meeting and the town and I expect we will be doing much research on the matter before it comes before the town meeting," McNabb stated.

Community remembers a special place part of the bank to offer it to the community," she stated. Mary has been a part of that business community for many years, coming to the Rockland Trust branch office when the plaza was built 18 years ago.

The bank promised 18 years ago, to maintain and service the Cushing Room for use by any community group. That promise was kept throughout the years.

But maintaince costs, along with rental fees, climbed each year and the bank employees knew the Cushing Room was becoming a burdensome expense. When a new gourmet shop decided to locate next door and needed the extra space, it was decided that the Cushing Room would have to be nudged out of existence.

Construction workers began the demolition last week, and little-by-little, the room vanished. Only the mantle was left by the end of the week, and now even that is gone.

"There are two girls in the bank who have worked here a long time, just like me. We are really going to miss all the people who used to come to that room for their meetings. After so many years, we got to know a lot of them. We really commiserated with them when they found out the room was going to be demolished," Mary added.

Virtually everyone on the South Shore attended a function or meeting at the Cushing Room at least once, she noted. Whether it was a school-related or community issue, likely it was discussed within the walls of the Cushing Room.

"It was a place that everyone loved and appreciated," according to Mary, a longtime Cohasset resident who now lives in Scituate. "Everyone who used it, loved it."

The bank employees changed the interior decorations twice during the past years. It had a comfortable, yet elegeant atmosphere - perfect for a club meeting or a discussion session. Regular attendees often made donations to the room. The Democratic Town Committee of the South Shore gave the bank a large American flag which stood proudly in a corner of the room, Mary said. A beautiful wall clock was another donation, along with a wall plaque depicting Minot Light.

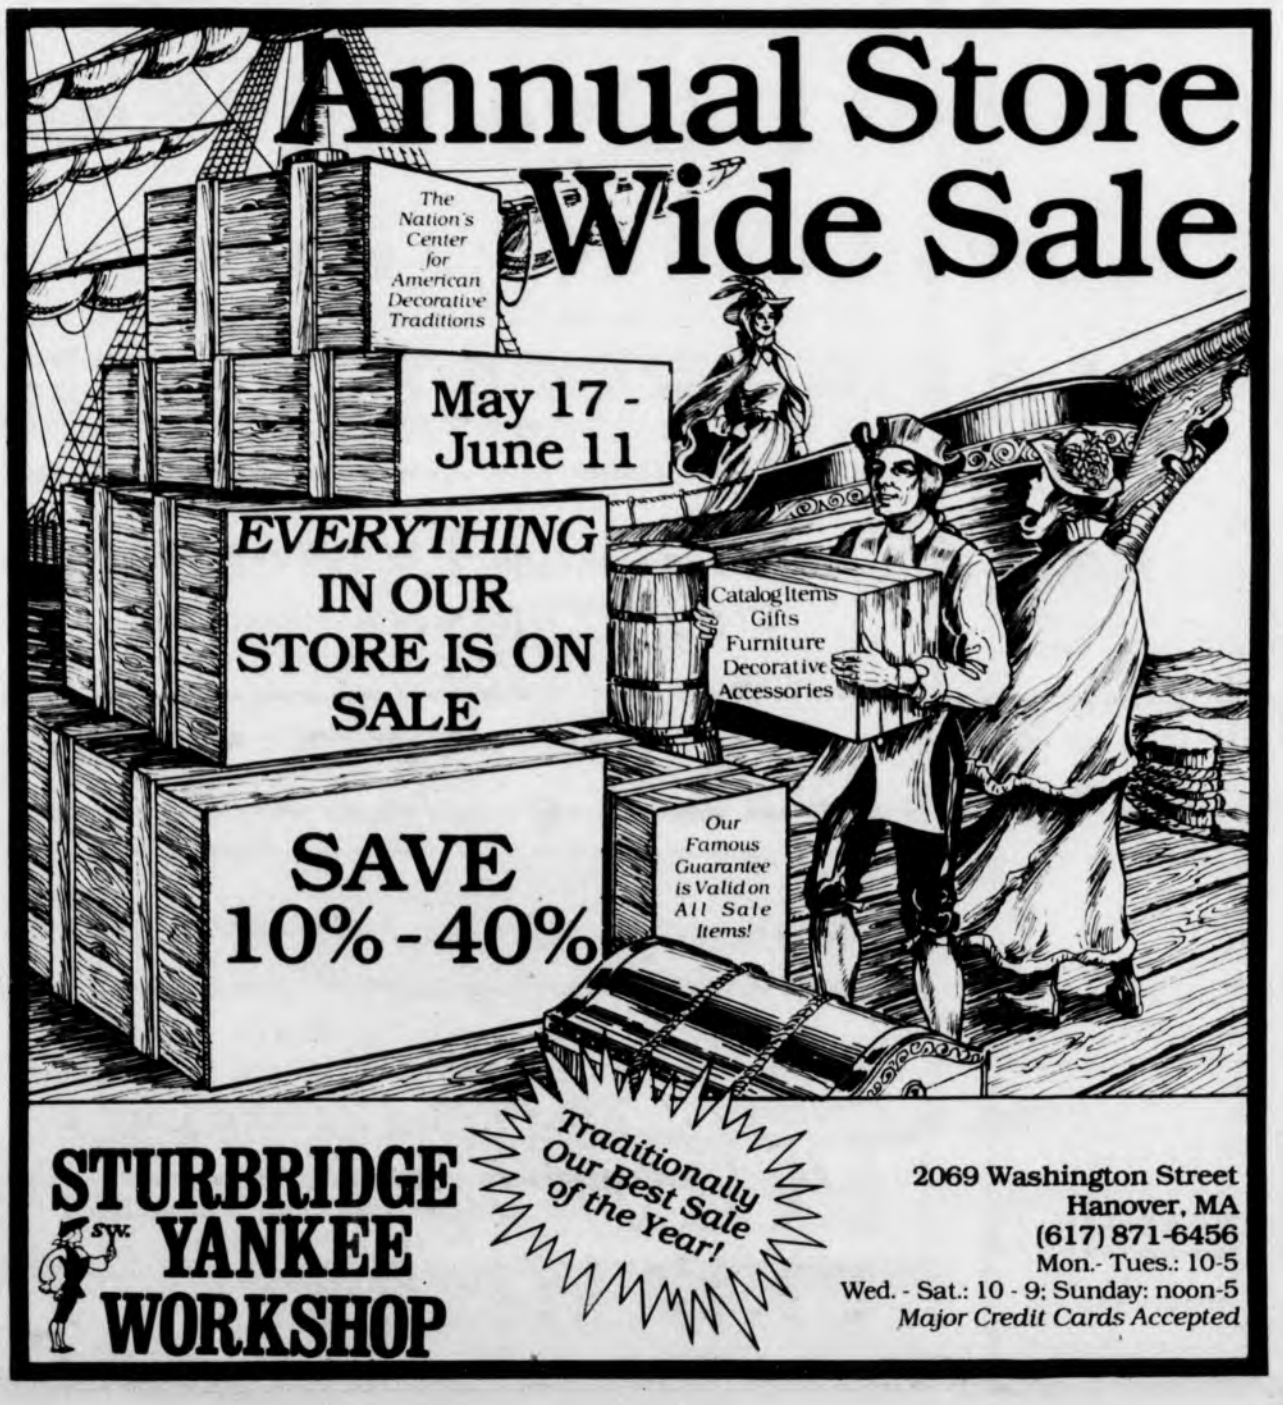
Many people have fond memories of the room, she said. A few incidents which occurred weren't too happy then, but in hindsight they are amusing. There was one occasion when a woman entered the rest room while club members were concluding the evening's business. When she exited from the bathroom, everyone had left the room and locked the doors behind them.

Because the front door locked from the outside, the woman was left in the dark, alone . . . for four hours. Luckily, someone making a fortunate night deposit at the bank next door, saw the distressed woman in the window and called police.

"It wasn't funny at all when it happened, but it's a bit amusing when you talk about it now," she reflected.

Since the room was opened to the public, letters of appreciation have poured in from groups and organizations throughout the South Shore. "A couple of the letters actually made me cry. One man wrote and said, 'you'll never know how many people have been helped throughout the years because they met in this room.' It was really a beautiful letter," she said.

People in the South Shore appreciated the Cushing Room, Mary said. And in her mind, and in the memories of many others, it can not be forgotten.



Choral Art Society concert May 18

The Choral Art Society's final concert of its 27th season will present music by Beethoven and Brahms. The performance will take place Saturday, May 18, at 8 p.m. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rte. 3A and First Parish Rd., Scituate.

For the program music director William Sano has chosen Beethoven's Mass in C, his concert aria "Ah! Perfido," to be sung by Norwell soprano Pamela Wolfe, and his setting for men's voices of "The Heavens Are Telling the Glory of God." The Brahms works are "Ave Maria" for women's voices, and "Nanie," a setting of the Schiller poem lamenting the passing of beauty and perfection but praising the art of song that makes them live. The entire concert will be accompanied by orchestra, Dorothy Bales concertmaster.

Members of the chorus are soloists in the many quartets of the Beethoven Mass: from Marshfield, Paula Clough and John and Margaret Stevermer; from Scituate, Paula Carroll and Carol Miles; from Norwell Thomas Clark, and from Duxbury, Linda Healy, Terry Howard, and Judith Reiman. Guest soloists are Rockland Osgood, tenor, and Richard Benefield, baritone, both with advanced degrees in vocal music and both soloists in prominent Boston churches.

Following the Society's concert will be the customary reception for audience and performers in the church's Dutton Hall, and at that time the winner of the Choral Art Society Spring Lottery will be announced. Tickets have been bought not only by members and friends but also for such organizations as the Standish Humane Society, the Marshfield branch of the Mass. Audubon Society, and the Brant Rock Belfry Fund. Tickets for the concert are available from chorus members and at the door ($5, elders and students, $3.50). For information, call 834-8962, 545-5998, or 83-9873.

Club production

Norwell's North River Community Club will present its spring production, "Best of Friends" on Friday and Saturday, May 17, 18, 24 and 25, and June 1, at 8 p.m.

A literate and witty comedy by James Elward, "Best of Friends" deals hilariously with the problems caused by the unexpected return of a long absent (and now famous) writer to his family — in the company of the pretty young thing he now wants to marry.

Booster sports awards

The Boosters Spring Sports Award night will be held at 6 p.m. Sunday, May 17 at the high school cafeteria. Awards to all students participating in spring sports will be given out at this time.

Athletes will be admitted free; parents must pay $3 for a ticket. There will be a pizza dinner before the award ceremony honoring athletes in spring sports and the Special Olympics.

Booster sale at fair

The Cohasset High School Boosters Club will be selling several different items at the Cohasset Common Fair this Saturday, May 16.

The fair, which will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Common, will feature a Boosters table.

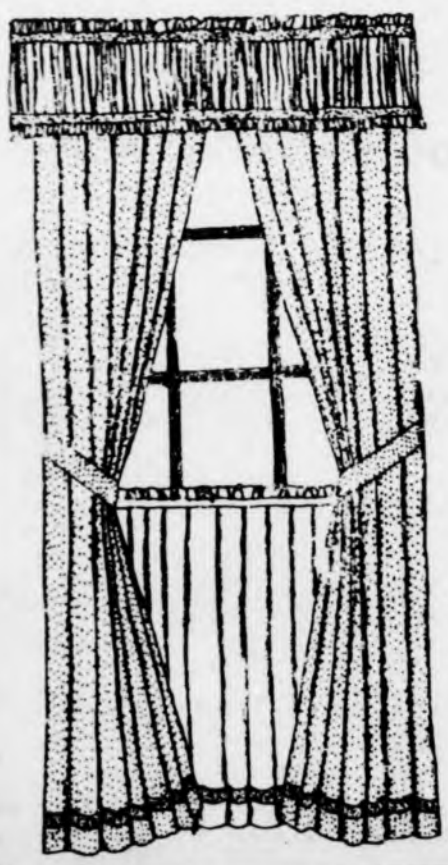
at the landfill. The state is expected to issue funds for the construction of the salt shed in June.

The committee recommended appropriating $500 for the purchase of 13 traffic signs prohibiting any vehicles in the railroad bed area. This measure was proposed by selectmen after they received several complaints from residents in the area.



A request to construct 600 feet of wire fence at the southeast corner of the landfill was postponed by the committee. Advisors said they wanted to look at the area before deciding whether a $4,500 fence will solve the litter problem at the dump. Several Cedar Ledge Village residents complained about the flying debris there.

Advisors recommended a $5000 appropriation to replace 40 feet of rotted foundation sill under the Bates Building. Saying they wanted to make the future surplus property "saleable," the committee approved the proposal.

They also recommended a $1522 transfer to the Water Dept. to cover insurance rate hikes for this past year.

Cohasset Historical Society flea market May 18

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Spring Flea Market Saturday, May 18 at the society's headquarters house, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Hours are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A wide variety of items will be featured, from sporting goods to household wares, books, clothes, furniture, toys and hi-fi equipment.

Among other collectables to be featured will be the giant-sized posters from the South Shore Music Circus picturing artists who appeared there last summer.

Games, toys and artworks will also be found among the large number of items donated to the society.

A table of homemade baked foods and hot dogs will be available as refreshments.

The annual spring flea market is a fund raising venture by the Historical Society for the maintenance of its three museum buildings and for the support of its community programs.

Dealer's spaces are available for $10; please call Mrs. Parker at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Plan to arrive early for the best selection of pre-owned items. The society still is accepting donations for its flea market. If you are cleaning out attic, cellar, garage or barn and would like to donate to this worthwhile cause, please call the society.

Special Museum Tour

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conunction with the Cohasset Historical Society, will sponsor a special pre-season guided tour of the society's two historical museums on Elm Street, Cohasset Center, Friday, May 24 at 11 a.m. Residents of Cohasset and the South Shore may register with the Recreation Department to see the following society museum buildings:

The Maritime Museum, contructed in the 1700's. Formerly a ship chandlery for Cohasset fishing schooner fleets, this museum portrays the town's "Age of Sail" which lasted for two centuries. Here can be found relics of mackerel fishing days and "deep sea" foreign trade, once the mainstay of Cohasset's economy.

Models, shipwreck relics, paintings and prints, and items brought home by the town's seafarers can be seen. The story of the first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is told in artifacts and pictures.

Beautifully crafted models of square-riggers such as the clippers "Great Republic" and "James Baines" (the originals built at Donald McKay's East Boston shipyard) ae displayed, as well as a sailor's model of the ship "Tecumseh" upon which he sailed.

The Maritime Museum's second floor contains a general collection of artifacts from old Cohasset, ranging from stone tools of the Quonahassit Indians to cordwainer's equipment of the 19th century.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of one of Cohasset's seafaring families for over a century. Exhibited here are home furnishings and art-work of 19th century Cohasset, collected from many of the old homes of the town. An early Cohasset home is recreated in this unspoiled early house.

Both of these unique buildings will be open for the May 24 museum tour. Call the Recreation Dept for reservations, 383-6791.

Pilgrim Skating arena scholarship released

The officers and directors of the Pilgrim Skating Arena, a non-profit recreational skating facility in Hingham, have announced the fifteen winners of their 1985 Pilgrim Skating Arena Scholarship Awards of $1,000 each.

Recipients of these awards are all seniors at South Shore area high schools. These students were selected from 59 outstanding applicants, who all demonstrated high academic ratings along with a wide variety of extra-curricular interests.

Area winners for 1985 are: Walter E. Erwin III of Hingham; Julia A. Sechen of Cohasset, Cohasset High School; Jennifer P. Sacon of Hingham, Hingham High School; Stephen J. Remedis of Scituate, Scituate High School; Tara E. Griffin of Norwell, Norwell High school; and Kimberly A. Fandel of Hingham, Hingham High School.

This is the eleventh year of the Pilgrim Scholarships which now represent a total of $85,000.

Presentation of checks and commemorative plaques will be presented at a reception for the winners and their parents at Pilgrim Arena on Friday, May 10. Officiating at the award luncheon will be Maj. General Woodrow P. Swancutt, USAF (ret.,) of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a member of the Pilgrim Board of Directors and Chairman of the Scholarship Committee.

Weekend Warriors

This summer the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham is offering a summer hockey program called the "Weekend Warriors." This program was formerly directed by Mr. Robert Troup of Quincy, who has turned it over to us to continue with the same format.

There will be 11 weekend games starting June 8 through August 17.

This program consists of 11 fun hockey games for players in all categories, Mites through Seniors.

Please call the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 749-6660, for an application. The arena is accepting applications from teams as well as individuals.

Hull selectman: need for zoning

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce met at Hugo's last week to hear Hull Selectman Claudette Fitzsimmons speak about the future of Paragon Park. But instead she warned Cohasset businesspersons to get involved, and make sure their town has proper zoning controls to protect their aesthetic surroundings.

Fitzsimmons said Hull did not have such zoning controls before Paragon Amusement Park was sold last year to a Woburn developer who planned to build 'high rise' condominiums.

Had Hull forseen the need for stricter height and density laws, we might not be faced with the 'high rise' problem, she said. "Development is going to cost Hull alot," selectman Fitzsimmons noted. "We would like to have seen business".

Fitzsimmons warned that other developers are beginning to look seriously at all the harbor towns because they have that "aesthetic" beauty that will attract home buyers.

"If Cohasset doesn't have strict zoning controls now, you'd better look at how they should be changed", Fitzsimmons said. "Do you want your shoreline clutterd with 'high rise' buildings?"

Fitzsimmons agreed with Joseph Quinn, Chamber of Commerce member, who said "if Hull had updated it's master plan it would have lessened it's developmental problems."

The town planning board has clashed with Chamber of Commerce members over the need for a master plan in Cohasset.

At the town meeting last month, the Chamber of Commerce asked to have several zoning proposals put on hold until a master plan could be put in place, to guide the development of the town.

Voters, however, chose to support zoning bylaw changes advocated by the planning board to deal with accelerated growth, and the unique topography of Cohasset, including standards for business development on 3A.

Real estate seminar grad.

Three Gallery 360 real estate sales associates were among the ten Gallery of Homes brokers from the Greater Boston area completing an intensive three-day training program entitled Successful Practices.

Marie Caristi of the Cohasset Galley 360 office were among the recent graduates.

Mrs. Caristi is a former teacher. A graduate of Emmanuel College, she majored in History, English and Social Studies. She has taken additional courses in computer language. She has played an active role in Cohasset community affairs, including the League of Women Voters, the Cohasset Community Center, the First Parish Church Canvass Committee, the Community Garden Club, the Yacht Club, and is also a friend of the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham.

Brown forms real estate firm

Norman Brown of Cohasset, formerly in charge of real estate operations for Bay State Gas Co., has formed the Shagbark Real Estate Co. in Marshfield.

A former senior vice president of the utility company, Brown will assist in the marketing of Citrus Hills, a Florida development where former Red Sox star Ted Williams is building a new home.

Brown, a graduate of Dartmouth College and Amos Tuck School of Business Administration where he was football captain and All-American center, will be joined by Mrs. Robert Mangene of North Reading, in the new realty firm.

"GOING TO THE DOCTOR GIVES ME THE WILLIES."

Going to the doctor can make a perfectly mature, intelligent adult suddenly feel like a helpless child. That's why it's important to find a doctor you can talk to. Someone who's there when you need them. Somebody smart enough to know what they don't know.

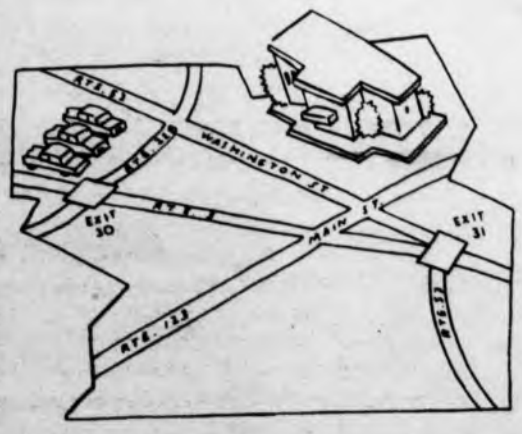
When you're looking at medical plans, it's hard to be smart enough. There are important differences between plans. And some of them are not apparent on the surface.

Some plans exist just to process claims and pay bills. You are only a policyholder. When it comes to finding the right doctors or dealing with emergencies, you're on your own. In today's medical world, that's no place to be.

At MultiGroup, you get more than after the fact coverage. You get a relationship with a doctor and a medical group. We cover almost everything, from the routine stuff many plans don't cover – to complete hospital care.

MultiGroup is a total approach to medical care, instead of a fragmented approach. It should be more expensive, but it isn't.

If you'd like to know more about us, we invite you to begin at the beginning. With a free booklet that explains your options.



It's called Apples & Oranges, or How to Choose a Health Plan. For your copy, call 1-800-543-3300.

Cohasset Business News

Popular nutritionist expands his business

It wasn't long ago that Mark Mincolla began counseling local folks on the importance of nutrition in a small corner office along Elm Street.

Four years later, with a list of clients ranging in the thousands and addresses that span the country, he is relocating to a spacious office suite on Route 3A.

The new office is at 164 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Although he has yet to complete the move, he is anxious to let his clients know his new location.

Mincolla, who holds a doctorate degree in nutrition, knows the importance of proper dietary care. He calls his practice the counseling of preventative medicine. The Cohasset resident, who reformed his nutritionally poor habits about 15 years ago, is convinced that alteration changed his life.

The genetic heredity of a family can not be altered, but there are methods to effect changes. In his family, for instance, there is a history of "bad cholesterol" and coronary disease, he explains. His uncle died at 51, and his brother had open heart surgery at the age of 36.

Through constant study, and advice from a father who has long prescribed a healthful way of living, Mincolla altered his lifestyle. He has not suffered from allergies, the common cold or tooth decay for the past 15 years, he claims.

For the past four years, Dr. Mincolla has assisted hundreds of South Shore residents to change their poor eating habits, and to follow a more heathful, and therefore more enjoyable way of life. He is not one to ignore the importance of seeking assistance from a medical physician, and emphasizes that much of his services are completed in conjunction with area doctors.

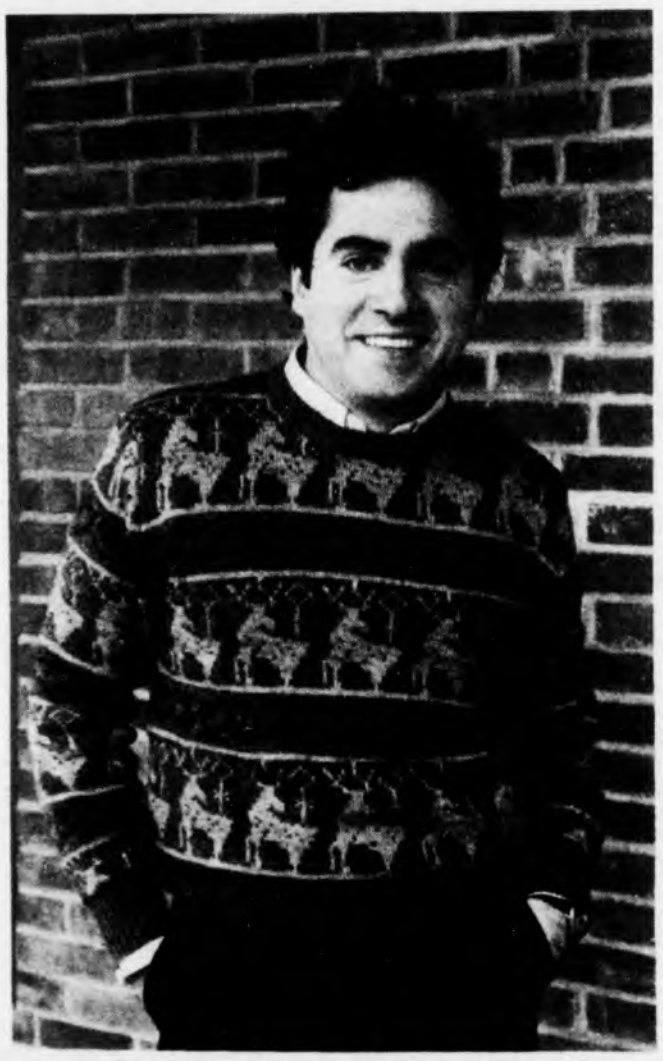
"It's essential I work together with a medical doctor, if I am working with a patient who is suffering from a serious illness. With several of my clients, I ask them first to have a physical, and then we can talk about making some positive changes in their lifestyle," he says.

In fact, he has a cooperative arrangement with Dr.Stanley Hoffman, the owner of Beechwood Medical Center at Cushing Plaza. Dr. Mincolla has all his client's lab worked completed at that facility, and often refers clients in need of medical attention to Dr. Hoffman.

According to the nutritionist, "Dr. Hoffman, whom I met three week ago, is a really solid practitioner with great credentials. I am looking forward to working with him. I think the Beechwood Medical Center is a clinic which will benefit the entire area."

Clients seek Dr. Mincolla's assistance for many reasons. People suffering from high cholesterol counts, high blood pressure, weight problems, people at coronary risk, hyper thyroids, and women suffering from Pre Menstrual Syndrome, receive counseling from Dr. Mincolla.

"I see a lot of people with weight problems, who've been from diet to diet. A lot of people also come to me for no physical reason. They've been to a medical doctor and there is no reason found, but they just feel lousy. What and how they eat has a lot to do with how they're feeling," he explains.



A client (Dr. Mincolla is adamant about describing them as clients, not patients) who makes an appointment to see Dr. Mincolla will sit down for a 15-minute interview at the initial visit. "They will tell me why they're here. We become acquainted and comfortable with the situation, and then I decide whether I can help the client, or if they should be referred to a physician," he explains.

If the client is to continue counseling, another appointment is made. At the second one-hour session, the client will fill out a detailed sheet, outlining what he or she has eaten since rising from bed, and what is consumed until bedtime.

This data dietary sheet is carefully examined by the nutritionist. The diet life sample is followed by inquiries from the nutritionist in combination with client. "The client tells me his tales, and I ask the questions. I like to get as much information directly from the client," he says.

Dr. Mincolla also completes a hair analysis, a method he has used for many years in detecting the chemical and mineral count within the body's tissues. Although this pratice was often dismissed by medical phsyicians, Dr. Mincolla notes that a recent court decision in Virginia found that hair analysis "is a useful guide, used by a health professional, in helping provide nutritional care. It has been legally affirmed that hair analysis is a significant factor in programs in treating the health of an individual."

If the client is suffering from a high toxic metal count, for instance, Dr. Mincolla would advise a detoxification program using a specific dietary program. After a 30 days, he will repeat the same analysis and check the results of his diet schedule.

Dr. Mark Mincolla

If the initial analysis demonstrated "adrenaline glands stress," a specified dietary program excluding all caffeines and sugars will be advised, along with a less stressful daily regimen.

"That repeat analysis will let me, the doctor, know if we are doing the right thing. But a client's body will let him know all along if he is doing a good job," he adds.

As the nutritionist explains, he is there to be a client's conscience, to guide, not to preach. "I don't

You've built equity in your home...

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

PATCHES Motherhood, my side

By Lois Martin

Last Sunday I got the Mother's Day gift I'd asked for 18 years in a row. My sons didn't fight all day. That's what I used to ask for every blooming year. I never got it once while they were living at home. Last Sunday that gift was mine as it has been since they grew up and away.

Those years when a cereal box could incite civil unrest and disobedience I got geraniums, or a charming handcrafted card, telling me how wonderful I was. They apparently didn't hear my simple request of a day of peaceful coexistence, a state which boys neither seek nor observe in a household.

PATCHES

But the fact that they have grown to young men who can't wait to see one another is one of the major surprises and rewards in my life. Thus it unsettles me when I hear of yet another grown child who intends to expose her mother through a "Mommie Dearest" autobiography.

I have calmed myself, staving off a fear of my sons' joining in such a publication because they have inclined toward engineering rather than writing. I have never understood that choice or anyone who would willingly be in courses like calculus or physics. I have simply accepted it as an oddity indigenous to my offspring.

But I know perfectly well I've given them cause to long for revenge. During their growth years I'd write about them now and then and people used to say right to my face that it must be awful to have me for a mother.

That impressed me without altering my behavior.

But if they rallied, those sons, to write a non-fiction compilation of my record as a mother, I know all too well what would be in it.

Brian would tell about the time this bully neighbor kid had him down in the road thrashing him. My little boy was bellowing for me. I went to the front door, answering the emergency call. "Get up on your feet," I hollered, "and paste him good." Then I shut the door.

He'll forget the problem was resolved because I'd given him good advice. He'll only remember the shutting of the door in response to the crisis.

And the fact that I saw to it that Andy's entire Cub Scout Pack got poison ivy will not be omitted in the book. It was our first meeting, I was the Pack Mother who spotted gorgeous generous boughs of red leaves and berries by the brook. We picked them, arranged them in bouquets. The boys itched right through the Blue & Gold banquet.

They'll depict me as a woman who was most dangerous when she's quietly talking through her teeth at her children. They'll write a whole chapter about the day the three of them got on different phone extensions to call me at work, each of them bellyaching about what the other had done to injure him. I hung up on them, excused myself briefly from my place of employment, went home to the three boys who'd just finished spraying orange soda on the living room ceiling as part of the after school snack.

. . . And then I told them I might decide I should never let them out of my sight, that their inability to live two hours together serenely meant they needed a babysitting mother whose singular job it would be to see that they were kept under protective custody. I asked them what they might guess my disposition would be if my one assignment in life were to be to keep them from killing each other. Then I gave them serious household chores and left them blaming each other for calling me at all.

And Terry will write a brief essay about how I ate all the skin off the fried chicken while his Little League playoffs went into extra innings.

They won't mention the time I sat by the hospital bed of an eight-month-old in a pneumonia tent while I sewed an Indian costume for one at home. That was precious and poignant for a mother to do, wasn't it? And they'll say nothing about their favorite Never Fail Chocolate Cake that they've had every birthday. There'll be no mention that for 12 years I could never call my lap my own.

Or that my left hip was used for a Tonka truck highway every Saturday morning while I tried to sleep a little longer. That should count.

Every mother knows that you have to save the life of a son at least once a day. I caught Brian when he jumped off the piano and I saw to it, in part, that Andy didn't fall off the porch roof. Further I refused to let them smash each other in the face, even when they asked nicely.

Foolish of me to worry. They're too busy to write and since absence makes the heart grow fonder, they only mention things now like my macaroni and cheese.

And in their gift of mutual peace, even appreciation of one another, for Mother's Day, I have but to marvel that they ever stopped fighting, something I believed could never happen.

Besides, I did what I could. I wanted more than anything to teach them to expect something from a woman. I just never said what.

A MUST FOR ANYONE WHO QUILTS

Here is one of the largest treasuries of quilt designs and variations ever assembled-1001 patterns in all—an absolute must for anyone who quilts! This collection offers you a kaleidoscopic array of designs (44 in full color!) that range from traditional favorites to the new and innovative. The designs are geometric—easy to draw up—and intriguing at the same time—so they will fascinate both beginning and experienced quilters.

For the quilter's convenience, designs are grouped according to the number of patches making up the block, such as 4-patch, 9-patch and so on. Each design is clearly marked with graph lines to enable you to scale the block to any size desired.

Whether you work by hand or with the sewing machine, the designs in this book are bound to make it one of the most treasured and thumbed-through volumes on your bookshelf. Order your copy of 1001 Patchwork Designs today!

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $9.95 plus $1.25 postage and handling to American Melody, 123 South Street, Oyster Bay, NY 11771. NY residents add appropriate sales tax. Please print clearly.

SAVE! Order two for $19.00 plus $1.90 postage and handling.

A sanctuary on Cape Cod

Nearly Native

By Darrell Berger

Foster Phillips was born and raised in Mexico, the son of Presbyterian missionaries. Spanish was his primary language and Central America his primary culture until he moved north to attend Yale. He is now a businessman in Dennis, Mass. on Cape Cod.

His background and his recent experience convinced his church, the First Parish in Brewster, to become the first group in New England to declare itself sanctuary for Central American refugees.

From 1969 to 1981 Foster was a sales representative for the Nashua Corporation, a manufacturer of photo-copy machines. He made countless visits to all South and Central American countries, personally observing their many repressions, revolutions and liberations.

In January of 1983 he served as interpreter to a U.S. congressional fact-finding tour sponsored by the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee.

Visiting Mexico and Guatemala, they spoke with the Archbishop and President of Guatemala, and leading factions in El Salvador. They also observed the hordes of refugees streaming from Guatemala to southern Mexico.

When he returned home he came to believe that U.S. policy on allowing refugees from Central America, especially Guatemala and El Salvador, was very unfair, even dangerous to U.S. interests.

Our government, he discovered, does not believe that peasants fleeing from these countries are really trying to save their lives. The Immigration and Naturalization Service insists all they want are American jobs.

The First Parish in Brewster, because of Foster and his wife Nancy, as well as other church members who had experience in the region, voted to support its Social Concerns Committee's efforts to aid such refugees. For nearly two years they have helped people on their way to Canada where they are freely accepted.

Our citizens who aid in this open themselves to prison and fines. Some have already been arrested. Yet when Foster reflects on his work he says, "It is really a gift that they give us. It can open us up."

He believes that churches have a particular role, because it was Roman Catholic priests among the poor who first brought the liberating message. "They taught that violence and poverty are not the accepted order of things," he says.

"The people there are unwilling to accept domination any longer," he continues. "What confounds the powerful is the happiness and spirit among the peasants. The ruling classes are beginning to believe that God is on the side of the poor." What pains him is that his own country seems to be supporting the militarists in many areas, rather than the poor.

The key to helping us develop a wiser policy toward our neighbors, he believes, is to have more people actually visit these countries. He is particularly upset at the embargo against Nicaragua, which will make travel there more difficult. "Refugees are not pouring out of Nicaragua," he says. "They seem to have more popular support than the U.S.-backed governments in the region."

How does one take such a potentially divisive issue to a church? "Personal witness," Foster replies. "Our church was fortunate to have a number of people who had seen for themselves and understood. If people know you and realize you're speaking from experience, they are willing to listen, make up their own minds and often support you even if they don't agree with you on every point."

"How do you talk to power?" Foster asks. This is the central issue of all civil disobedience, and the central issue for the peasants in their countries and for the sanctuary movement here."The government believes we are breaking the law," he says. "We believe this administration is breaking not only its own laws, but the Geneva accords on the acceptance of refugees."

Acts like sanctuary, and the public debate they arouse, have long been the means of talking to power in this nation, and are the very soul of democracy. Sanctuary's similarity to the Underground Railroad, which helped slaves to Canada, is particularly striking.

Our heritage has long made freedom a local issue born of personal witness and commitment. Now the freedom of people to the south has once again become a local issue, due to people like Foster Phillips.

If Central America is not to become another Viet Nam, we must take the opportunity now to know more about these countries and their people, their history, present circumstances and especially their aspirations.

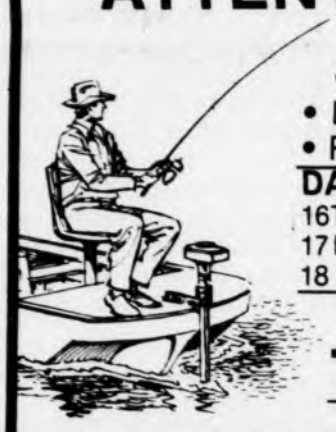
ANGLER'S CORNER by George Doucette



For many years, fresh and saltwater charter boat captains have been one step ahead of the boat owner that only fishes on the weekend or vacations. One of the things that has given them the edge is the graph recorder or "FishFinder." These machines have been used by charter boat captains and commercial fishermen in saltwater for years to find schools of game fish and large bottom fishfeeding such as cod, pollack, haddock, halibut, bluefish, striped bass, tuna, and more. To the charter or commercial boatman, two or three of these machines are not uncommon on each boat.

In fresh water, the southern largemouth bass guides and Great Lakes salmon guides use two or three machines, either the LCR, Flasher, or digital recorders to find their elusive prey. Charter boat captains rely on consistent catches to keep their customers happy and to keep their boats busy during the fishing season, depth finders and fish locators have given them this edge and, up until recently, they have had a strong hold on that "10 percent of the fishermen catch 90 percent of the fish" club.

Now you can get into the club without spending a small fortune on electronic depth and fish locators. The innovation of the "LCR" recorder (liquid crystal recorder) enables the weekend fisherman to locate fish without the use of expensive paper graph recorders. Several manufacturers have these machines starting at very reasonable prices that are suitable to fresh or saltwater fishlocating and can be easily mounted by the boater himself. From trout to tuna, your catch will improve with the use of these machines. At today's gas prices, this savings alone will more than help pay for the initial cost of the recorder. A free Fish Locator Clinic will be conducted at Adams Sports & Tackle, Rte. 139, in Pembroke. HumminBird factory representative Dave Mann will conduct this clinic on Saturday, May 18.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A few unkind words for 'my' generation

I have a problem and I don't know what is to be done about it. I can't stand my generation anymore. People in my age group — people just like me — are starting to make me nauseous.

I was born on April 8, 1943, so my generation runs approximately from those born December 7, 1941 — that's the day President Roosevelt said would live in infamy — to December 7, 1949. That's the day Chiang Kai-shek fled Peiping, I mean Peking, I mean Bejing, and set up shop in Formosa, I mean Taiwan.

Now, right there is an example of why I can't stand my generation. When I was a kid studying geography, the capital of China was called "Peiping." Then something happened, maybe the New York Times had a typographical error it didn't care to own up to, and everyone in my generation started calling it "Peking." Now, my generation is nothing if not snobbish, and we immediately decided that anyone (such as Sec. of State Dean Rusk) who continued to call it "Peiping" was at best a recalcitrant Nazi.

I, being a card-carrying member of my generation, believed such slanderous drivel. Then one day for no reason that I can understand except that maybe Ted Koppel's adenoids were inflamed, my generation discarded "Peking" and insisted on "Bejing" as the standard pronunciation by which the knowing would henceforth be known. That's a small example, but it's the kind of thing my generation does that makes me not like people like me who are members of my generation.

Actually, my generation started out with great promise. We were bigger-boned, better-nourished, and brighter than any generation in history — at least that's what we led ourselves to believe. When I was a teenager in the late fifties, every year the college board scores went up, the girls developed earlier, and the fins on automobiles got bigger. That's just the way it was. But somehow amid all that, we got it into our heads that the world was black and white and that we of my generation were the "white guys." Racially, of course, that was true, but intellectually our self-serving sense of ourselves was patently and dangerously false. It was thus I think that when we reached the age of consent in a very gray world we lost our way.

We lost our way in many ways. The Viet Nam War afforded us a chance to parade around like a bunch of self-righteous brats. We thought we had it all in those heady days. We were young, we were stoned on dope, we weren't doing the fighting, we were morally superior, and we were right.

The only trouble is, we weren't morally superior. The grunts who went to Viet Nam and died were infinitely morally superior to us. The other trouble is, we weren't right either, we were quite wrong. Subsequent events in Southeast Asia have proven us wrong, although most in my generation refuse to admit it. Now most of us do increasingly ridiculous mental gymnastics in order not to admit it. But we were wrong, as I was wrong in attending anti-war demonstrations on October 15, 1969 in Boston and on April 24, 1971 in Washington.

Another of my generation's typically autistic performances was when we discovered sex. Oh, brother, did we discover sex! And typical of my generation, we didn't just say, "Well, we've discovered the joy of sex like generations immemorial before us." No, that wasn't good enough for my generation. We had to discover sex for the whole history of the world, and that's what we convinced ourselves we were doing. We called it "the sexual revolution." What it really was, of course, was our own silly adolescence, but we had to give it a high-falutin name.

Another thing that burns me about my generation is that we have never particularly taken to heart the Fifth Commandment..." Honor thy father and mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." We were a bit too fine for Commandments and we certainly were too fine for parents who tended to own stock in Exxon and to vote for Nixon.

Well, the Lord appears to be visiting us with a certain irony with respect to our disregard of His Commandment. One of the funniest, fairest things I have heard of in the last year happened to friends of mine who always used to call their parents "Fascist pigs." Now their own children seriously refer to them as "liberal hippie Communists." How sweet it is!

I guess what bothers me about my generation comes down to our infinite capacity for self-centeredness. Perhaps this was made inevitable by the sheer numbers of the post-War baby boom. I mean, politically, economically, and culturally we have awful strength in our numbers. When we bought blue jeans we made Calvin Klein hideously rich, and now that we're into houses we've convinced many realtors that they lately died and went to Heaven.

Everything my generation does is important, but we have a way of running our importance into the ground. Now that we're approaching middle age, we're making our stupid concerns everyone's concerns. We're inventing divorce just the way we invented sex a few years ago, and we're inventing adolescent children who do terrible things like listening to sexually suggestive alleged music.

Ha! We're just getting old — and that I really dread. I don't dread it particularly because I'm getting old, I dread it because as I get old I just know that the media, which my generation controls, is going to make me nauseous. You see, my generation will eventually discover old age. When that happens all I'm going to hear about and read about will be proctological probes and prostate glands. Like everything else, my generation will run its old age into the ground and bore everyone else about it, and that's why I really wish there were a way I could find a new generation to be a member of. I wish I could just go down to town hall and tell the town clerk to remove the "B.B." for baby boomer from beside my name and put in its place an "F.G." for flapper generation or a "P.R." for punk rocker. Anything to avoid having to listen to my contemporaries yap about prostates and proctologists until I drop.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐Greenland is mostly ice and Iceland is mostly green.

☐From the April 22 issue of Time: "Yogi Berra, 59, on a State Department dinner he attended: 'You couldn't keep a conversation going at all. Everybody was talking too much.'" Yogi was right. As G.K. Chesterton said, "Talk spoils conversation."

☐I'm beginning to think I'm a hypochondriac. When Dr. Paul Saba recently told me I was in perfect health, I asked for a second opinion.

☐Why do I think computers are smarter than people? I've never seen a computer jogging.

☐Someone called flowers "prayers that say themselves."

☐Good editors speak softly and carry a big blue pencil.

☐An old proverb: What I give, I have; what I spent, I had; what I kept, I lost.

☐It has been said that the best gifts are usually tied with heartstrings.

☐When Adelina Patti, the great Italian singer, demanded an exorbitant fee for a concert, she was told that President Hoover didn't earn that much yearly salary. "Then," she said, "get Hoover to sing for you."

☐People who snickered whenever Gerry Ford bumped his head, wonder whether Pres. Reagan has lot his. They are even more curious now that he's gone to Bitberg.

☐You better be sure that a boon does not become a boondoggle.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 13 roll calls dealing with the proposed $8.7 billion fiscal 1986 state budget. All roll calls are from the week of May 6-10.

ALTERNATIVE BUDGET (H 6000)

House 119-32, rejected a Republican sponsored version of a fiscal 1986 budget totalling $37 million less than the House Ways and Means Committee version. Supporters said this version contains less waste and patronage and offers more local aid and tax relief. Opponents said the Ways and Means budget is the result of months of hard work and is clearly a better one. (A "Yea" vote is for the alternative version. A "Nay" vote is against it.)

Reps. Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray voted "Yea." Reps. Robert Ambler, Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn and Frank Hynes voted "Nay."

LEGISLATIVE SALARIES (H 6000)

House 121-23, rejected an amendment limiting the Speaker's salary to 50 percent, the salary of floor leaders and Ways and Means chair to 25 percent, and all other chairs to $1000 above that of rank and file members.

Supporters said this rules reform would save $375,000 and insure that the members in these positions are not beholden to the Speaker. Opponent said these positions carry an increased workload and responsibility which justify the extra pay.

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Bump, Hynes, and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Cerasoli, Flynn and Mann.

PACs (H 6000)

House 116-30, rejected an amendment striking the language "prior appropriation continued" (PAC) from 40 accounts in the legislative operation budget.

Supporters said PACs are leftover funds carried over from the previous year and argued stopping this practice will save $5.5 million this year.

Opponents defended the practice and said the amendment will result in these accounts being underfunded.

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Mann and Murray. All other area representatives voted "Nay."

GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL (H 6000)

House 98-42, rejected an amendment eliminating the entire $295,000 funding for the governor's Council. Supporters said the council is a part-time, antiquated, and esentially useless waste of taxpayers' money.

Opponents said the council is a useful body which acts on judicial nominations, pardons, and commutations.

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Bump, and Hynes. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Cerasoli, Flynn, Mann and Murray.

$45 PER STUDENT (H 6000)

House 95-51, rejected an amendment providing an additional $82.8 million in local aid to cities and towns by giving each community $45 per public school student.

Supporters said this would give communities money they are owed since they were promised 40 percent of actual growth revenues but have received 40 percent of estimated growth revenues.

Opponents said when indirect aid, like state assumption of costs previously paid by communities is included, the state has already returned 40 percent of actual growth.

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Ambler, Flynn, Mann and Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Cerasoli and Hynes. Rep. Bump, did not vote.

CONSERVATORS (S 1144)

Senate 21-15, accepted the Judiciary Committee's recommendation to reject a bill eliminating the requirement of a separate petition for appointment of a temporary conservator in probate court.

Supporters of the bill explained that this would eliminate the need to file two petitions to be a temporary and permanent conservator and would simplify the process by reducing paperwork and red tape.

Opponents said the bill leaves room for mischief and argued the two petition requirement safeguards the rights of families. (A "Yea" vote is against the bill. A "Nay" vote is for the bill.)

Voting "Yea" were Sens. Buckley, Golden and Harold. Sen. Kirby voted "Nay."

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Coming home at the end of a busy day to a sinkful of dishes and an empty refrigerator is not exactly what a lone, hungry man/woman needs. The easy way out is to stop by at the nearest fast-food shop, or do as Diana Vreeland does--she hates to eat by herself at the end of her work day, so she simply goes to bed, skipping the meal. Rather than opening a can of beans and calling it dinner, Marian Burros suggests a way with the makings offered by your local supermarket's salad bar; cooking the cold, raw vegetables either by steaming or stir frying. She writes: "Since all the preparation has been done--mushrooms sliced, peppers cut up, broccoli chopped and onions diced--at the end of a long day at the office all you have to do is dump them in the pan, wok or steamer for a hot meal. A well-grilled hamburger, a skinless, boneless chicken breast stuffed with a bit of butter and chives, a lamb chop and presto--a nutritious meal ready in less time than it takes to heat up a TV dinner. One of these muffins would add to the meal and if made and frozen the previous weekend, could be thawing while you are cooking.

BRAN MUFFINS WITH RAISINS

3 c. bran cereal
1/2 c. vegetable oil
2 1/4 c. whole-wheat flour
1 c. sugar
2 1/2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
2 c. buttermilk
2 large eggs, beaten lightly
1 c. raisins

In a heatproof bowl, combine 1 c. of the bran, 1 c. boiling water and the oil. In large bowl combine flour, sugar, baking soda and salt and stir in remaining 2 c. bran. In a bowl combine buttermilk and eggs, add the mixture to the flour mixture with the cereal mixture and raisins. Stir batter until just combined. Let batter stand, covered loosely, overnight. Spoon batter into well-buttered 1/2 cup muffin tins, filling 3/4 full and bake in 400 oven for 20 to 25 min., or until springy to the touch. Turn out on rack after cooling in tins for 5 min. Makes 24.

Jeffrey Young, a psychologist, is quoted as saying of eating alone: "Because singles are alone, they think of eating as simply a way of filling an empty stomach. I encourage them to look at the possible advantages of eating alone--it is pleasurable, it is relaxing and it allows you to choose the foods you enjoy rather than those others prefer." A Crock Pot is a nifty piece of equipment, as it simmers the meal while you're at work, retains essential nutrients and if you fancy stews or chili, both may be refrigerated and frozen and revived later for future meals.

CROCK POT CHILI

1 lb. dry kidney beans
6 T butter
1/3 c. chopped onion
3 whole cloves
2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper
1 c. dry red wine, or beef stock
2 cans (8 oz. ea.) tomato sauce
1/2 c. water
2 lb. beef cubes, browned
2 cloves garlic, crushed
3 T chili powder
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cumin
2 T cocoa
1 to 2 T oregano

Soak beans overnight in water to cover. Place in saucepan with water and cover. Add butter, 1/3 c. onion, cloves, 2 tsp. salt, pepper and simmer til tender, 1 to 1 1/2 hours, stirring from time to time. Add wine or stock. Cook 20 min. longer. Drain. Pick out cloves. Put other ingredients into Crock Pot in order given. Stir once. Cook 10 to 12 hours on low. Add bean mixture. Mix well.

"I love dining, even when I'm alone," says Craig Claiborne, noted author. "When I'm alone I go about it as seriously as if I had guests, setting the table carefully, sometimes reading or listening to music." In his article on dining alone, he tells of a young working gal who gets out her salad bowl, tosses vegetables, cheeses and cold meats, pours a glass of red wine, collects her current novel and climbs into bed for the evening. Here is Lynn Harrigan's casserole which only takes 30 min. to bake at 350 and called

QUICK CHOWDER CASSEROLE

1 (10 3/4 oz.) can New England clam chowder
2 (8 oz.) cans clams
1/4 tsp. garlic salt
1T chopped parsley
1 c. sliced carrots
8 oz. cooked spaghetti

Combine ingredients in large saucepan. Heat until hot and turn into 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Cover and bake. Garnish with buttered bread crumbs.

CHESS QUIZ

By Chris Bernstein

The Harry Lyman Classic was a huge success last weekend, with a total turnout of 80 players. The Open section included such notable masters as John Curdo, Jim Rizzitano, Patrick Wolf, and I.M. Igor Ivanov. Play was still in progress on boards one (Curdo vs. Grunfeld) and three (Wolf vs. Ivanov). Jim Rizzitano was in good shape finishing early on board two with 3½pts. If boards one and three drew, then he would have first place. This Sunday's Globe should have complete results.

I would like to thank those of you that took the time to write in last week, about "Spend A Buck," and yes, Mr. Masison, there was mate in four. I should have covered myself and specified mate with a knight. The funny thing is that if I make a perfect quiz every week, I'll never get any mail.

I have been using algebraic notation. How many prefer descriptive?

Koed named to Hallmark

Fred Koed of Cohasset recently joined Hallmark 100 Properties of Cohasset, according to Chris Ford, the firm's owner.

Hallmark 100 is located in the Brigantine East Building on Route 3A. It is a fully-computerized office and is affiliated with the All Points Relocation Network.

Koed lives at 92 Pleasant Street with his wife, Lisa, and daughter Ashley.

Currently, Koed is the vice chairman of the Cohasset Advisory Committee, and is working with town officials in their review of the department budgets.

Koed owns the F.R. Koed Painting Contracting business which is now being managed by Fred's brother, Bill. Koed is a graduate of Cohasset schools and the University of Massachusetts. He has been in fulltime real estate sales since September and recently completed an extensive training seminar on real estate investment and income property investments. He is scheduled to begin the Graduate Realtors Institute this month.

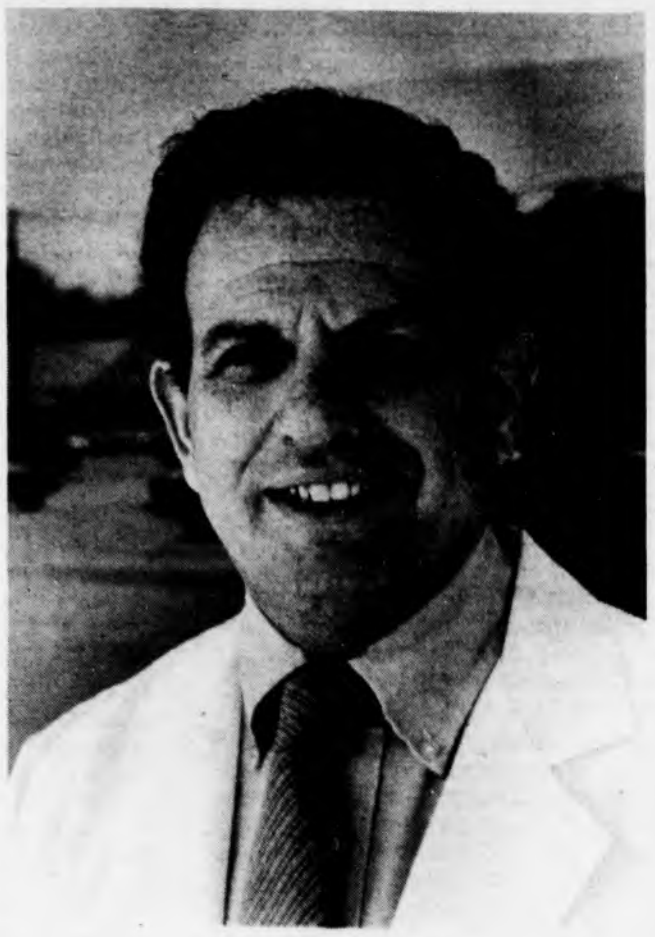
Dr. Hoffman opens center

Dr. Stanley Hoffman of Hingham recently opened the Beechwood Medical Center at the Cushing Plaza.

The walk-in clinic is at the site of the former Raskin Medical Center on Route 3A.

Dr. Hoffman, who completed his residency training at Harvard University and the University of Pennsylvania, noted that all records and files of previous patients of Dr. William Raskin, have been kept intact at the office.

"We hope to have a continuity of service to this community," according to the physician's wife and business manager, Joyce Hoffman. When asked why someone should utilize the Beechwood Center rather than a hospital emergency room, she replied, "we hope the waiting period here will be much less, and the care will be more personal."



The clinic, which will feature emergency medical treatment on a walk-in basis in addition to regular medical appointments, will be open seven days a week, 365 days per year, from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Dr. Hoffman, former director of Emergency Medical Training at Worcester City Hospital, is currently interviewing physicians and will soon bring an associate into the business. At that time, there will be two fulltime doctors in the practice.

He has also retained all former staff members, according to Mrs. Hoffman.

The Beechwood clinic staff will be capable of treating simple fractures and sutures. Dr. Hoffman served as a sugical residency while at Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania.

The Beechwood Medical Center will accept Medicaid and Medicare, along with all forms of insurance coverage.

yell at my clients. And I don't laugh. I want them to put their trust in me," Dr Mincolla says. "The most important thing besides their trust, is that they let me become their conscience. I do not browbeat, I want to open their mind so they'll understand. Knowing they have to call me within 10 days of their first apppointment, to let me know how they're doing, is very important. And realizing that they have to come back for a repeat visit, will also help them to stick to their prescribed diet. They feel fortified, believing they can change their behavior and lifestyle."

Dr. Mincolla is enthusiastic about the way we are feeding our children, and is most interested in talking with parents about that subject. He is filled with ideas about raising healthier heirs, and is anxious to impart his knowledge on the topic.

Dr. Mincolla plans to take advantage of his newly-acquired spacious office. He will soon begin a series of seminars and lectures at 164 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Among the subjects will be cooking for children, stress reduction, PMS, and many talks on consumer awareness, "helping people to be more nutrionally-aware when they shop, and to get more for their nutritional dollar," he adds.

Dr. Mincolla may be contacted Monday through Friday at his new business number, 383-6554.

Notice to Hingham Real Estate Offices:
Re: Jonathan Livingston Square

Several weeks ago I got a phone call from a Hingham Real Estate office looking for space at Jonathan Livingston Square (130 King Street) Route 3A in Cohasset.

I promised the Broker to call if space became available.

Well...store front space (600-800 sq. feet depending on layout) will soon be available at Jonathan Livingston Square. The monthly rent will be approximately $800-$1000 per month.

If you are that broker, or if you or a customer have interest in the space please call our broker Chris Ford in Cohasset at 383-1887.

Delahunt asked to review selectmen's closed session

By Elizabeth Gorfinkle

Tuesday night, the Committee to Survey Structure and Functions of Town Government discussed the Board of Selectmen's recent alleged violations of the Open Meeting Law.

The committee's chairman, John McNabb, showed the committee a letter (dated May 21) he is about to send to Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt asking him to investigate recent executive sessions held by the selectmen that have led up to the provisional appointment of a new duel position in the town's government being voted on May 9. McNabb wants to know if those sessions were held in violation of the state's Open Meeting Law which protects people's rights to know about government proceedings that affect them.

McNabb includes with the letter a public statement which affirms that he is taking this action as a private citizen of Cohasset, not as a town official.

The statement reads: "I am taking this action because I feel that the public interest was harmed by the selectmen meeting in closed session to consider and decide on a serious question of public policy affecting two major positions in town government, and because I feel it is important that the selectmen be made aware by official action of the requirement of the Open Meeting Law so they will follow the law in the future."

The executive sessions in question were held May 4 and May 6. McNabb included a copy of the May 4 executive session minutes with the letter. The May 6 minutes were not available to him.

McNabb said he is certain the May 4 session was in violation of state law, because its recorded purpose, "contract negotiations and litigation," is not a valid reason for a closed meeting. He said the law doesn't recognize contract negotiations as being authorized for executive session. And the minutes of that meeting show pending litigation was not discussed.

During the session, the selectmen discussed with members of the advisory board the appointment of Brookline accountant Donald Andrews to the dual position of town accountant/executive secretary.

McNabb wrote to Delahunt: "The board met in open session on May 6. The minutes of that meeting do not show any discussion of this topic. In a May 9 letter from Selectmen Chairman Frank England to Mr. Donald Andrew, also enclosed, Mr. England states that: 'As you know from our previous discussions, the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset have voted unanimously to consolidate the offices of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant.'

"At a special open meeting of the Selectmen on May

A successful forum of issues

By John McNabb, Jr.

Six Cohasset Democrats recently returned from the Massachusetts Democratic State Issues Convention held last weekend in Springfield.

Donna J. McGee, John K. McNabb, Jr., Karen Corcoran, Edwin H. Tebbetts, Mary Richard, and Paul Donovan, Jr. served as delegates from Cohasset to the two-day convention.

"I think the convention produced a Democratic Party Platform that Democrats can run on," said McGee, who is chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

"The Convention was successful in producing a document that, while expressing the concerns of progressives within the Democratic Party, is still a broad statement of principles which most Democrats can agree with," said McGee.

The more than 4,000 delegates to the convention were charged with crafting a new platform of the Massachusetts Democratic Party, in response to the national Reagan victory of 1984.

After the election, the Democratic State Committee made plans for the convention and for the drafting of the platform, and formed a 70-member platform committee headed by former Congressman James Shannon.

The platform committee held close to a dozen hearings across the state to hear the testimony of Democratic activists and others concerning the platform.

A seven-member drafting committee then produced a draft platform which, after being reviewed by the full platform committee and amended, was sent out to delegates.

From the beginning of this process, Shannon, State Party Chairman Chester Atkins, and other party leaders stated that this platform would be drafted as a general statement of principals, and not in the "laundry list" format of the state party platform which was approved in 1981 and 1983.

The document they produced, however, was criticized by members of the progressive caucus as being too vague, for being too moderate, and for leaving out too many progressive issues endorsed in the previous platforms.

The progressive caucus, an ad-hoc group formed every two years for the purpose of promoting progressive issues at the state issues conventions, organized and held meetings to decide on a list of thirteen priority amendments to present.

Their amendments included adding to the plat-

Schools accept largest endowment

At the school committee meeting Monday night, members graciously accepted $212,267.31, the largest scholarship foundation ever awarded to the Cohasset School System.

Superintendent Eugene Crowell announced, "The gift has been bequeathed to the Cohasset School Dept. by the late Margaret Mary Hardy for the purpose of establishing the Margaret Mary Hardy Memorial Scholarship for Cohasset graduating seniors who will further their education at the college or university of their choice. The grant stipulates the funds will be used to provide a college scholarship for one or more seniors each school year who are attending the high school, are of high academic standing and are in need of supplementary support in order to attend college."

Supt. Crowell noted there will be 17 scholarships awarded this year to 1985 seniors. There is only a week and a half to find recipients for the scholarship. Applications have been made available, but a limited number of people have taken advantage of this opportunity.

Committee secretary Kornet went on to say, "I hope that people will not shy away from the applications because of the nature of information requested."

"All information will be kept in strict confidence and reviewed only by the director of guidance, who will make recommendations to the school committee," Chairman Joseph Nedrow added.

Under the constraints of Chapter 44, Section 58, the scholarship shall be the custodial responsibility of the town treasurer and the awarding responsibility of the Cohasset School Dept.

Supt. Crowell wished to point out that through a shared interest, committee member Richard Conley and his wife Martha were able to give their neighbor

Town's tribute to war heroes

Veterans of all ages will join together Monday in observance of this most solemn holiday.

Memorial Day is a time for all citizens to gather in tribute to the heroes of our nation.

For Cohasset, young and old residents will observe this occasion with a townwide parade, prayer and thanksgiving to those patriots who gave their lives for their country.

The annual Memorial Day commemoration will be under the authority of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post. This observance has been a part of Cohasset's tradition for more than 60 years.

The Fire Department Honor Guard will lead the procession this year. Members of the Post will be accompanied by the Somerville High School Band and the Kevin Barry Pipers.

Beginning at 8 a.m., parade marchers, including all Post members and other Cohasset veterans, will meet at the Post on Summer Street. The assembly will proceed to the Paul Pratt Library and then board buses to the North Cohasset Cemetery.

At the North Cohasset Cemetery, a small prayer ceremony will take place. That will begin about 8:45 a.m., according to Commander Spiers. The procession will then travel by bus to the North Cohasset Honor Roll on Hull Street. Another brief observance will take place at this veteran's memorial.

The parade participants will again board a bus to the Woodside Cemetery. Father Keohane of St. Anthony's Church will preside at the ceremony there.

The bus will then take the processioners to the Beechwood Cemetery for a 9:45 a.m. ceremony there.

Then, all marchers will meet at the Music Circus grounds on Sohier Street.

Post Commander William Spiers noted that all residents, and Cohasset veterans are invited to

Notice to boat owners

June 1 is the deadline for all boat owners who have been assigned a mooring in Cohasset Harbor to have a paid mooring fee receipt. All boats moored in Cohasset Harbor must display a current year mooring decal or they are in violation of the Town of Cohasset Harbor Bylaws, Section 2(a) paragraph 2 and 3 which state: "On and after July 1, 1983, all boats moored in Cohasset Harbor will be required to display an annual decal on the port quarter aft of the boat to indicate that the mooring fee has been paid for the year and the boat is authorized to be on the mooring."

"On and after July 1, 1983, mooring fees shall be paid by June 1 of each calendar year or the Harbormaster shall remove the mooring tackle from the confines of Cohasset Harbor of each individual for whom or entity for which no mooring fee has been paid and such removal shall be at the owner's expense."

Persons in violation of any of the Harbor Bylaws are subject to a fine of $100 per day.

In accordance with the Waiting List procedure set forth by the Selectmen on January 7, 1982, each person filing an application for a mooring in Cohasset Harbor is reminded that before he signed said application he was aware of the following paragraph: "I understand that it is my responsibility to confirm my intent to obtain mooring space by June 1 of each calendar year, or I will be automatically dropped from the waiting list. The oldest application date has priority and holds that position, even if the applicant declines acceptance of a mooring assignment."

The Harbormaster for the Town of Cohasset does not have the right to make any exceptions to the Bylaws and Waiting List procedures. The Board of Selectmen have directed the Harbormaster to strictly enforce all Harbor Bylaws, Mooring Regulations and Waiting List procedures.

It is also unlawful for a person who has been assigned a mooring for a certain length boat to place a boat of larger size on that mooring without prior approval of the Harbormaster.

A boat owner does not have the right to pick up an unattended mooring without permission of the Harbormaster and violators will be prosecuted.

Land donation reviewed

Selectmen asked the Board of Assessors to review a request to donate a piece of land at 340 Beechwood Street.

The parcel is currently owned by the estate of Rosalia B. Parker. The family wrote to selectmen this week, noting that they would like to donate the land, although $338 is owed in back property taxes.

Selectmen requested that the assessors review the town's policy regarding donations of land. They will report back to selectmen at next week's meeting.

Philip B. Parker, as executor of the estate, wrote to selectmen stating the land is intended as a donation to the town, in memory of David, the youngest son of Rosalia Parker.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who said he grew up with the four Parker boys, explained that David Parker died during World War II.

The Parkers are willing to donate the land, contigent on the unpaid taxes. The property is unbuildable, he added, because of a lack of a sewer system and inadequate percolation testing.

There was major damage to this vehicle during Saturday night's accident on North Main Street. No personal injury, but the operator of the car was cited by police.

Business sign request

In response to a letter written by Jayne Chatfield of Beechwood Street, selectmen suggested that she contact the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Chatfield stated in the letter that many consumers are unaware of the Cohasset Village businesses, and that a sign on Route 3A might help solve the problem. Selectmen responded that Route 3A is a state road, and permission from the state is necessary before a sign can be erected there.

They suggested that the Chamber meet with Chatfield. Any recommendations forthcoming from that meeting will be forwarded to selectmen.

In her letter last week to selectmen, Chatfield stated she recently learned that many shoppers of Route 3A businesses are unaware of Cohasset Village. If there was a sign at the blinking light on that highway, near the Music Circus sign, it would help attract consumers to the businesses located within the town, she suggested.

"If we are to maintain a vigorous economy and keep our stores occupied with permanent satisfied merchants, I suggest an appropriate sign . . . be erected," she wrote.

Selectmen noted this week that in the past, such suggestion had been made. But state approval is necessary before such sign is constructed on Route 3A.

9, they voted unanimously, with no discussion preceding the vote, to combine those two positions and to offer the position to Mr. Andrew. The voting took no more than five minutes. The said letter, which was the offer to Mr. Andrew, was typed and ready for signature at the start of the meeting."

McNabb has asked Delahunt, as the state's enforcement officer, to determine whether the vote indicated in the selectmen's letter was made in an executive session, since no vote in an open meeting appears in any minutes prior to May 9.

After his investigation, Delahunt is to rule whether or not the selectmen have violated the Open Meeting Law and to take whatever action deemed appropriate, including the request for a court order of compliance to the law being issued to the board.

McNabb said he is well versed in the Open Meeting Law (chapter 39, sections 23A and 23B of Massachusetts General Laws). In the past as a reporter for Hull's "South Shore Chronical," he submitted similar letters.

He said he felt a moral obligation as a Cohasset citizen to act as a watchdog of town government and apprise boards of possible violations of state law. Members present told McNabb that he should emphasize to Delahunt, along with the people of Cohasset, that his concerns are not representing the official concerns of the Committee to Survey Structure and Functions of Town Government.

Member Chartis Langmaid said, "I am uncomfortable with the committee doing this, but agree that there is no valid reason for this meeting in executive session."

Langmaid approved of the letter's tone, saying it was not antagonistic but a civil way to ensure that the selectmen are informed about the workings of the Open Meeting Law.

McNabb said that even though he was acting as a private citizen, he did feel breaches of this law do affect town government's structure and hence his committee.

"Philosophically the town's structure and function is affected by violations, especially repeated violations of the Open Meeting Law. If no one knows what happened, decisions can be made undemocratically, effecting the total operation of town government," he said.

He added that because the majority of Cohasset's town boards do comply regularly with the Open Meeting Law, he felt it all the more important to make sure the selectmen were made aware of what he considers a blatant and serious violation of this law.

Member Charles Aronovici suggested that the committee consider going to a selectmen's meeting and confronting them on the issue of not informing their committee of a decision which affects the structure of town government.

McNabb added he had no intention of trying to overturn the May 9 vote appointing Andrew provisionally as town accountant, a position that could be authorized at next year's town meeting if an article to remove the accountant from provisions of Civil Service on the June 17 Special Town Meeting warrant passes. "The minutes on May 4 show no formal vote was taken, so I don't want to impede the execution of the May 9 vote made in an open session," he said.

Newly-appointed Selectman Diane Sullivan attended the discussion. Sullivan said the issues concerning the creation of the dual position were fully revealed when Andrew was interviewed in a posted open meeting April 27.

That meeting was held on a Saturday at 10 a.m., according to town records.

Sullivan said the selectmen shouldn't be blamed for the public, including the press, not attending the April meeting. She emphasized that the selectmen were following procedures advised by Town Counsel Richard Henderson, in regard to creating the new position. The final word on the position would come from town meeting, not her board, she said.

"There was no bad intent," she said.

Langmaid answered, "Ignorance is not an excuse."

Sullivan said she felt not inviting representatives from this committee to the May 4 executive session was an unfortunate oversight.

The committee members did not come to a consensus on what actions, if any, they would like to take on the possible violation of the Open Meeting law.

In future meetings, they will discuss potential problems with the dual position in the structure of Cohasset's government, such as complications with Civil Service when Andrew starts work June 3.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

REFERRED PAIN

A common disorder caused by spinal nerve compression is "referred pain." This is pain perceived by the brain as coming from a site other than its true origin. For instance, it has been reported that a ruptured vertebral disc could produce pain simulating angina. Spinal curvature, resulting in nerve interference, can produce radiating pain in different parts of the body. The symptoms can resemble gall bladder disease, appendicitis, gastritis, ulcer, colitis, spastic constipation and other forms of irritation. Nerve root pain in the midback can simulate, and is often mistaken for, coronary heart disease. As in a heart attack, the pain can radiate to the jaw, the upper left arm and even cause a choking sensation in the throat.

As is obvious, proper determination of such difficulties takes an experienced and trained eye. Your health and well-being are a precious possession and one that should be approached with the respect such a valuable asset deserves. For attention to your problems and needs, from sudden occurrences to even those that you have been tolerating for years, we suggest you call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Chiropractic not only restores health, but it also builds health. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Town to get tough with boat moorings

As summer approaches, the subject inevitably turns to boats, Cohasset Harbor . . . and moorings.

In a conversation with Harbormaster Harry Ritter Monday night, selectmen encouraged the official to vigorously prosecute anyone in violation of the town's mooring bylaws.

And in a related matter, selectmen discussed the continuing problem of cars and boat trailers congesting the landing area at Parker Avenue.

Ritter explained that Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo has placed rope diagonally across from his land to town property. This past weekend, Ritter said, trailers were unable to turn around in the public landing area.

Although Figueiredo feels the property is his, Ritter said a 1984 county engineering survey determined the land is town-owned.

In an effort to alleviate the continual traffic congestion on weekends, Ritter sugggested a No Parking Anytime, Tow Zone sign be erected in the town-owned landing area.

"I really want this strictly enforced," he told selectmen. "And I want the 'Chief to have his (Figueiredo's) rope removed or get an injunction to have that rope removed."

Selectmen agreed the rope should be removed immediately, and listened to Ritter's proposal that rope and posts be installed to mark the town landing boundary. This would give the cars and trailers a 50-foot turn-around, he said.

Cohasset Colonial owner John Hagerty argued that any infringement onto his property would place a burden on his customer and employee parking. He said his company has placed a chain across his property on weekends, to terminate the continual abuse of the area, especially during weekends.

Ritter said the only way to keep cars and trailers from parking on the land is to post the area with signs and rope, every four feet. The only other option is to take additional land there by eminent domain, he said.

Selectmen agreed with the suggestion to post the signs in the turnaround area. They told Ritter to notify Police Chief Joseph Kealey that the area is to be patroled and the parking prohibition is to be strictly enforced.

"This isn't going to solve the problem for long," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur added. "I think the town should look to the future, about acquiring some land there in the future. People live here to use the water, many have boats. I think the town should have better access to the water and better parking around the harbor. I think it's the only avenue the town can go."

When Hagerty objected to any land taking of the Cohasset Colonial property, McArthur quickly responded, "we don't mean taking your parking lot."

In a related matter, Selectman Diane Sullivan asked the Harbormaster how long a mooring in Cohasset Harbor can be left abandoned until it is given to the next applicant on the waiting list.

This prompted a long discussion by the selectmen about the number of mooring violations, and the manner in which they should be prosecuted.

Ritter said he is attempting to get tough with all violators, and has mailed a certified letter to about 15 boatowners believed to be in violation of the town bylaws.

When asked how the Harbormaster can prosecute habitual violators who do not respond to Ritter's letter, Town Counsel Richard Henderson outlined two options. Ritter may obtain a criminal complaint against the violator at the criminal division of the Quincy District Court. The criminal process takes about a month before the violator is convicted, he said.

The other alternative, according to Henderson, is for Ritter to seek a temporary restraining order in civil court. That can be accomplished immediately, but is only effective for ten days. If a preliminary injunction is ordered, that will be effective until a trial date is set. Although this three-step process is lengthy, there is immediate relief and perhaps longterm relief. But Henderson warned that in such a process, Ritter should have legal assistance.

Ritter then suggested that the police department's prosecuting officer, Brian Noonan, be available to help him with the legal proceedings. Henderson agreed to meet with Police Chief Kealey, Noonan and Ritter to explain the procedures necessary to remove a boat from a Cohasset Harbor mooring.

"We'll have no relief in the harbor until we are serious about enforcing these regulations," he added.

Cat dam pollution

When selectmen last week discussed the problem of pollution and odor at Cat Dam in Little Harbor, they recommended opening the tidal gate three times a month to alleviate the situation.

But a resident there contacted Selectman Diane Sullivan, who agreed after touring the area that the flood gate should be opened just once a month, as is currently practiced. Opening the gates more frequently will increase not alleviate the problem, she said this week.

The board members then rescinded their previous order to the highway surveyor, and the gate will be opened on the same schedule as currently followed.

In addition, Selectman Sullivan appealed to residents not to dump grass clippings into the lagoon at Little Harbor. This practice is adding to the odor and pollution problem, she said.

In a written statement to the media, Health Agent Joseph Godzik noted, "It has come to the attention of the Board of Health that some residents may be depositing grass cuttings and other vegatative debris into bodies of water in the Town such as Little Harbor. Not only is this not an environmentally sound practice in that it contributes to the eutrophication of these waters, but it is a violation of Massachusetts General Laws. Such materials are classified as rubbish and must either be disposed in a sanitary landfill or composted on the property where it originates."

He continued, "There is a compost area at the Cedar Street Landfill behind the Recycling Center. Grass cuttings, leaves, tree branches, etc. should be deposited in this area and not in the bins or landfill proper. Everyone's cooperation in this matter is appreciated."

Our past days of shipbuilding

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Two hundred years ago, the tall ships were in their heyday, providing our nation with fame and fortune.

The birth place of hundreds of these vessels was the South Shore of Boston.

Shipbuilders toiled in yards on the North River. And though their hammers stopped ringing out on the banks of the river long ago, maritime historians from near and far are keeping the South Shore's shipbuilding legacy alive.

A group in Portland, Ore. are preparing to build a working replica of a square-rigged ship that was launched in 1773 at Hobart's Landing, Scituate by shipbuilder James Briggs.

The original Columbia Rediviva, a trade vessel owned by Boston merchants, was under the command of Capt. Robert Gray of Tiverton, R.I., whom maritime historian and author Lt. Colonel Charles M. Parkin, Jr. credits with the discovery of the Columbia River.

Parkins recently travelled from his home in St. Petersburg, Fla. to New England, for the Portland-based group, the Columbia Rediviva Society.

One of his most important stops on the research trip was at the home of Robert and Sally Mederos of Norwell. On behalf of the society, Parkins thanked them for shipping their builder's half model of the Columbia to Oregon. They had done so at the request of their son, Dennis, a Portland business man.

Mr. Mederos said,"Dennis informed the society that his parents actually have a builder's half model hanging in their livingroom. The half model is something like a blue print shipbuilders use. We expect the model will be on loan to the society for three years."

Mr. Mederos, a maritime history enthusiast, had acquired the builder's half model fifty years ago from the Bates clan of Hanover ship builders. The model dates back to the building of the original Columbia, making it 212 years old.

Mrs. Mederos added, "We are pleased to support the (proposed $1.2 million) project and we hope it will help Captain Gray receive national recognition for his accomplishments."

"Think of it," she said. "The original Columbia took four months to get to Oregon. Our model of her will take four hours to get there."

Parkin said he considers Gray an American hero who deserves the limelight for his historic voyages in the ship Columbia and the sloop Lady Washington.

Gray's impressive career was a mystery, until Parkin's friend, Capt. Frances E. Cross, a merchant marine, sailed into Greys Harbor, Washington in 1927. "Captain Cross asked the natives of Greys Harbor who Captain Robert Gray was. He didn't get an answer so he decided to find out on his own," Parkin said.

Decades later, a retired, 86-year-old Cross was reunited in St. Petersburg with an old shipmate, Parkin's father. When Cross learned that Parkin was an author and boat enthusiast, he asked him to help sort out years of research on Gray compiled in an unfinished manuscript.

Parkin agreed and the result was the publication in 1981 of Sea Venture: Captain Gray's Voyage of Discovery 1787-1793. The book went to print about three years after Cross had died.

According to Parkin, the Columbia, a ship rigged, single-deck vessel, was about 84 feet long and 24 feet wide. She weighed 212 tons, making her unusually small for that period, when her class of ships averaged between 300 and 400 tons.

Her original owners traded between the Caribbean and the United State's East Coast. In 1787, she was reconditioned by the newly-formed firm of Joseph Barrell and Co., Boston and renamed Columbia Rediviva, he said.

"Under Gray, it was the first time an American ship under an American flag had circumnavigated the earth,"Parkin said.

"But his biggest discovery happened on May 11, 1792. He came upon the mouth of the great river of the west and dared to navigate the ship in its dangerous waters up the river 20 miles.

"He named the river Columbia. He also named the headlands at the mouth of the river 'Cape Handcock' and 'Point Adams.'

"And even though his honored place in the pantheon of American heroes was never recognized by Congress, his discovery was proved later to be highly significant to the new-born United States, both economically and politically and, eventually, brought about final sovereignty of that immense area, the Oregon Territory," he said.

Parkin said it took him 10 years to find a group willing to organize the building of a working replica of the Columbia Rediviva.

The society was founded by the retired Portland executive Austin F. Leach, Jr. in August, 1984.

Parkin said that Leach wants to lay the keel for the ship on July Fourth in Tom McCall Waterfront Park on the Williamette River (a Columbia river tributary) and launch the ship in 1986 as part of a Portland visit by the fleet of tall ships.

The proposed cost of $1.2 million for the replica will be covered by nationwide contributions, he said.

The project is being sponsored by Portland Mayor Bud Clark and the governors of Washington, Oregon and Idaho. And Gov. Vic Atiyeh of Oregon has proclaimed 1988 Capt. Robert Gray Year.

"In 1788, the Captain landed at Atillamook Bay, Oregon, which made him the first white man to set foot on that state's coast," Parkin said.

Coincidentally, 1988 also lines up with Norwell's centennial of no longer being incorporated in South Scituate, according to Mr. Mederos.

Parkin said that the replica is intended to make similar voyages as the original ship.

Maybe she will someday sail "home."

Cohasset sports for the week . . .

By Lisa Shumaker

Boys' Baseball

Monday, the boys started off the week with a tough loss to Middleboro, 9 to 1. The Skippers had "no offense," according to Coach Joe Bouchard and unfortunately, Middleboro was pounding the ball.

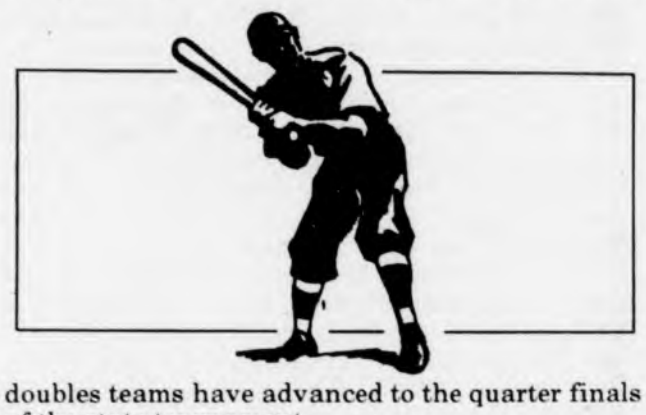
Wednesday, Cohasset continued to be plagued with a lack of offense and lost to East Bridgewater, 7 - 3. Bouchard was disappointed with his team's hitting, but was pleased with the Skipper's defensive efforts and feels that Cohasset's defense has been strong the entire season.

Bobby Shultz led the Skippers offensively and had a hit. Both Peter Sandbloom and Todd Fitzpatrick had great games defensively as well.

Thursday, the boys lost a heartbreaker to Hull 4 - 1. "Our hitting has been off all week," according to Bouchard, who also praised the pitching efforts of Sean Corkery, who allowed only four hits and struck out six batters.

Jay Contis, Bobby Shultz, and Philip Mahoney had one hit apiece and were Cohasset's only offense.

Bouchard feels that his team will definitely come back and put it all together for their last week of the season. Monday, the boys will face Abington. Wednesday, Cohasset plays Norwell, and Thursday the Skippers travel to Sandwich to play under the lights at 7:30 p.m.



Boys' Tennis

The boys had an outstanding week, turning their 4 - 6 record around to 7 - 6 with three consecutive victories last week. Monday, the Skippers shut out Rockland for the second time, 5 - 0.

Rich Redick, the team's number one seeded player, beat his opponent in straight sets, 6 - 0, 6 - 0. Singles players Derick Lacks and Kurtis Erickson both won as well.

First doubles team, consisting of John Colocousis and Fred Willshire, picked up their second shut out of the season and played well.

Wednesday, Cohasset upset Scituate, 3 - 2. All three singles players, Rich Redick, Chris Ryan and Chris Neelon swept past their opponents. Coach Toni Jillson points out that her doubles teams did exceptionally well, considering that Scituate's doubles teams have advanced to the quarter finals of the state tournament.

Thursday, the boys defeated Hull, 4 - 1. Both Chris Ryan and Chris Neelon picked up their fifth consecutive wins. First doubles team John Colocousis and Fred Willshire had their second shut out of the week.

Next week, Jillson hopes to win all three matches against Abington on Monday, Norwell on Wednesday, and Sandwich on Thursday. If the boys are able to do this, they will qualify for the state tournament.

The South Sectional Eastern Mass Boys' Individual Invitational Tournament was held this past Sunday and the preceeding Saturday. Cohasset boys made a very good showing for themselves. Chris Neelon, after winning his first round by default, defeated Abington's first singles player, 7 - 6 (7 - 4), 7 - 5. Chris then lost in the third round to Scituate's first singles player, 5 - 7, 6 - 4, 4 - 6. Jillson was very proud of the way Chris played during the tournaments.

Rich Redick, after getting a bye in the first round, defeated two opponents. Rich then advanced to the quarter finals on Sunday, where he beat a boy from Falmouth, 7 - 5, 6 - 2. Rich got as far as the finals where he finally lost.

participate in the procession.

At this time, the Deer Hill School Band, and the other two bands will join in the parade. Marchers from the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and several other community organizations will participate from this location.

The parade will proceed from the Music Circus to the Central Cemetery, reaching that destination about 11 a.m. From there, the formation will walk down Main Street to the Common. A brief ceremony wil be held at the Common about 11:30 a.m.

The final ceremony of the day will take place at the Veteran's Memorial Park at the harbor. The brief service, led by Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, will begin at approximately noontime.

Guest speaker at this location will be Jane Elizabeth McCarthy, a nurse who served during the Vietnam War.

Several Cohasset schoolgirls will complete the traditional ceremony by throwing memorial bouquets into the harbor.

Since the Post was chartered in 1921, Memorial Day has been the focus of the organization's activities.

As Commander Spiers said, "This parade and the ceremonies are held for the town. That's why we want all veterans and servicemen, not just the members of the Post, to participate. This is their day, and we want them all to be a part of it."

There are currently 210 members of the George H. Mealy Post.

Fire Chief search group

Selectmen voted this week to appoint seven residents to the Fire Chief Search Committee. The board will decide on the official charge and responsibility of the group at their meeting next week.

The seven members, who will meet together for the first time, include Ralph Perroncello, Joseph Mercurio, Robert Donahue, Bradford Ketcham Jr., Stephen Bobo, and Joseph L. Moran. Bobo will serve as chairman protemp until the first meeting is called and a chairman is elected by the committee.

Highway dept. bids

Selectmen this week opened bids for items requested by the Highway Dept.

The first bid was for the purchase of a new truck, an item approved by the annual town meeting. The second bid was for a steel beam guardrail on Beach Street. This item was also approved by town meeting. Two bids were submitted for this purchase.

The final bid for the highway department was for a hydraulic spreader.

All bids were forwarded to Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield for his recommendation.

The Undiscovered Country

Despite its central location in Europe, Belgium remains a surprisingly undiscovered country. Many travelers simply pass through on their way to France, Germany or Holland. The English, however, have long known that Belgium has much to offer. Consider its romantic castles, superb restaurants, istoric country inns and art museums filled with masterpieces. Scenic variety is found in its rolling hills and in the rugged Ardennes, with its scented forests, and in its coastline with forty miles of fine beaches. No larger than Maryland, Belgium is easy to explore. In only a week, you can see the great cities of Bruges, Ghent, and Brussels. You can eat in one of the world's finest restaurants, stay in a country inn and get to know a part of the hidden Europe.

A world of fun and excitement await you at COLPITT'S TRAVEL CENTER. We are your headquarters for professional assistance with your travel plans. Achieving the most from your vacation holiday is our endeavor. We can make suggestions of places to see and highspots of interest that you may enjoy. ☐Get well wishes are in order for Bobbie Buckley. She had to undergo extensive back surgery last week and has been told she will have to remain in the hospital for six weeks. Knowing Bobbie, she'll never stay that long! She is a patient at the Mass. General and I'll bet that she'd love to receive get well cards from one and all.

☐The Cohasset Boosters held their annual Spring Banquet last weekend, and it was "sold out" as usual. It was the final feast for this sports year, but is not the end of their season. They still have lots of neat gifts on sale, so if you are looking for something for the graduate or a nice Cohasset item for yourself, give them a thought. At the banquet something new was added, an award given by the U.S. Marine Corps. The award goes to a junior boy and is called the Distinguished Athlete Award. This year it went to Bob Shultz, son of Linda and Larry Schultz. Congratulations are in order for Bobby — That's an honor!

☐The Cohasset Teachers Association sponsored the Mass. Association Retarded Citizens Bike-A-Thon last weekend, under the direction of Maria and Pat Plante. Through the efforts of Pat and Maria, $16,922 has been raised since they began the bike riding event in 1979. Cohasset teachers are located at various check points, and Cohassetites are the ones that go out to get pledges and ride their bikes for many miles to make all of the miles add up to many dollars. Every year there had been a huge jump in the total dollars received (earned). . .Will be sure to let you know when the latest amount is known.

☐Congratulations are in order for Dana and Kym Waitkus on the birth of their son on May 8 at the South Shore Hospital.

☐Bob Shultz, Ann Taylor, Cynthia Conklin and Todd Trautwein all spent a legislative day on the Hill recently, with Mary Jeannette Murray (our State Rep.) acting as their hostess. They all spent the day learning the government process, such as sitting in on committee hearings, learning how to investigate the checks and balances before bills become state laws, and sit in on the sessions in the Chambers to hear their legislative debate. Mary Jeannette has been doing this for our students since she was elected in 1977, hoping to interest them in political participation.

☐This weekend marks the "official" beginning of the summer season. The box office at the South Shore Music Circus will open on Saturday. Wonder if there will be any that spend the night in order to be first in line again this year. The season promises to be a hot one.

☐Any budding actors and actresses between the ages of 13 and 22, plan to sign up on June 3 at 7 p.m. for the Young People's Summer Theater. Sign-up will take place at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate. Call 871-4831 for more information.

☐Lindsey Berents, Cyndy Bell and Scott Dwyer all appeared in a spring musical at Noble and Greenough last weekend. The title was "Working" and the performance was said to be an outstanding one.

☐Congratulations to Julia A. Sechen, recipient of a Pilgrim Arena Scholarship Award of $1,000. Julia was one of 59 applicants from the South Shore area. The presentation of the checks and commemorative plaques were presented recently at a reception at the Pilgrim Arena.

☐Local artists certainly took advantage of the South Shore Art Center's vacation drop ins in February and April! One hundred ninety-five children worked on art projects on a daily basis during the vacation weeks. Gil Coyle for film and art, Syma for clay, Serena Brundige for painting and prints and Lisbeth Koopman Wyman for painting all made this possible and gave our children a really fine chance to explore art and its many different media.

☐Congratulations to Gary Carlson who made the Honor Roll at Thayer Academy for the second term. Gary is a member of the Senior Class.

☐That's the news for this week. Let's hear from you with your latest tidbit!

Observations

Perhaps some of you have noticed that the Mariner is continuing to grow. It was inevitable.

While we're happy that the Cohasset Mariner is thriving, we also want to maintain that local look. We want the vast majority of this paper to be by and about Cohasset people.

More than events and issues, what is most popular in our newspaper is the personal interview. Not necessarily with a politician, or a 'newsmaker.' Sometimes, it's more fun to read about your ordinary nextdoor neighbor.

Usually, that neighbor of yours is not so run-of-the-mill as we all thought.

We turn your attention to the the Cohasset Close Up feature on the first page of the second section of the Cohasset Mariner. This is the type of story we want to bring you as often as possible.,

It's interesting to note, that this week's Close Up interview wasn't something we dug up. Carol Barrett's daughter Christine called us and said, "I think my mother deserves some recognition."

We agreed, and the story was produced.

Let us know if there is someone who should be featured in this portion of the newspaper. We are always anxious to hear from our readership.

Prom time

If we could save one life, this small warning would be worth the reading.

To all the seniors preparing for next week's prom and for your future, have a wonderful time. But stay sensible.

You are all so young, so bright, so eager. But life can be pulled away from you. You can die at 18.

Please, don't follow the example we have mistakenly set for you. Do not drink and drive. It's not worth it.

If you have been drinking, call someone to drive you home. Whether it's a trusted neighbor, a friend, or a friend's older brother or sister. Call someone who cares, and they will take you home.

Parties are in full swing. Stay around to enjoy all of them.

New phone number

The Cohasset Mariner has a new telephone number. This is the number everyone should call for news information.

Questions and problems relating to advertising will still be handled through the 383-6731 number.

All news stories and information pertaining to the news portion of the paper will be handled at this number: 545-7060.

COHASSET — Senior Prom gala sets sail May 28 for dance cruise aboard the MV Freedom. A unique concept. Smooth sailing in every way is hoped for...a safe and happy voyage going and coming. Cohasset's former NFL All-Pro, Walt Sweeney's 'life-in-the-fast-lane' talk to grades 10-12 made a profound impression. A lasting one, is the objective

Urgent awakening of myself

This morning I awakened, bursting with spring renewal.

I had been dreaming . . . I think . . . my sense of urgency seemed to far outweigh my numbness. In my half-awake laziness, I struggled to find pen and paper.

Is this the real world . . . this planet inhabited by half-asleep, half-awake "blobs", my fellow citizens . . . and my self? Isn't it time we stood up to be heard? Isn't it time we made a difference - in our own reality?

Yes, there are truly many good, "solid" citizens, so many lovers of humanity, who are working intensely for the peace movement, for aid to the suffering, starving people of the world - and for justice for black Africans (The newspapers are filled with their heroic deeds, but they are in the minority).

The "masses" function in a blind stupor. They work in unsatisfying jobs, rush home to loveless marriages, (the divorce rate is over 50 percent), and they indulge spoiled, unfeeling children. These purveyors regularly view their television sets, not for enlightenment or knowledge, but as a means of escape. While drinking their Molson Golden's, Miller Lites, or whatever, and gorging themselves, they habitually entertain themselves with watching crimes of violence and sex. This becomes, every day, a vicious circle, "a circle of numbness."

Isn't it time to challenge ourselves, to choose to open our eyes, to be a part of a true democracy, to speak out?

I am not proud of an administration that supports dictatorships, i.e. Samoza, Baptista, or the white government of South Africa, one that trains Contra rebels to torture and mutliate innocent old people and children, and, an administration that ignores the "doom-machine", whose button might be pushed at any moment. Doesn't this administration, while espousing one thing, really do another?

How the useless, expensive MX program was pushed through, I'll never know. Isn't the Star Wars program still waiting, impatiently, to "spread its black wings?" And now, this latest embarrassment. Bitburg! How many more blunders in the name of peace?

I am proud of Massachusetts' persistent senators, who say we must deal with the underlying problems of poverty, justice, disease, and ignorance. Sincere dealing with sincere diplomacy, I believe, includes compromise and moderation in all facets. In order to fight Communism, we must desperately try to understand and communicate with (we must not always antagonize) our adversaries.

Recently, my husband and I spent an exciting, enlightening two days at the Graduate School Colloquium of Drew University in Madison, New Jersey. The topic of the lectures was "The Prophetic Mode and Challenge in Religion, Politics, and Society." These talks were intense stimulants. The speakers were eloquent, wise, empathetic writers and teachers who viewed the fate of the world creatively. Our doom-sayers who glorify in the Armageddon theory and our political leaders, could well learn from the ideas of these caring intellectuals.

Our time has come . . . our time, as individual citizens to be heard. And we do have a choice. We can co-exist in a world of differences (for differences are creative tools for growth for life in a "dead land"); and we can moderate and mediate and compromise forever. Or we can be stiff and rigid fearful arbitrators of our own narrow aims, thus advancing most certainly, our own doom.

It is dark and colorless here in my writing room. But if I leave its dull confines, if I move only a few feet into the bright openness of our livingroom, I gain a new perspective. Here the picture is different. An intense light permeates; the scene is all beautiful, magnificent . . . ocean, blue sky, Mallards, birds. Just now one tiny, bright, yellow bird landed on a branch of our tallest oak. That oak itself is fighting for all it's worth. For birth, for life, against a backgroundofalreadysplendid green-yellow giants.

My "numbness" needed this view, this beauty, this urgent awakening today.

I know that I do make a difference in this world. The choice is mine.

Letters

McNabb asks D.A.

(This is the letter sent by John McNabb, Jr. to District Attorney Delahunt in reference to selectmen's May 4 executive session. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Delahunt:

I am writing to you pursuant to the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, chapter 39, sections 23A and 23B, commonly known as the Open Meeting Law, regarding a meeting held in Executive Session by the Cohasset Board of Selectmen on Saturday, May 4; Monday, May 6; and the circumstances leading up to a vote of the Board on May 9.

Enclosed, for your information and review, is a copy of the minutes of the May 4 Executive Session, which was called for the purpose of "contract negotiations and litigation." The substance of the discussion at the meeting, as shown in the minutes,

Memories of a Vietnam veteran

By David S. Cutler

Ten years after the fall of Saigon, these things I remember.

. . . It was the summer of 1968, and I was in a Weymouth pizza shop ordering lunch. He stood next to me, this short, fat man with blinking eyes. He was friendly, and so we started to talk over the aroma of mozzarella. I was in uniform, having returned from an outpatient visit to Chelsea Naval Hospital, and by then I had a walking cast.

"How was it?" he asked.

I said something stupid about all in all preferring to be in Weymouth and he laughed a little. Then he began to study me and as he leaned in, pointing to my breast pocket, he asked . . .

"You want to join the Purple Heart Club?"

"The What?"

"The Purple Heart Club, the South Shore Purple Heart Club. We need some new members."

"Good God," I thought. "A bunch of old guys slobbering over their beer and yapping about wounds."

I moved toward the door, then bolted to the car. The last thing I wanted to talk about was wounds. For me, the war was over.

. . . I guess he was about as California as one could get. A tall, strapping blond who went to Berkeley, of all places. He thrived on living; and he was rich. I remember sitting by his parent's pool in Sacramento and ordering drinks from the live-in Japanese servants. Former Gov. Ronald Reagan had a house around the corner.

His name was Bob Wright and though we were not close friends, I liked him. When you're 25 years old, you don't often admire peers (admiration is for older people) but I remember admiring Bob Wright. I was sure he'd end up being president of something. He was funny — witty really — and not at all pretentious. And he had this gorgeous girl friend. She was a transplanted Texan who was addicted to Dr. Pepper; her father used to have it flown in by the case. I remember how she would dazzle in his company.

Wright was one of those guys who excelled at everything. He finished near the top at the Marine Corps Basic School, and he shot expert on the firing range. He was smart and strong and handsome. He was material for "The Best and the Brightest," yet he prompted no envy.

About half of us from the Basic School went to Vietnam after graduation . . . second lieutenants who knew nothing but what the books said. Lt. Bielen (I forget his first name) was shot the second day, just outside Dong Ha, and I think he was the first casualty from our class. Bob Wright survived the early months, so he picked up some "field smarts." Besides, I had him down as a survivor. He would return a decorated war hero and get on with the business of living.

It is one of the tragedies that he did not.

A friend wrote me about it. He said it happened in Hue during Tet when we were locked in that vicious house-to-house fighting.

"It was a mortar," the letter said. "He never knew what hit him."

All I could remember was that beautiful Dr. Pepper girl who was so much in love.

. . . Carlos Marcano, 19, was a different sort. He was a Puerto Rican from Spanish Harlem and in the beginning, he came across as dour and moody. "I'm just a Spic Sir," he would say in a self-pitying way. He was one of my squad leaders and he used to infuriate me with his sullen stares.

We had been together for two months, he with his mumbling and snarling and me with my yelling, when we finally made a pact to get along.

It was at Gio Lin on the DMZ and we were out on another platoon patrol.

Gio Lin was a lifeless place. Except for the noontime shelling, all we did was blow up booby traps and underground bunkers and, when on patrol, march to the edge of the rice paddy to stare at the giant North Vietnamese flag 4,000 meters away. That was my poker stage in Vietnam and I learned when it comes to cards, sergeants and radio men don't give a hoot for their superior officers.

Marcano was a tough, proud kid — I think he resented officers — but there was a great deal more behind the snarl and, sensing that, I started to work on him. I liked him. I admired his spirit and his worth and I think, finally, he began to understand that.

The last barrier came down on another of those boring patrols, when I called him over to talk about blowing up a bunker. I was on one knee reading a map and, as he knelt down to join me, I put my arm around his shoulder and went on about how we'd use some C-4 and how he was to position his squad.

He looked at me for a second or two and then the change began.

Carlos Marcano had a great sense of dignity about him and when he let go what emerged was a charming yet serious young man who could talk for hours. He turned out to be enormously ambitious and at night he would come by the C.P. (command post) and tell us about his mother and his sister and how he planned to go back to school when he returned to the "World." He enthralled us with tales of the "Streets" of Harlem and most every story ended with . . . "Well, you know how it is lieutenant."

I wept over Marcano twice. First at Khe Sahn. It was a horribly brutal place that welcomed us in the spring of 1968, just after the seige. It was at the edge of nowhere and it had the smell of death about it. There were rats and at night, the North Vietnamese would not let us sleep.

On our third day, I called the squad leaders together shortly before dark to give out the night's instructions. "Spotlight" was the password and Marcano — damn him — forgot it.

An hour later, with his squad in position, Marcano moved back up the line toward the C.P. Somehow he wandered out front — it was dark and he was unfamiliar with the territory — and it was then we heard the burp of an M-16.

"I got one, I got one," yelled a voice from the line. It was Marcano . . . shot through the heart.

In Washington, D.C. 14 years later I found his name on the black granite wall. I had my boys with me but they were too young to understand how grossly unfair it all was: how a street-smart kid from New York was bound to succeed and never had the chance.

Carlos Marcano was like a son I lost.

. . . Staff Sergeant William Price, a "lifer" from West Virginia who put lieutenants on a par with lance corporals. He called me a three-year wonder and we argued about who got the pears in the C-Rations.

"Stay for 20 years lieutenant," he used to say, "and see how you like it." We were tight for six months and for six months he ragged me. He was funny.

"You know lieutenant," he said, "when I get back and they ask me how it was, I'm going to say, 'Oh, I can't talk about it; I just can't,' and they'll say 'Boy he must have seen some &*(¢%$#'."

Sgt. Price was the only man I knew who machine-gunned a snake. We were on patrol near Cam Lo and came upon a creek. Price said he'd check out the other side and started across with his .45 raised high. He was about halfway there when a bamboo viper slithered toward his chest, encouraging the good sergeant to beat a hasty retreat.

After reaching safety at the water's edge, he emptied his .45 at the snake. Missed with six shots, he did. He ordered the point man to fire his M-16. Missed and the snake kept up his lazy swim. In desperation, Price summoned the machine gun, snatched it from the gunner's hand and blew the snake to bits.

From the command post a half mile away, the captain yelled into the radio . . .

"Whatta ya got Cutler?"

"A snake."

The radio went dead.

Two months later, as it turned out, Staff Sgt. Price would have a great deal to talk about. We were both shot up on a patrol outside Khe Sahn, though he was hurt far worse. Later they wheeled him in to see me aboard the USS Repose and though gaunt and thin, he still hadn't lost his humor.

"What do you say lieutenant, stay for 20?"

I saw him once more in Washington. He had a pass from Walter Reed Hospital and I was there visting my fiancee, Suzy, and her sister Deborah and we invited Sgt. Price to dinner.

"No war talk, though, okay?" said Deborah.

"Okay," I said, thinking, "don't bore people with the war."

The evening was a disaster. There were long silences punctuated by snippets of chatter about hospital food and West Virginia. He asked if I hunted, and I said no and he said oh. Finally I walked him to a taxi and said goodbye.

After seven months in the bush, we had nothing to say.

. . . It was in May of 1970. I had returned to the Patriot Ledger as a staff reporter and the day city editor decided I would be his "military" expert. So I did a lot of tedious military stories.

One Friday morning he approached my desk and asked me to cover an anti-war demonstration outside Harvard Stadium that night. It was my third or fourth demonstration. A week before I had been trapped on the State House lawn while 20,000 students demanded that Gov. Francis Sargent lower the flag to half mast. There was an unchecked fury in the air, and I couldn't disagree when the Governor complied.

On this Friday night, Boston Police estimated the crowd at more than 100,000. It was peaceful for a while, but later the rowdies started up in Harvard Square. A Boston Herald reporter was bloodied and I remember a Herald editor screaming at a police captain.

By midnight, the Square was empty except for the thud of boots from a tactical police squad as it marched down Boylston Street. There were fires in the streets and fear in the air. "It doesn't go away," I thought.

As the police formation marched past, a long haired kid — one of the few around by this time — screamed, "Off the pig." The cop barely missed a step. He lunged from the formation, whacked the kid unconscious with his stick and jumped back into line.

Later as I walked toward my car outside the square, a voice in the distance yelled out . . .

"No more war."

It seemed like a good idea.

McNabb asks DA to review minutes

was the position of Town Accountant and Executive Secretary and the appointment of a certain person to those positions, and combining those positions.

The Board met in open session on May 6. The minutes of that meeting do not show any discussion of this topic. In a May 9 letter from Selectman Chairman Frank England to Mr. Donald Andrew, also enclosed, Mr. England states that: "As you know from our previous discussions, the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset have voted unanimously to consolidate the offices of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant."

At a special, open, meeting of the Selectmen on May 9, they voted unanimously, with no discussion preceding the vote, to combine those two positions and to offer the positions to Mr. Andrew. The voting took no more than 5 minutes. The said letter, which was the offer to Mr. Andrew, was typed and ready for signature at the start of the meeting. Also enclosed are copies of newspaper reports of that meeting.

It appears to me that the Executive Session of the Selectmen held May 4 was held in violation of the Open Meeting Law, which does not recognize "contract negotiation" an authorized reason for Executive Session. As the minutes show, no matter regarding pending litigation was discussed.

Those are matters which are customarily, and properly, conducted in open session. The discussion of such matters in executive session is deterimental to the public interest, because open public discussion and the opportunity for a diversity of opinion prior to a decision being reached was denied to the citizens of Cohasset, who only heard of the decision after it was voted perfunctorily in open session on May 9. The action of the Selectmen to release the minutes of the May 4 meeting does not then remedy the situation.

Pursuant to your enforcement authority under MGL c. 39, s. 23B, I hereby request the following:

1) that you review the minutes of the May 4, 1985 Executive Session of the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset;

2) that you investigate the circumstances regarding the vote of the Board on May 9, and make a determination whether the vote indicated in the letter of the Board to Mr. Andrew was made in Executive Session on May 4, May 6, or any other occasion, since no such vote in open appears in any minutes of the Board prior to May 9;

3) that you make a ruling regarding whether the meeting on May 4, and any other Executive Session held on this matter on May 6 or any other occasion, was held in conformance with or in violation of M.G.L. c. 39, s. 23A, 23B; and

4) that you then take whatever action you deem appropriate, including requesting an order from the superior court or supreme judicial court requiring that the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset carry out the provisions of M.G.L. c. 39, s. 23A, 23B at all future meetings.

Thank you for your attention.

Cohasset school news

Soviet Union tour

Mary Babian, a guidance counselor at Cohasset High School, narrated slides she recently took on a two-week study tour of the Soviet Union. Speaking to Mr. Edward E. Sheehan's AP Modern European History students, Ms. Babian shared many of her observations of life in the U.S.S.R.

Ms. Babian remarked that "Russians and tourists stand in line for everything." She went on to note that "once you get to the end of these long lines, you can expect to be treated curtly by the salesperson or clerk or government official."

On a more positive note, she said that Leningrad was "a beautiful city, and it was exciting to tour this great city of canals." She said that there were 65 canals and 42 islands in this amazing metropolis.

"Their living standard is far below ours as a husband and wife can only make approximately $170 a month," she added. One thing that amazed her was the seriousness of most Russians. They don't smile very often — life for them is a very serious matter, she stated.

Ms. Babian spoke at length on the Russian education system. She called it a highly disciplined and organized system. Russian students are all expected to graduate and to conform to very tight rules. "A class record book is kept on every student and when he or she gets out of line the student's parents are immediately notified," she remarked.

The Cohasset juniors listened attentively to Ms. Babian's firsthand observations of life in the Soviet Union.

Court update on Rte 3 reststops

Recently the Mariner featured a news story about homosexual activity at Rte. 3 rest stops. Since then readers have inquired about the outcome of court action in cases where arrests in those rest areas have occurred as well as for further information.

Lt. Robert Comtois of the State Police headquarters in Middleboro is familiar with the arrests that took place at the Norwell Rte. 3 rest stop last summer.

He was one of the men who was assigned to investigate, based on recurring complaints from people who sought to use the rest stop and found what they viewed as too clear homosexual activity.

Lt. Comtois said the officers were sent in plain clothing to the area. They "were approached, physical contact was made. There were arrests for assault and battery and for lewd and lascivious behavior."

Comtois said the problem of homosexual activity in rest stops is not new, nor has it been abated by arrests. "This has been going on at least 20 years," he said. "And it isn't just Rte. 3. It's at rest stops throughout the state and the rest of the country for that matter. We haven't really cut down on it. It's still a serious problem."

State Trooper Paul Sullivan at the Norwell barracks said last summer eight men were arrested at the Norwell Rte. 3 rest area. Of those, he said, two were found guilty because of past arrests and the other six had either a "continued without a finding" disposition or a "continued without a change of plea," all with admission of guilt.

There were fines involved but no sentences.

Sullivan, who was the court officer in the cases, said several judges heard the eight independent cases which were conducted from late July through January.

He said Judge Alfred Tamkin and Judge Geraldine Lombardo usually sit in Hingham Court, where the cases were heard. Another Justice, Judge Paul Moriarty also heard one case.

Sullivan echoed the experience voiced by Comtois that rest areas have inspired complaints of visual sexual activity among men, particularly across the state. One such stop in Westwood off Rte. 128 closes at dark in order to restrain the problem.

The men also agreed that sentences meted out by the Hingham Court were in keeping with those dispensed on other lewd and lascivious charges, lodged in instances of exposed sexual behavior.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

Bankruptcy By Chapter

Under Chapter 13 of the National Bankruptcy Law, an individual can keep all or most of his assets by entering into a payment program. The individual agrees to pay, over a three to five year period, an amount equal to or greater than the amount that a bankruptcy proceeding would yield. To file bankruptcy under Chapter 13, an individual cannot owe more than $350,000 in secured debt and $100,000 in unsecured debt, or a total of more than $450,000. If more than $450,000 is owed, Chapter 11 is an available alternative. It is a federal remedy that protects the individual from creditors while a plan to pay them is worked out. An individualized plan, it can be a complex and time-consuming process.

The law is a complex matter. Protecting and understanding your rights often requires legal advice. Today many find it prudent to have a legal review before questions arise. For answers to your questions, a review of areas important to your lifestyle and legal points you should think about consulting with an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appointment.

Some helpful hints for a bountiful May garden

By M.S. Maire

Every May, when those first few really warm days come, countless people fall victim to Mayitis: that primeval urge to return to their roots. They want to go out and dig and rake and get real, true dirt under their fingernails. Their eyes take on a glazed brightness and all they can see is a jungle of lush garden right in their own backyards.

Mayitis comes to a head on Memorial Day when they go down to the local nursery, load up a little red wagon with plants, speed home and dig them in. They are truly fulfilled. Or, at least, some are. But there are others who get home with their treasures only to realize there just isn't anywhere to dig them in. The plants end up sitting on the porch being watered fitfully until they die, one by one, while their owners sink slowly into melancholia.

There is hope: this needless misery can be stamped out by what is called pot gardening; growing a garden in pots. A lot of people with no yard or not enough yard have tried pot gardening in one form or the other and found it was a great way to kill off plants. It is. But it is also a great way to have a lush garden. It's all a matter of starting off right, for once that's done, it's as easy to have a green thumb as a black one.

The basics of growing are that plants need sunlight, water and food. All of them. What usually spells disaster for a pot garden is lack of water. Sure, you swear you'll water it every day and you do for a week or so, but then you forget and, besides, it really doesn't look too dry. Well, deep down where it counts, it is. Goodbye garden, hello depression.

No more. Let's talk about a pot garden that will put a spring in the step and a song on the lips. First of all, the pot. The best is one of those white, five gallon plastic buckets that all sorts of things come in. You can usually pick these up for free from a restaurant, laundry, contractor, factory or a lot of other places. They don't do much for the gracious living decor but, wrapped in burlap or some other material, they aren't so bad looking either.

In the event that doesn't sound too convincing, you can buy wood planting tubs which are about the same size, or half whiskey barrels which are about double the size. But, if you use wood, you must be meticulous about watering well once a week.

The big advantage of the plastic buckets is that they hold moisture and that's critical. So critical that the first thing to do is punch a bunch of holes in the bottom so they won't hold all the moisture. You want a garden, not a mini swimming pool.

In the bottom of the bucket place a two-inch thick layer of crushed stone, broken dishes, those little plastic 'peanuts' that are used for packing fragile things or anything that won't stop excess water from draining out. Next, put in a two-inch layer of peat moss.

Then add dirt. If you are digging your own dirt, mix it with peat moss; one part dirt to two parts peat moss. If you are buying potting soil, mix it half and half with peat moss. Fill the bucket with dirt, watering it down as you go so it will settle. Stop filling when you have four inches of bucket left. Plant your plant; not in the middle, but about half way between the middle and the rim.

Take yesterday's newspaper. Tear it into strips and finish filling the bucket, again wetting it down to make it settle. Sort of keep a little hole around the plant, maybe three inches across. But you want to end up with a good solid four-inch thick layer of compacted, sopping wet newspaper. Given that wet newspaper isn't very attractive, either, cover it with a thin layer of dirt, peat, wood chips or whatever.

Next, take a one gallon plastic milk bottle. Low down on the side, punch a small hole with a needle, a small nail, an ice pick or whatever. Not a big hole. Fill the bottle with water and set it so the water will drip out of the hole down into the other hole you left around the plant. The hole in the milk bottle should be of a size that the milk bottle will empty itself in about two days. If it empties too quick, try another milk bottle. Too slowly, make a bigger hole. Remember that milk is good for you.

When you have the milk bottle all set, mix up a gallon of weak liquid fertilizer using one of the concentrated liquid fertilizers you can buy most anywhere. If the concentrated stuff says two spoonfuls per gallon, weaken it by using only one. Don't get the idea that more is better. It is this weak stuff you want slowly dripping from your milk bottle. Once a week or so, water with a hose until the bucket leaks and you are sure the layer of newspaper is saturated.

Set the bucket in the sunniest place possible. What you now have is a drip irrigation system, or if you must know, a modified hydroponic garden. Space age technology. Dazzling, isn't it?

Margaret Hardy ideas and suggestions which influenced her final gift-giving decision.

Member Conley responded, "Although Mrs. Hardy never had any children of her own, she had an interest and concern for the future of children and young adults of all ages. She was well educated, a world traveler, and an astute business person. She proved long before it was ever fashionable that a person could make accomplishments no matter what the job, whether they be male or female.

Conley and other committee members agreed that a sub-committee should be appointed to determine how the school might best recognize and make use of this most significant gift ever awarded.

This matter will be discussed at the next committee meeting June 3. Supt. Crowell expressed the Cohasset School Committee's wishes to publicly acknowledge and thank the Hardy Estate for their wonderful generosity.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Is this a subject you have thought about? Do you have an elderly relative whose behavior has become a problem, who has difficulty with memory, whose behavior has been erratic? It may not be easy to tell the difference between the way stress or depression affect an older person, and the ravages of a progessive disease like Alzheimer's. This is not simply due to "hardening of the arteries," it is not simply due to "age." We are learning a good deal about Alzheimer's Disease today, and one of the most important things we are learning is how important it is to tell this apart from other causes of memory loss or depression in the elderly!

At the Behavioral Medicine Institute, we believe that an entire team consisting of nuerologists, psychiatrists, psychologists, and often very refined modern laboratory tests, are necessary to help us unravel the puzzles of the mind. Let us help you to understand the troubles you might be having with memory or behavior, and if you have Alzheimer's Disease, let us help you to cope with it and try to reverse some of its problems.

Cohasset High School sports for the week

Boys' Track

The boys completed their season on Monday when they were defeated by Norwell. Considering Norwell's overwhelming strength, Coach John Anderson felt his team did very well to stay competitive.

Floyd Hardwick led his entire team with two firsts. Robbie Holland and Jeff Aaron each picked up a first place as well. Both John Rattenbury and Mike DeSantis had two seconds apiece.

Overall, Anderson was very pleased with his team this year and feels they had a successful season. According to Anderson,"We beat the teams we were supposed to beat and stayed competitive in each meet." Anderson feels the future looks promising for Cohasset if all goes well.

Saturday, the South Shore Principles Meet was held, in which Floyd Hardwick jumped his personal best in the long jump and won with a distance of 20 feet, 10 1/2 inches. Floyd went on to come in second in the 200M and combined with Jackie Cooper, Gary Parziale, and John Rattenbury to take a second in the relay. Mike DeSantis had a good game, placing sixth in the half mile.

Girls' Track

The girls had their last meet against Norwell Monday, which they lost. Caitlin had an outstanding meet, winning the 440 and breaking the high school record with a time of 61.9 seconds.

Sara Seavey and Jane DeLima each had a first and a second. Janet Bagley picked up a second against Norwell, as well as Soyna Butler. Coach Claire Brady also cited Erin Chase as having a very solid mile time.

Overall, Brady thought seniors Janet Bagley and Sara Seavey had big years and were tremendous leaders. Brady is optimistic for next year and feels that if all the members of her team come back, Cohasset will have a sucessful season.

In the South Shore Principles Meet on Saturday, Cohasset did well. Jane DeLima placed second in the high jump, while Caitlin Staunton came in sixth in the 440 and Soyna Butler came in sixth in the 100.

Girls' Softball

The girls started off their week Monday by defeating Middleboro 15 - 11. Cohasset was trailing 8 - 6 at the bottom of the fifth, but rallied in the sixth and seventh to come back and clinch the victory.

Carla Lucas led the Skippers both offensively and defensively with four hits. Jill Nedrow followed Carla in hitting with three. Pitcher Kerry O'Brien came in and picked up the win for Cohasset.

Wednesday, East Bridgewater beat Cohasset 6 -5. Acording to Coach Bill Fallon, the loss was caused by Cohasset's inability to hit and field bunts.

Carla Lucas had a good game on defense. Lisa Shumaker had one of Cohasset's two hits and drove in two runs.

Thursday, the girls came back from a 7 - 3 deficit in the fifth to win, 10 - 8. This was a "pivotal game" for the Skippers, for it kept their playoff hopes alive.

Janet DiGirolamo was Cohasset's leading hitter

Toastmasters Club

Edward Cahan, ATM, of the Quincy Toastmaster Club of Toastmasters of America, recently spoke to Cohasset Rotary Club.

Cahan stated that the number one fear of most people is public speaking and having been conquered, the individual feels a true sense of confidence and self-worth. He alluded to the fact that many corporations insist that their employees take courses in personality dynamics which substantially involve public speaking. The rewards to the corporation and the individual are an investment in the future.

The South Shore Toastmasters Club meets every Tuesday at 7:15 p.m. in the Scituate Library. Next Tuesday, May 21, the club will host an open house. New members, visitors and guests are welcome.

Vo-Tech beefs up sp. education

The School Committee gave the administration the green light for its efforts to implement a stepped-up special education program at the regional school. The committee voted to allocate $8,500 in surplus funds to be used, if necessary, toward a federal matching grant that would fund three new special education aide positions.

Calling the program "critical for the future of the school," Superintent Clifford Easton told the committee that during this year's debate over Vo-Tech's budget, he had gotten the sense from member towns that they wanted the regional high school to take on more of the special education burden. "By our own admission, this is a group we have not sufficiently addressed," said Easton. "We need to think creatively about how to use our resources to serve special education needs."

Last fall, Congress passed the Perkins bill, which provides matching funds to school districts serving special education students. Easton told the board that he anticipates admitting 120 special education students to the school next year, and under law, must provide a specified ratio of staff to special education students. The three new aides, in addition to two full-time teachers, would place the school in compliance with mandated requirements.

The total will be more than $60,000, split between the government and the school. To meet the school's $30,000 obligation, a separate $7,190 federal grant and $15,000 culled from the existing budget will go toward the program. The remaining $8,500, the administration hopes, will ultimately come from member towns sending special education students to Vo-Tech. Assistant Superintendent Kenneth Anderson said that the funds approved by the board would only be used if the shortfall was not compensated by the towns.

Anderson said that he had sent requests to all the towns, asking them to contribute the funds they receive from the grant to Vo-Tech. He explained that towns serving few students get very little money under the Perkins bill, and the amount of attendant paperwork is enormous. It may be more efficient, Anderson said, for the towns to pool the money at Vo-Tech. "We go hat in hand to the towns and ask them for the money they aren't using," said Anderson. "If we can take the students and educate them for less, the towns get some financial relief." So far, Scituate and Rockland have agreed to reroute some of their award to Vo-Tech.

Sitting at the meeting for the first time as a voting member, Hanover's Dennis Blackwell supported the measure, saying, "I think the towns will be receptive to us if we start addressing their needs." Blackwell served as Hanover's non-voting member during the long illness of Dr. Valentine Harrington, after whose recent death Blackwell was appointed by Hanover selectmen as full member.

Attending the meeting also was James McDermott of Hanson, who has been selected to replace Catherine Douglas as that town's representative.

Admissions Policy Revised

The annual review of Vo-Tech's admission's policy this year yielded one significant change. From now on, students must receive a minimum number of cumulative points on the six criteria for admissions. Previously, applicants were required to achieve a minimum rating in each category.

The criteria on which admission to Vo-Tech is based are reading, math, attendance, grades, rating by local school, and recommendations from local schools.

Guidance director Leonard Cody reported that after this year, the state Department of Education will no longer require the annual review. He said that therefore the policy approved this year will stand until or unless the regional School Committee wishes to change it.

Nineteen Teachers Reinstated

Nineteen of the 23 non-tenured Vo-Tech teachers given non-renewal notices prior to passage of next year's budget were reinstated by the School Committee on Superintendent Easton's recommendation. The remaining four, Easton said, are still under review and will receive final disposition of their status this week.

In other budget news, Easton reported dim prospects for receiving the $149,000 lost to Vo-Tech when Chapter 70 state educational aid funds were frozen at last year's levels. The money would have been due Vo-Tech to compensate for its growth.

In a last-ditch effort to save the fiscal 1986 budget from defeat on town meeting floors, the School Committee reduced the budget by $149,000, in the hopes of launching a successful battle to regain the funds.

Several members lobbied local legislators, but were told last week that the outlook was dim because other schools would be justified in asking for the funds if they were granted to Vo-Tech. Legislators said that would cost the state an additional $20 million.

Donations Accepted

Weymouth contractor Louis Pompeo has donated to Vo-Tech a 1977 Harvester International with a snow plow to aid the school in the wake of a fire which destroyed much of its maintenance equipment.

Hyannis Resort Hotel has donated three ice machines to the school.

The New England Chapter of the Packaging Institute USA has established an annual award of a tool chest to a deserving Vo-Tech graduating senior associated with the packaging program.

The award will be made in the name of George Devlin, an institute member who has been a "key mover" in the development of Vo-Tech's packaging program.

"Doran & Mason gave us $5.00 just to review our homeowner's policy with them," reported Linda Bertino of Hanson.

"We found we could increase the insurance and broaden the coverage on our house, get replacement cost coverage for contents — and save money, too," the Bertinos said.

Doran & Mason took time to understand Linda and Lance Bertino's needs and tailored a new homeowner's policy to meet them. There are no shortcomings to surprise them later.

"We bought exactly the coverages we wanted, we're saving a lot and we got $5.00 for doing it. How can you beat that?" Linda asked.

Doran & Mason recently checked out insurance policies for 100 homeowners. 64 discovered they didn't have the coverage they had thought they had. In 93 comparisons, Doran & Mason produced savings averaging $61.00 per year.

If you could use a crisp, new $5.00 bill, fill out our request form. It'll be worth at least five dollars to you — maybe ten. If your present coverage fully satisfies your objectives and Doran & Mason can't save you money on that coverage, we'll give you a crisp, new $10.00 bill.

But the best feature could be your getting the homeowner's coverage you want and a chance to save money on that.

You can't lose! You can only win! Send us your request now!

YES! I'd like to receive a crisp, new $5.00 bill and find out if my homeowner's insurance will do everything I think it will. I understand that it's Doran & Mason's way of thanking me for allowing them to compare my policy with policies offered by companies they represent and that I will not be further obligated in any way. I also understand that I may qualify to receive a $10.00 bill as described above, and that the comparison requires at least fifteen minutes, at my house or a mutually convenient location.

Special tour of museums

This Friday at 11 a.m. the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Commission will sponsor a special spring tour of the Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum.

Nurse Mary Anne Hansen measures the blood-sugar level of Nancy Snowdale during last week's Health Fair. (Carol McCann photo)

The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. A donation of $1 per person will be accepted at the door.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of a Cohasset seafarer and then remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when it was purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw.

In 1936, McGaw gave the house to the Historical Society in memory of his wife, Priscilla Lothrop Collier, and it became Cohasset's first historical museum. Today, the Wilson House contains a collection of household artifacts from early Cohasset homes, including children's toys, furniture, kitchenware, and other furnishings. Artworks of local historical significance grace the walls of the house.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 18th century, origninally was the ship chandlery for the Bates family schooner fishing fleet. One of the few buildings remaining from Cohasset's seafaring and fishing industry, it was given to the Historical Society in 1955 by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and moved to its present site from the Cove.

The Maritime Museum contains numerous coliections relating to the "Age of Sail" of a New England fishing village, as well as a general collection of historical artifacts from old Cohasset. Ship models, carvings, relics from shipwrecks, 19th century fishing gear, lifesaving memorabilia, old tools, stone artifacts of the Quonahasset Indians and numerous other items of historical interest can be seen at the Society's Maritime Museum.

Please call the Recreation Office to register for this special guided tour, 383-6791.

School Committee briefs . . .

Heritage Days Festival a success

Participants of the Music Dept. received the most awards ever through participation in the competition at the Heritage Days Festival. The jazz band received a third place award and two second place awards, a participation award went to the chorus, and the wind ensemble was presented with a participation award.

Block grant approved

The fiscal year block grant of $4,534 was approved by school committee members Monday night and allocated to the following proficts in the indicated amounts: arts programs, $1,500; M.O.I.S, $1,000; library computer, $1,000; and software, elementary education, $1,034.

Texas Instruments computer recieved

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown and family presented Cohasset High School with a Texas Instruments computer and $100 as a farewell gift which was accepted with thanks by school committee members on behalf of Cohasset School Systems. The Brown family will be moving to San Fransisco in July.

Resignation

School committee members accepted the resignation of Doreen Trahon, Osgood teacher, with deep regrets. She plans to leave the school system to be a full-time mother.

Bay State Games Tryout Date

Tryouts for the Coastal Men's Open soccer team will be held at the Duxbury Training Field at 10 a.m. May 26.

All athletes who are interested in trying out for the team can register at the tryout site. A $5 entry fee will cover the registration cost and provide each athlete with a Bay State Games Tshirt. Chosen Finalists will be awarded a uniform and warm-up jacket and go on to play at the Finals in Boston.

Coach Jim Tonrey will conduct the tryouts. For more information, athletes can reach Torey at (617) 263-0140.

The finals for the Bay State Games will be held throughout Greater Boston, July 11-14.

To find out more about the Games, call (617) 727-3227.

Cohasset sports for the week . . .

with three, followed by Debbie Hartley, who had two. Janet DiGirolamo, Kerry O'Brien, and Carla Lucas all turned in good efforts defensively as well.

The girls only need one more win to clinch a spot in the state tournament. The Skippers will travel to Norwell on Wednesday and Sandwich on Thursday. Cohasset has beaten both of these teams before and will hopefully repeat these victories once again.

Girls' Tennis

Monday, the girls clobbered Middleboro, 5 - 0. All of the girls won decisively and played very well.

Wednesday, Cohasset shut out East Bridgewater, 5 - 0. All the team members had excellent matches, especially doubles team Jessica Hamilton and Jennifer Chapman, who defeated their opponents, 6 - 0, 6 - 0.

Thursday, the Skippers beat Hanover in an exciting match, 3 - 2. With this victory, the girls put themselves in a three-way tie for first with Duxbury and Scituate.

Kristen O'Brien was the deciding factor in this match and stayed out on the court for three hours until she beat her opponent, 3 - 6, 6 - 2, 7 - 5.

Kerry Kirkendall and doubles team Carolyn O'Brien and Megan Kelley won as well.

If Cohasset can keep their winning streak going this week, they will remain tri-champions in the South Shore League. The girls face Abington on Monday, Norwell on Wednesday, and Sandwich on Thursday.

Coach Sue Dalrymple is confident that her team will come out on top in all three contests.

Golf

The golf team lost to Duxbury on Monday, 8 - 1. Tuesday, the boys were beaten by Sandwich, 8 1/2 - 1/2. Tuesday, the boys were beaten by Sandwich, 8 1/2 - 1/2. Thursday, Cohasset defeated Abington, 8 1/2 - 1/2.

Overall, the Skippers are 7 - 5 and hope to qualify for the state tournament this week as they take on Hanover and Scituate.

Cohasset scout fundraising drive set

For Cohasset Girl Scout and adult volunteers, Girl Scout camps and Scout Houses provide a home-base for outdoor education and community service activities. Troop meetings, adult training courses and day, weekend and resident camping are also conducted from these sites. They are necessary to maintain the high quality of the Girl Scout program.

To insure safe and well-maintained conditions at camps and Scout Houses, Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council is conducting a $2.5 million Capital Campaign to fund restorations and renovations. To date, Girl Scout volunteers have raised more than $1.7 million from corporations, foundations, small businesses, Girl Scout families and friends in the Council's jurisdiction.

Jeffe Steele, Chair for the Cohasset Community Division expressed the importance of the Campaign goal for local girls. "By raising funds to renovate camps and Scout Houses, we will improve facilities for Girl Scouts today and in years to come.

Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council is the largest council in New England and the sixth largest council in the nation.

Cohasset recreation schedule

Golf Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner, Intermediate, and Advanced Golf Lessons which are scheduled to begin Monday, June 10, 1985.

Tony Hurst, Assistant Golf Pro at the Cohasset Golf Club will be instructing all classes. Beginner's will meet at 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Intermediates will meet from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., on the back lawn of the Cohasset Town Hall. Advanced lessons will be offered on Wednesday Evenings at 6:30 p.m. starting Wednesday, June 12.

All classes are $15 per person for the 6, one hour sessions, which will meet for one hour each week for six weeks. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Participants should bring a 5 and 6 iron to the first session. Classes will be limited in size, and non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Classes are designed for all ages.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes to be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held on Cohasset Common, and will begin Wednesday and Thursday, June 12, and 13. Advanced training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Beginnner, 6:30 p.m., Thursdays, Intermediate 7:30 p.m., Thursdays.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice, pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered: proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, sit, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Dept. Beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed! It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions. For all classes: The fee is $15 per dog for eight weeks, one hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of 3 months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes will be limited in size.

Commission Officers

At their May 14, 1985 meeting, the Cohasset Rcreation Commission elected the following members to offices for the 1985-1986 year: Richard P. Barrow, Chairman; Gerard A. Buckley, Vice-Chairman; Mary K. Muncey, Secretary.

Summer Programs

The Summer 1985, Recreation Department Program Flier will be available at the Town Hall during the first week in June. Copies will be sent home via students in the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. Summer program registrations will be held from Monday, June 17, thru Thursday, June 20.

A day at the park with Stawberry Parfait

The very picture of concentration is Torin Sweeney, as he tries to slug one out of the park for the Parfaits.

By Melissa Barcomb

Despite Sunday's inclement weather conditions, the Strawberry Parfait softball team played aggressively, winning one game and losing the other of a doubleheader played against Marshfield Sunoco.

After losing the first game, 8-7, the Parfait came back with a 7-4 win in the second game bringing their record to four and four.

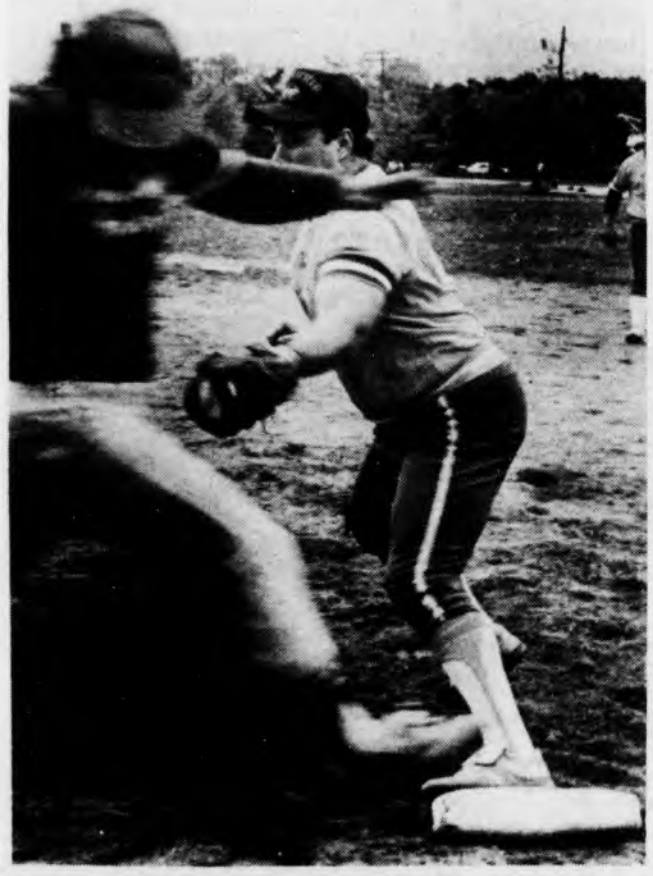
During the first inning Donny Cahil hit a triple with the bases loaded. Joe Dooley began the fourth inning with a double. The score remained tied, 6-6, up until the end of the seventh inning.

Going into extra innings, Joe Pomarico hit a homerun over the fence bringing the score to 7-6 with a Parfait lead.

Even with David Patrolia's strong pitching, Marshfield managed to hit a double in the eighth inning, bringing in two runs which led to an eventual 8-7 win.

Game two began with thunder, lightning and a downpour of cold rain.

The dedicated ballplayers appeared oblivious to the weather and continued to play.



In the seventh inning the bases were loaded with Joe Dooley on first, Mark Kelly on second and Donny Cahil on third. Kevin Dooley hit a triple bringing in three runs.

The game ended with a score of 7-4, Strawberry Parfait.

Oscar Acosta, a new player, said he was very excited to be playing for the Strawberry Parfait and is looking forward to a good season.

David Rourke kneels in prayer that he's safe at third. His Marshfield opponent awaits the fateful decision.

This Parfait player literally jumps to first in Sunday's game against Marshfield Sunoco.

Shannon McGinn is just about the biggest fan her daddy, Marty, could ever hope for. Despite the rain, she had a good time (in the mud).

A pensive parfait team watches Torin Sweeney struggle at the plate against a tough Marshfield hurler.

Cohasset Rotary President Dr. John Burns presented several scholarships to CHS graduating seniors. Among the recipients honored Monday night were: (l to r) Michael DeSantis, William Langmaid, and Gregory Igo.

The Rotary Club also presented scholarships to the female portion of the 1985 graduating class. Here, Dr. John burns makes the award presentation to (l to r) Karin Isele, Tracy Fitzpatrick and Amy Duncombe.

Rotary Club scholarships

At a special awards dinner at Rotary Hall Monday evening, the Rotary Club of Cohasset presented $12,000 in scholarships to six members of the Class of 1985, Cohasset High School.

Scholarship winners were Michael DeSantis, Amy Duncombe, Gregory Igo, Karlin Isele, Tracy Fitzpatrick, and William Langmaid.

The Rotary scholarship fund began in 1947 and since its inception has distributed in excess of $125,000 to more than 200 Cohasset students.

Funding for the program comes from proceeds of the annual Rotary Club phone directory, now in its 22nd year of publication, and from the Cohasset Road Race By The Sea held annually in the Spring.

Science center honors volunteers; new programs

Thirty volunteers gathered for the Annual Volunteer Luncheon at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell on May 9, to be honored for their dedication and hard work.

Certificates of appreciation and brass plaques were given to each one. Over 10,000 hours have been contributed to the Science Center by these loyal people during the 1984-85 vear.

Attending the luncheon were: from Norwell, Rosemary Cunningham, Carol Bergeson, Kay Fuller, Florence Hudspeth, Helen Lincoln, James Brown, Caroline Brown and Winnie Lou Rounds; from Hanover, Eleanor Barker, Lynne Moores and Valerie Whiting; from Rockland, Lavalie Hoss and Joan Kenworthy; from Scituate, Eileen O'Brien, Phyllis Robinson, Betty Smith, Mary Ellen Tinch and Betty Whitaker; from Marshfield, Doris Holmes, Mary McVey and Mary Plemmons; from Cohasset, Marlene Winn; from Whitman, Ruth Irwin; from Hingham, Dorothy Marshall and Virginia Bright; from South Weymouth, Marguerite Stowers; from Weymouth, Sandra Lovelace and Walter MacLean.

Kids Festival

It's coming again—the Big Kids Festival at the South Shore Natural Science Center—Save the Day, June 22, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Come see the hot air balloon, break dancers and an Indian settlement. There will be live animals from Trailside, a one-man circus and dogs from the Canine Academy. Fun tables, competitive games and games of skill and a moon walk will be on the schedule. For the first time, the pocket lady will be there.

Chairpersons for this exciting day are: from Norwell, Charles Morgan, grounds, Bud Gaudette, parking, Kay and Peirce Fuller, gate, Rosemary Cunningham, raffle, Deb Byrne, fun tables, Judy Chase, rides: from Hanover, Lynne Moores, art work and signs; from Scituate, Eileen O'Brien, games and Betty Whitaker, raffle; from Duxbury, Gail Clougherty, food.

Around the World

Travel by armchair to Egypt, Saudi Arabia, India and Syria on Friday, May 31 from 1 to 3 p.m. Deb Byrne from Norwell will show slides and discuss this exotic part of the world. 'Round the World' desserts will be served including baklava and kanafa. Fee: $3.50 member; $4.50 non-members. Pre-registration requested. Call 659-2559.

Quilting Clinic

Enjoy a morning of quilting and conversation with artisan Anne Walker, on Saturday June 1 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Bring your current project, ideas, problems and questions. Leave with some new ideas, some questions answered and, hopefully some problems solved. Books, supplies, equipment and quilted items will be on display. Good conversation and good instruction. Fee: $5 members; $6 non-members. Pre-registration requested. Call 659-2559.

Togetherness

Kids have just plain fun plus they learn to understand and appreciate the need for trust, cooperation and group function, on Saturday, June 1 from 1 to 3 p.m. Join dynamic Paula Donahue to try out a Caterpillar Roll, play Skin the Snake, Rope Circle and other amusing games. Fee: $3.50 member, $4.50 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. Call 659-2559.

Nature gift shop sale

From 5 cents to $5, there are bargains galore to be found at the South Shore Natural Science Gift Shop. Come and visit the Science Center on Saturday, June 1 and find a bargain, take part in a program, walk the trails—take time to enjoy the world around you. The Center is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The South Shore Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell just off route 123 and is open seven days a week.

Cohasset School briefs

Second grade artwork

A very imaginative selection of art from Ms. Jean O'Malley's first and second grade art classes at Osgood School has been hung in the children's room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Imaginary creatures in other world settings of outer-space and under-sea are sometimes humanoid and sometimes plant like. All these creatures are brightly colored and surprisingly friendly.

Burlap wall hangings made by first graders have been grouped in an interesting display reminiscent of a patchwork quilt. These fabric collages depict trees, birds, and flowers and all have the color and spirit of spring.

This show was arranged by Regina Schultz, as children's art chairman for the Friends of the Library.

Poster contest winners

The electric utilities of Mass. sponsored a statewide poster contest using the theme "Energy Visions for Tomorrow's World." The purpose was to encourage students to conserve energy and become aware of new and alternative technologies that will provide energy services for the future.

Cohasset's grades 2, 3 and 4 participated in the area contest sponsored by the Eastern Edison Co. in Brockton, which included 20 towns and two cities.

Michael Russell, 4th grade student at Deer Hill School, won first prize in the 4th to 6th grade category and Courtney Schultz, 3rd grade student at Joseph Osgood School, won honorable mention in the kindergarten to 3rd grade category.

They were honored at a reception held at the Brockton Art Museum on March 22. In addition, Ms. Ruth Stetson, educational services area coordinator for Eastern Edison Co., awarded certificates to the finalists at assemblies held at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools.

The finalists' posters were exhibited at both schools the following week, when a grade level poster contest was also held. The winners, as judged by a panel of PSO members, are as follows:

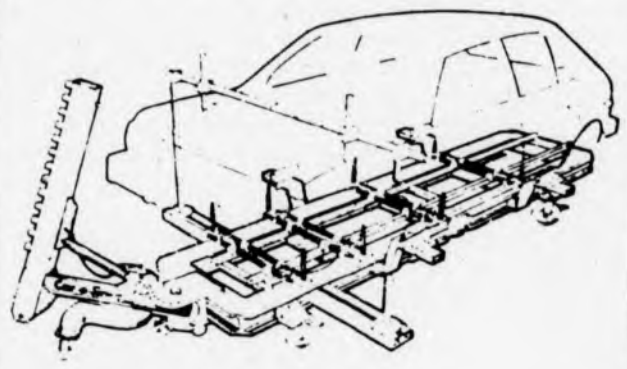
Grade 2: first, Jeremiah Stevenson; second, Amy Silvia; third, Jonathan Hislop; and honorable mention, Andrew Fitzsimmons and Nicole Ford.

Grade 3: first, Marisol Perry; second, Lindsey Tibbetts; third, Christa Ansbergs; and honorable mention, Anne Lindgren and Tyler Studds.

Grade 4: first, Raymond Jones; second, Alix Knox; third, Kate Barrett; and honorable mention, Colby Lawrence, Jessica Pyfrom and John Kinchla.

The contest was part of an art learning and activity unit involving concepts of composition, lettering, and poster art. Many of the posters are on display at Cohasset Central Market and the Log and Line.

School news briefs



• Ride-A-Bike participants - after you have collected your pledges, please return them to your school. Thanks for a great effort!

• Speaking of pledges, approximately 120 families have returned their PSO Phone-A-Thon pledges. Of the more than $5,500 pledges, $2,000 has been received. The PSO would like to thank all those who have responded so promptly and urge others to send in their tax-deductible contributions.

• Don't forget tonight's annual meeting of the Parent School Organization at the high school at 7:30 p.m. The brief business meeting will start, with the featured program to follow at 8 p.m. All parents and interested persons are cordially invited to see our children - every one a star - in action, as well as some lovely shots of scenic Cohasset, in a fast-paced, fun-filled video. Meet the new board and share some popcorn with a friend.

King Collision Center, Inc. asks
DO YOU HAVE A UNIBODY?

Knowing if you do, can be critical when your car needs collision repair. 90% of all cars sold are now built with what the manfacturers call "unibody" construction. These cars are built to exact specifications. Restoring the structural integrity, performance, safety and value your unibody must be done precisely to manufacturers data. At King Collision Center, Route 139, Pembroke, we do just that and like all our work, we guarantee it in writing.

Toastmasters meeting

Edward Cahan, ATM, of the Quincy Toastmaster Club of Toastmasters of America, recently spoke to the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Cahan said the number one fear of most people is public speaking and having been conquered, the individual feels a true sense of confidence and self-worth.

He added many corporations insist that their employees take courses in personality dynamics which substantially involve public speaking.

The rewards to the corporation and the individual are an investment in the future.

Toastmasters offers its members a forum, an audience, the encouragement to overcome the fear of speaking in public, and feedback on how to improve communication skills.

The South Shore Toastmaster club meets every Tuesday at 7:15 p.m. in the Scituate Library.

Tuesday, May 21, the Club will host an open house. New members, visitors and guests are welcome. For more information, call Ron Goodwin at 383-6355.

Teens exploring careers

The Social Service League's career exploration program, in its third summer of providing students with a two week "job" in the fields of their choice and interest followed by evaluation of the experience by both the intern and his or her "employer," is in the process of interviewing and placing current tenth and eleventh graders interested in participating.

Last summer, fifteen students participated in TEC. Those employers who offered intern positions were the following: Carolyn Gray - interior design; Dr. Edward Woods and Dr. Norman Budde - dentistry; Hugo's, Mr. Eisenberg - restaurant management; Brockton Hospital, Philip Arena, M.D. - radiology; Boston City Hospital, Michael Bliss, M.D. - gastroenterology; Bingham, Dana and Gould, Richard Leggat - law; David Maltz, M.D. - nursing; Braintree Mini School, Ann Fletcher - special needs children; American Cablesystems, John Ronan - cable TV; Inconix, Robert Sturdy - engineering; Hingham Animal Hospital, Dr. Pratt - veterinary medicine; Tower School Day Camp, Jane Gould - teaching; and the Cohasset Mariner, Mike Berger - newspaper production. The response to the program was extremely enthusiastic among both the employers and the interns.

Last week at the high school, interns from the TEC '84 program described their experiences to those students eligible to participate this year.

Application forms were distributed in homerooms to those wishing to be interviewed and placed. Forms are also available at the Social Service League Office at 16 Highland Ave. (383-0771) from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

Please Complete the Form Below and Return to the Social Service League, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025. Thank You.

Eyeglasses needed

New Eyes for the Needy, a non-profit, non-sectarian organization has been collecting old and used eyeglasses since 1922. These glasses are recycled and given away to those less fortunate individuals who are financially unable to purchase their own.

New Eyes for the Needy is a volunteer organization and has been providing this needed service for over 50 years. It is the most admirable and well known society of its kind; and is respected throughout the world.

More than two million people have been helped in all fifty states. In addition, medical missions in Central America and Africa have been furnished with glasses to distributre to their impoverished people.

Colpitts Travel is involved in a humanitarian effort assist New Eyes for the Needy. Resident support is requested and it is suggested to search your house an office for any old, used glasses which you have outgrown. Please bring them to our Colpitts' offices, located at 3 Brook Street, Scituate Harbor or One Stagecoach Way, Cohasset Village.
